Getting shipshape

. . . on Grand Prix

That controversial 'corporation' envisaged for funding the Long Beach Grand Prix has been somewhat clarified. It appears City Manager John Dever wants an all-in-one promotional agency for the Grand Prix, the Queen Mary and all. Using mainly tidelands revenues. Page A-5.

Corporation chief

. . .signs with X

A 70-year-old black who can't sign his own name is made president of a corporation. But he gets only his $2.35 an hour for his regular job as a janitor. And the white guys who thought up the idea reap vast profits — from the Small Business Administration's desire to pour money into minority enterprises. Page A-6.

Booze epidemic

. . .among teen-agers

Why did Connie, once an honor student, start staying out all night, letting her grades plummet, and getting into auto accidents? She's a victim of an epidemic of alcoholism among teen-agers and pre-teens that authorities say is spreading alarmingly across the nation. Page A-7.

Lost weekend

. . .unforgettable

Bernie Doctor wanted a Memorial Day weekend to remember. So he took his wife, Rose, and their aunt, Tess, for a night out on the town — at the Beverly Hills Supper Club in Southgate, Ky. Four hours after their arrival, the nightclub was engulfed in flames. Doctor and the two women escaped, but 161 people died. A weekend to remember, it was. Page A-8.

Lean election

. . .no 'fat cats'

Last year's presidential elections cost $114 million, mainly from Uncle Sam. The "fat cats" of previous elections were pretty much out of it. Page A-10.

Quiet killer

. . .disrupts a town

Quiet, tree-shaded Birmingham, Mich., used to be a nice place to raise kids. Then came a psychopathic killer of children — not a weirdo but, worse, somebody's neighbor. The murders have disrupted a way of life, robbed kids of their innocence, and destroyed a suburb's sense of well-being. Page A-12.

Getting home

. . .is for birds

Blur their vision, eliminate landmarks, isolate them, play tricks with time, light and sound. Scientists have done all these things and more— but they still don't know how birds find their way in the world. Page A-18.

DEMONSTRATORS on Puerto Rican Day in Chicago Saturday overturn unmarked police car as truck burns in background after massive disturbances erupted in West Side park. —AP Wirephoto

2 killed in Chicago park riot

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Two persons were shot to death and at least 49 injured Saturday as a disturbance that included looting and arson erupted in a West Side park after a Puerto Rican Day demonstration.

The problems began at Humbolt Park, where authorities said at least 23 officers and 26 civilians were injured as police sealed off the park. Police command headquarters said nine persons, including the two dead, were shot. Others were injured by thrown rocks and bottles.

Later, looting was reported in an area just west of the park, which is in an area populated heavily by Hispanics, and a three-story discount store was set on fire.

Authorities couldn't send firemen to the discount store because it was too dangerous. The flames were raging out of control and spreading to other buildings.

A police helicopter reported a scene of burning and overturned cars and throngs of milling demonstrators.

Police said the disturbance started when a man identified as Julio Osorio, 26, shot at two policemen. The bullets missed the officers but hit Rafael Cruz, 25. The two officers then shot and killed Osorio.

Both Osorio and Cruz were dead on arrival at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The original fight may have been gang-related. But within minutes, hundreds of onlookers were fighting among themselves and with police.

Many of the demonstrators were supporters of Puerto Rican independence from the United States.

About 3,000 persons gathered on the western edge of the park immediately after the shootings, authorities said.

Groups of Puerto Ricans, mostly youths, were throwing rocks and bricks and setting cars on fire.

All available police were called to the scene, including off-duty officers.

Clad in riot gear, scores of officers gathered in the park. About 200, including eight mounted on horses, attempted to clear the two blocks where the disturbance was centered. But demonstrators returned to the area as soon as the outnumbered officers withdrew.

The disturbance erupted several hours after a bomb exploded inside the Cook County Building near the office of acting Chicago Mayor Michael A. Bilandic. Puerto Rican nationalists claimed responsibility for the bombing. Bilandic was not in the office at the time but was viewing the Puerto Rican Day parade

Top Amin aide defects

Confirms 100,000 slain

By Donald M. McNicoll
Associated Press

LONDON — Henry Kyemba, Uganda's minister of health and a close friend of President Idi Amin for 20 years, has defected and has asked to remain in Britain, a Home Office spokesman said Saturday night.

The disclosure followed publication by the London Sunday Times of articles in which Kyemba is quoted as saying he would not dispute estimates that more than 100,000 persons had been slain in Uganda since Amin came to power in a coup in 1971.

Among those Kyemba is quoted as identifying as murder victims were Dora Bloch, the Israeli-British grandmother who disappeared in Uganda after the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport last July, and Ugandan Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum. Amin announced that Luwum was killed in an automobile crash with two cabinet ministers last February while attempting to escape arrest.

"Mrs. Bloch had been murdered to satisfy the president's lust for vengeance," Kyemba is quoted by the Sunday Times as saying.

As for Archbishop Luwum and the two cabinet members, Kyemba is quoted by writer Russell Miller as saying: "All three were shot at close range."

In a first person account as told to Miller, Kyemba discusses reports of massacres in Uganda, with estimates of the numbers killed ranging over the years from various sources from 50,000 to 300,000.

"I would not even attempt to dispute the figures in the recent report by the International Commission of Jurists which indicated that more than 100,000 people have been murdered in Uganda since Gen. Amin came to power in 1971," Kyemba said.

"It is probably correct, although of course no one knows what the exact figure is, and it is very difficult even to estimate it. Even Amin does not know how many people he has ordered to be executed."

He described conditions in Uganda as "very grave," adding:

"If I can help bring Amin's attrocities to an end sooner by telling the world what is happening in Uganda, then hundreds of lives will be saved, because people are being murdered there every day. The country is littered with bodies."

After the Home Office disclosure that Kyemba had defected, a spokesman for the British Foreign Office said, "We know he is here, and we will be interested in anything he says that throws light on events in Uganda." Britain broke relations with Uganda after the disappearance of Mrs. Bloch. The British have let it be known they do not want Amin to come to Britain as Uganda's representative to the Commonwealth Conference in London next week.

The Sunday Times said Kyemba had headed the Ugandan delegation to the World Health Organization conference in Geneva and defected from there.

"I knew it was only a question of time before I was due to be killed," the newspaper quoted the 37-year-old official as saying. "I was determined to escape before it was too late, and I wanted to ensure that what I knew about what is happening in Uganda would not die with me."

The Sunday Times devoted half of Page 1 to the story, under the heading: "Amin's Murders: Minister Defects With Full Story — World Exclusive, by Russell Miller."

Inside, it devoted 1½ pages to a first person account, "By Henry Kyemba as told to Russell Miller," under the headline, "The Killing of Dora Bloch" across seven columns.

Chief Wishon speaks out on retirement

By Robert Gore
Staff Writer

Long Beach Deputy Chief of Police Maurice Z. Wishon, a 37-year veteran who began his career walking a beat and spent his last nine years modernizing the patrol force, on Tuesday announced his retirement.

In an interview last week he was candid in his views about local law enforcement and city government.

"The guys will never know how good a chief they're losing," said one associate. "Wishy stood up in the toe-to-toe infighting and didn't quit unless he was ordered."

Q. There has been much discussion about your retirement since it was announced recently — was it because, as you said, you sold your condominium sooner than you'd expected?

'Fit laws to needs' —Nixon

Issues defense of his illegal acts

By Lyle Denniston
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Richard M. Nixon, defining anew his view of power, insists that presidents must be able to "adapt the law" so that it fits their idea of the nation's needs in times of stress.

When he sees an "emergency," a president may not be bound by "the strict letter of the law," Nixon says in a lengthy defense of his much-criticized view of White House authority.

His new statement, submitted to The Star Saturday, goes considerably beyond the remarks he made in the third television interview with David Frost last month.

BASICALLY, he contends that presidents have about the same authority as judges to interpret the laws.

"Every day," he writes, "courts are required to interpret the written law in light of experience. Presidents have a comparable responsibility."

His statement speaks of laws which seem, to a president, to be out of date because they were "written in other times and for other circumstances."

But nowhere does he suggest that the remedy for out-dated law is amendment or new legislation by Congress. Rather, his thesis is that it is within a president's discretion to find flexibility in the law that will permit him to protect the nation.

Conceding that a president "is not an autocrat," "does not rule by fiat," and does not have "unlimited power," Nixon then adds:

"But neither can he be powerless to go beyond the strict letter of existing law — in a limited way, and at times of special need."

HIS TWO "guideposts" at such times, the former president says, may be conflicting: "The letter of the law and the light of experience."

He also comments: "This is quintessentially an area in which he must follow the dictates of common sense, recognizing that faithful execution of the laws is not always literal execution of the laws.

". . . Faithful execution sometimes requires finding ways to adapt the laws to the circumstances at hand."

Nixon offered the statement because, he said, there had been "widespread misinterpretations" of his comments on TV May 19.

It was then that Nixon, asked by Frost why he had authorized wiretapping, burglaries and other illegal actions against anti-war dissenters, said that a president could make an illegal action legal merely by ordering it to be done.

When he made that remark, Nixon says in the new statement, "I was speaking within a very limited context of emergency actions, and I was referring to that traditional latitude provided in dealing with emergencies."

BORROWING words from the late Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, Nixon says that the presidency as he sees it exists in a "middle ground" between being an "autocrat and automaton."

He also contends that the "inherent power" of a president is

TUCSON (AP) — Apollo astronaut Charles "Pete" Conrad told a fellow passenger he'd had an easier time getting to the moon.

Talk show personality Dr. Lendon Smith, an expert on hyperactivity, marveled at how well his bean soup lunch had cooled his nerves.

Television soap opera star Tom Hallick said, "I thought I was going to die."

The three men were among the 95 passengers aboard Continental Airlines Flight 63 out of Tucson and bound for Los Angeles Friday when the fully fueled Boeing 727 ripped through powerlines on takeoff and made an emergency landing on a foam-soaked runway.

"I saw the wires whip back across the right wing and tear up the flaps," said Bob Shales, a graduate student at the University of Arizona. "The wing was torn up

Gnats bug the wealthy at gala fund-raising

Combined News Services

In Vienna, Va., there was a gala fund-raising opening bash Friday night at Wolf Trap Farm Park — billed as "An Incomparable Array of Talent" — which proved some irrelevant things: Gnats are unimpressed by fame, talent or money, and the Carter energy program hasn't reached the limousine set.

The gnats were at their worst as the evening's festivities got under way, with the $100 and $150 ticket buyers trailing up the path from their gas-guzzlers side by side with the hoi polloi lugging their picnic blankets and plastic coolers.

The democratic gnats bit high and low — Elizabeth Taylor, chairman of the gala, gagged on one as she was being interviewed on TV — and desisted only when the wind mounted, bringing a few dread drops of rain. For $100, of course, one got a seat in the Filene Center with a roof over one's head, but the $25-extra-a-plate dinner was al fresco. One Wolf Trap staffer, asked by a prowling Cassandra if there was a rain plan, replied, "There are a lot of prayers."

The suburban Washington park is the only national park devoted to the performing arts.

The prayers worked, the rain held off, and only a few derided, careful types carried umbrellas swinging from their wrists, even though the wind set the torches to flaring and blew over a couple of the straw baskets of roses set on the long tables to pick up the pattern of the Halston sheets that served as tablecloths, tents and canopies.

Miss Taylor, billed in her newest role as Elizabeth Taylor Warner (she is the wife of former Navy Secretary John Warner), was supposed to have worn a Halston dress in the same material, but something happened. When she and her husband and entourage arrived, she was wearing a bright red chiffon Halston, complete with decolletage and diamonds.

She swept up the path in a blaze of flashbulbs, and all traffic halted as she passed. One spectator, Lilly Reisler, said she thought Miss Taylor was "a little heavy, a little mature — more than I expected — but still beautiful."

Miss Taylor and Beverly Sills, who served as master of ceremonies for the performance wearing an off-the-shoulder ballgown in deep blue with sequins and ostrich feathers, were among the truly dressy. Mostly, it was Banlon heaven, although Charlotte Ford was in black chiffon with diamonds.

It was the men who were adventurous. Chief Justice Warren Burger wore a bright green bow tie, handkerchief and cummerbund with his dinner jacket. On others, there were ruffled shirts of many colors; several white dinner jackets with black collars; one cut like a Norfolk jacket with a satin belt; another all-white, worn with white patent tassel loafers.

The official celebrity of the evening was Chip Carter, in a brushed-denim dinner suit, who has a shy smile and moved as unobtrusively through the crowd as his trail of Secret Service agents would allow.

After the drinks and chatter in the reception enclave, the guests moved on to the buffet dinner, which ranged from hot beef and rice to cold salmon.

There were Washington celebrities — Iranian Ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi, Rep. Al Ullman of the Ways and Means Committee, Greg Schneiders of the White House.

After the desert — trifle served with trowels from nice clean flowerpots — came the entertainment, which turned out to be mostly a Las Vegas-type of solo duo by Liza Minelli and Sammy Davis Jr., combining songs, and a little prancing and dancing.

In addition there was a pas de deux by Patricia McBride and Jean Pierre Bonnefous of the New York City Ballet and a performance of Aaron Copland's "Lincoln Portrait," with Henry Fonda reading the excerpts from Abraham Lincoln's writings to which the music is essentially the backdrop.

Miss Sills, introducing the performers and filling in the scene-changing intervals, announced that this evening she was "using my brain instead of my vocal cords." The audience could not repress a moan of disappointment at not hearing her sing, but she bubbled and charmed them out of their disappointment.

New Russian crackdown

Combined News Services

MOSCOW — Andrei D. Sakharov, the dissident nuclear physicist, claims Soviet authorities are involved in a new crackdown on human right activists in wide areas of the country, with "many arrests" being made in the once-independent Baltic states.

"In Moscow and in the provinces, a strong new wave of repressions is under way," the Nobel Peace Prize winner said. "We know for the most part what is happening in Moscow and the area nearby. The majority of those who are left from the Helsinki Group are either arrested or under strong pressure."

The Helsinki Group was formed in Moscow a year ago to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki Conference and branches have been set up around the country. In the last four months its members are said to have been subject to arrests, searches and interrogations.

"Beyond the people we know about, the campaign of harassment and repression is spreading to people about whom we know very little," Sakharov said. "There are many arrests in the Baltic states. People who spent 25 years in labor camps are being arrested again."

2 guardsmen slain

MADRID — Assailants shot and killed two paramilitary civil guards in Barcelona and bombers struck at Madrid-area power stations Saturday in a continuing campaign of violence before the June 15 Spanish elections. Officials believed both attacks were carried out by extreme leftists who have vowed to disrupt the election campaign. The vote will be Spain's first free election since 1936.

UNICEF aid set

MANILA — Selecting projects that promised maximum results for children, the UNICEF Executive Board approved $113.6 million worth of aid to over 50 nations at its annual session here. Most aid projects approved were package deals promoting child health and education simultaneously and using social workers from the community. The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund calls it the basic services approach.

Arabs stage protest

TEL AVIV, Israel — Arab storekeepers in the West Bank town of Hebron closed their shops Saturday to protest Israel's occupation of the territory that it captured from Jordan 10 years ago. The strike, on the eve of the 10th anniversary of the Six-Day War, came as Israeli troops went on alert against expected demonstrations. Leaflets calling for a general strike today had been distributed in several West Bank towns.

Trudeau reunion off

NEW YORK — Margaret Trudeau has canceled a scheduled reunion with her estranged husband, Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, and their children. They were to have met in London for celebrations of the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth's reign. She was supposed to take photos for ABC News, while Trudeau conferred with other Commonwealth leaders. But Mrs. Trudeau said the publicity surrounding her separation would "put more attention on the photographer than the photographed" in London. So she will stay in New York and appear on the ABC "Good Morning, America" show to discuss her children's future, show pictures she has taken of Cuban leader Fidel Castro and talk about her family life.

Pot boat seized

MIAMI — A 50-foot lobster boat with bales of marijuana outside on the deck was seized Saturday off the Miami coast. Three men were arrested. The seizure was the third this week by Florida authorities for a total haul of $18 million worth of pot. In addition, 70-pound burlap sacks of marijuana washed ashore at Indian Harbour Beach and several bales were found floating off Port Everglades in Fort Lauderdale.

Lance honors strike

WASHINGTON — Budget Director Bert Lance refused to cross a picket line at the ABC studios Saturday, canceling a taping session for today's "Issues and Answers" show. Lance bowed out after he was confronted by one of the 1,700 members of the National Association of Broadcast Employes and Technicians who struck ABC May 17. A network spokesman said a replacement had not yet been found.

Computer sale hit

WASHINGTON — At least 65 congressmen have urged President Carter to ban the sale of the sophisticated Cyber 76 computer to the Soviet Union for fear it will enhance Soviet military strength. Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., described it as the "brain center" of the Pentagon, the U.S. Air Force, the National Security Council and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It is also used by the Energy Research and Development Administration and the North American Air Defense Command.

Violence threat cancels Tampa Led Zep concert

Tampa, Fla. officials called off a Led Zeppelin rock concert for the second night Saturday in the wake of a rock-throwing disturbance that injured 35 fans and 17 policemen.

"It's the safest thing to do. Tension is high. We don't want violence to break out again," a police officer said.

The disturbance broke out Friday night after rain and lightning forced the rock band off the stage. The concert was rescheduled for Saturday night and concert goers were told to show their ticket stubs at the gate.

But many people had already thrown away their ticket stubs in the huge Tampa stadium, and about 4,000 enraged fans in the crowd of 70,000 screamed and threw bottles and rocks.

Tampa authorities, police and concert promoters met the next day and decided to cancel the show and offer refunds for tickets.

"The announcement said 'postponed indefinitely.' I take that to mean canceled," said Officer Jay Stenger.

The injuries ranged from cuts and scratches to broken legs and head injuries. Only four persons remained in hospitals Saturday, and they were reported in satisfactory condition. The injured police officers were treated and released.

The scheduled three-hour concert was called off just five minutes into the performance. "With all their electrical equipment, they couldn't stay on the stage with the lightning," Stenger said.

But an angry 32-year-old fan from West Palm Beach said the tickets read "rain or shine."

"There were so many people you couldn't move," he said. "I was just trying to get away."

Some of the concert goers had waited all night to get $10 tickets to the show.

"I guess everybody got rowdy because they wanted the concert," a 17-year-old Tampa girl sobbed as she was waiting for treatment at a hospital. "But the cops didn't give us a warning. They just waded in. I ended up in the bottom of the crowd and a cop kicked me in the head."

'L'etat, c'est moi'

Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox has compared Richard M. Nixon to King Louis XIV of France and James I of England.

Cox, honored by the NAACP in New York Friday evening, said the kings contended they were not bound to the same laws as their subjects, much as the former president did in recent televised interviews.

Nixon said during the series of televised interviews with David Frost that a president could not break the law when he was acting in the interests of national security.

High fliers

We have tinted windows, and birds keep flying into them. We've been told that at this time of year there is a certain type of berry that birds eat and that this can make them drunk. Is this true? Is there anything we can do to keep the birds from hitting the windows? J.L., Long Beach.

Many types of berries will ferment in the sun and can intoxicate a bird, but in such a state a bird usually will just sit groggily on the ground until the effects wear off and is not likely to fly into a window or anything else, said Jean Brandt of the Audubon Society.

The natural fermentation process usually happens in the fall after the berries have been on the bushes all summer, but it can occur at other times. Most berries, even non-edible varieties, have some sugar in them, and this produces the fermented juice.

It's difficult to stop birds from hitting windows, but Mrs. Brandt said you can control the problem somewhat by blocking the birds' view with hanging pots or other decorative items. "Birds fly into a window because they think it's a pass-through, but if the drapes are pulled or there are objects in front of a window, inside the house or outside, the birds are less likely to fly into it," she said. Since you have tinted windows, the birds probably can't see the furnishings inside, and you should place some hanging objects outside.

Budget motels

We are planning a driving trip to Northern California and would like to know if there is a directory of budget motels. E.B., San Pedro.

"Where to Stay, U.S.A.," a $2.95 paperback which can be purchased at many bookstores, contains a comprehensive list of cut-rate motels and hotels throughout the country. You also can obtain directories free of charge for three major chains which have motels in California: Motel 6, 1888 Century Park East, Room 1900, Los Angeles, Calif. 90067; California 6 Motels, P.O. Box 5248, Hacienda Heights, Calif. 91745, and Regal 8 Motels, P.O. Box 1268, Mount Vernon, Ill. 62864.

For other parts of the country, you can get directories for Econo-Travel Motor Hotels, P.O. Box 12188, Norfolk, Va. 23502; Scottish Inns, 104 Bridgewater Road, Knoxville, Tenn. 37919, and Chalet Susse International, 2 Progress Ave., Nashua, N.H., 03060. Econo-Travel and Scottish Inns motels are located primarily in the Midwest and the South, and most of the Chalet Susse outlets are in New England.

The seven "Mobil Oil Travel Guides," which each cover a different region of the country and rate the quality of restaurants and lodging facilities, also list budget motels. The guidebooks, which cost $3.95, are sold by most Mobil Oil service stations and many bookstores. They're also available in some public libraries. Most budget motels have double rooms available for $11 to $15.

Accounting

My father died in March and was buried at Forest Lawn Memorial-Park in Cypress. We were told his burial expenses would be about $900. He had had about $750 in trust with Forest Lawn for 10 years, so that, along with his Social Security death benefit of $250, would be plenty.

It then was pointed out to me that there should be quite a bit of interest accumulated over the 10 years to add to the $750, and perhaps Forest Lawn owes us money instead of the other way around. Forest Lawn never mentioned the interest to me and refused to give me an itemized list of burial costs. Could you please help? Forest Lawn has filed for the Social Security benefit, and I think it should come to us. V.C.B., Long Beach.

A detailed accounting of the cost of your father's burial is being sent to you by Charles Pink, vice president of Forest Lawn Park in Cypress. He said the itemized statement normally is sent only to the survivor who signs as the responsible party, but none of your family members was willing to do this.

He explained the interest from the trust account was paid to your father every six months, with the last payment made to him the December before he died.

The amount in his trust at the time of his death was $720.34. Total burial expenses were $975.34, leaving an unpaid balance of $255, Pink said, for which the mortuary has filed through Social Security. "We even wrote off some of our own expenses so there would be no cost to the survivors," he told Action Line.

Growers, UFW each charge bias

INDIO (AP) — Coachella Valley grape growers said Saturday that the State Agriculture Labor Relations Board is biased in favor of the United Farm Workers of America. But the UFW maintained the bias goes the other way.

Nearly 50 growers, union officials and farm workers exchanged the charges during an all-day meeting of the State Legislature's ALRB Oversight Committee.

Nearly 300 UFW members jammed Smalimar Auditorium at the Riverside County National Date Festival fairgrounds, carrying a black flag to mourn "what has happened to the farm labor law," according to a UFW spokesman.

Assemblyman Floyd Mori, chairman of the committee, declined later to speculate how long it would take to investigate allegations of incompetence and bias by ALRB field agents.

"There have been several incidents brought to our attention by the growers and workers," Mori said. "Most of the charges deal with attitudes and bias, which are difficult to deal with. We need more details to substantiate the charges."

Coachella UFW leader Eliseo Medina said that administration of the 1975 farm labor law "had become a mockery." Medina said the "bureaucratic bungling" by the ALRB under the direction of ALRB counsel Harry Delizonna has kept unresolved dozens of unfair labor practices filed against Coachella Valley growers.

Several farm workers also testified that they were not hired because of their affiliations with the UFW and that local growers did not want unionized workers.

State Sen. John Stull and Assemblyman Tom Suitt, who called for the hearings, were members of the committee.

Law school grads get ray of Hope

Associated Press

Citing President Jimmy Carter as an example of a man who made the most of opportunity, comedian Bob Hope turned serious for a moment Saturday for law-school graduation ceremonies in Anaheim.

"Whatever your politics are, you've got to be thrilled by his success story," said Hope, a Republican. "Here's a guy who comes from a pretty humble beginning. But by taking advantage of opportunities our country offers all of us, he's now raising peanuts in the White House rose garden.

"Carter may be an outstanding example, but he's really just one example of what's out there for all of you. Success, however you decide it for yourself, is there for you to grab."

Wearing a cap and gown, Hope delivered his remarks to 470 Western State University College of Law graduates and an estimated 5,000 guests at WSU commencement exercises at Anaheim Convention Center.

Before delivering the keynote address, Hope accepted an honorary Doctorate of Laws degree from the school's dean, Maxwell Boas.

"This is just what the country needs," he said moments later in his address, "another lawyer on television. Now I can not only tell my jokes but I can defend them."

The comedian said he was "deeply grateful" for the honorary degree, although, he added, "I can't really do anything with it."

"It's like playing a love scene with Farrah Fawcett," he deadpanned, "while Lee Majors is on the set."

But the entertainer congratulated the degree candidates on their achievement.

"Since this is your graduation day, you must feel like Phyllis Diller's skin, you've gone about as far you can go."

On a more serious note, Hope told the graduates, "You are tomorrow. It's in your hands. We're counting on you."

Mystery grows in missing-boy case

FBI agents and Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies Saturday intensified their search for a 9-year-old Firestone-area boy missing since late last month and reportedly being held for a $50,000 ransom.

Approximately 35 reserve and regular deputies and Explorer Scouts conducted a door-to-door search of a 10-square-block section of the Firestone area but were unsuccessful in locating Luis Miguel Ruelas of 7931 S. Croesus Ave.

Sheriff's Sgt. Glenn Thompson said the FBI also has begun conducting an investigation in Mexico to determine the whereabouts of the boy.

He was reported missing May 25 by his grandmother, Celsa Torres, 55, with whom he lived.

She told authorities that the boy was ready for school when she went to work but that he never arrived at school.

On May 25, the boy's aunt in Yuba City received a call from a man who said he had the child and demanded one million pesos or $50,000. The caller spoke Spanish.

The man said he would call back in three days but didn't. He also threatened the boy's life if the aunt called authorities.

That was the reason authorities did not immediately make the case public.

Neighbors told deputies they had seen the child in two cars at various times just after the disappearance.

The boy's parents live in Mexico, possibly in Guadalajara, where the FBI has been following leads.

He is 4-feet 10-inches tall, weighs about 90 pounds with short, brown hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing a red shirt, brown jacket, checkered green pants and possibly carrying a pair of blue denim pants. He also had a cut on the cheek.

Rosalynn, Peru president discuss arms purchases

By Jurate Kazickas
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Rosalynn Carter said Saturday she discussed Peruvian arms purchases "extensively" with President Francisco Morales Bermudez, who has bought large amounts of Soviet weapons.

America's First Lady said some important understandings had been reached but she could not reveal details of Friday's meeting until she talked with her husband in Washington.

"We did discuss armaments in detail," Mrs. Carter told a news conference. She said she was "very pleased with what he (Morales Bermudez) said."

TALKING with reporters at the International Potato Center in La Molina, 10 miles east of the capital, Mrs. Carter described U.S.-Peruvian relations as a "close friendship." She said the Peruvian leader gave her a copy of the government's plan that calls for a return to civilian rule by 1980. "Jimmy would be very interested to read it," she said.

Mrs. Carter spent 30 minutes touring the 250-acre agricultural research complex where she saw guinea pigs, an irrigation project and varieties of Peru's native potatoes. At one point, she stopped to pick up a fat guinea pig, and thought of her 9-year-old daughter, Amy. "Wouldn't Amy like this?" she said.

"This is so interesting to me because we have an experimental station in Plains, Ga., for peanuts and corn," she said. But Mrs. Carter did not have time to see any of Peru's 200 varieties of peanuts.

Mrs. Carter said she came to Peru to listen, to questions leaders about U.S. policies and to "do all we can" to demonstrate the Carter administration's interest in human rights.

SHE SAID she was taking back "some very good proposals, some very good suggestions" that Morales Bermudez made on how peace and security can be achieved in the area. There were some "misconceptions" about Peru's position on arms, she added.

Peru acknowledged late last year that it had acquired new Soviet weapons, and sources said they included 36 fighter-bombers plus tanks. U.S. intelligence sources have said there are about 75 Russian military advisers in Peru and additional Soviet technicians are expected.

Morales Bermudez has said the purchases were made "to renew obsolete equipment," and that Moscow gave better financial terms than American, French and British suppliers.

Mrs. Carter, halfway through her first diplomatic mission as First Lady, has been swapping blunt talk with Caribbean and Latin American leaders.

"Almost in every case when we start talking with these people," Mrs. Carter said of the 20 hours she has spent with presidents and prime ministers, "they will say, 'I don't know exactly how to say it.' I'll say, 'Listen, you can be blunt . . .' and after that, they're blunt."

SHE PLANNED to spend the rest of the weekend relaxing at a hilltop chalet before continuing on to Brazil, Colombia and Venezuela.

In a toast at a formal dinner Friday night, Morales Bermudez said Mrs. Carter's trip means "greater ties of understanding" with the United States.

U.S.-Peru relations plummeted under the leftist regime of Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado, who expropriated U.S. oil and mining holdings. But since Morales Bermudez took over in 1975, Peru has sought to win back American investment and to take a more moderate stance.

"I will tell Jimmy that the ties of friendship with Peru are very strong," Mrs. Carter told Morales Bermudez after three hours of talks Friday.

"She's very much in control of the whole trip," said one of the traveling U.S. experts who has sat in on the talks. "They're treating her as if she were the President. They are taking her very seriously."

Apart from one anti-Rosalynn demonstration in Quito, the First Lady has received a warm reception from people in the streets and some rave reviews in the press.

"Smiling, graceful, cordial: Rosalynn conquered everyone," wrote the mass-circulation Peruvian tabloid Correo.

Reflecting on the first half of her mission on the flight from Ecuador to Peru, Mrs. Carter said she had been nervous at first but that her discussions with Latin American leaders so far have been "very, very productive."

She has talked with government heads about such tough issues as economic aid to Jamaica, U.S. meat quotas for Costa Rica, arms sales to Ecuador and Peru and President Carter's human rights policies.

"I THINK this trip so far has been very successful. And I really believe that my trip has been valuable to the leaders too, because they don't know Jimmy," Mrs. Carter said. "Just the fact that he cares enough to send me to talk with them I think means a lot to them.

Carter, staff eye tax-law changes

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter and his top fiscal experts spent 3½ hours Saturday reviewing options for changing the nation's tax laws but made no final decisions on the plan Carter hopes to present to Congress by the end of the summer.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, asked about a suggestion Carter made early in the presidential campaign that mortgage interest and property tax deductions be eliminated, said after the meeting that home owners would not suffer under the Carter proposal.

In addition to the President and Blumenthal, the meeting was attended by Vice President Walter F. Mondale; Budget Director Thomas B. Lance; Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's domestic policy adviser; Asst. Treasury Secretary Laurence Woodworth, who was the top congressional tax expert before he joined the administration, and other officials.

Blumenthal said the administration had three goals dictating the shape the tax revision would take:

—Make the tax program simpler.

—Make it more equitable by eliminating loopholes available to individuals with high incomes and to corporations.

—Use the tax system to help in capital formation that could boost the economy by creating jobs.

"We are concerned with making sure the American tax system is properly progressive," Blumenthal said.

Carter, addressing a League of Women Voters group in Boston in February 1976, had said he favored doing away with the income tax deduction claimed by home owners based on mortage interest payments.

But in Kansas City last Oct. 16, 17 days before the election, he said at a news conference he would continue the deductions for the interest payments and for property tax payments.

Blumenthal said the meeting Saturday was one in a series the President and vice president are holding "to go over the whole tax code and the whole tax system, to look at the way it works and the various options" in revising it.

Carter had no other events on his schedule and planned a quiet weekend at the White House. His wife, Rosalynn, is in Peru on a two-week Latin American tour.

Blumenthal said the administration had no target date for submitting the program to Congress but hoped to have it finished by the end of the summer. Carter has said he hoped to send it to Capitol Hill by Sept. 30.

Eisenhower's views surprised Warren

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Chief Justice Earl Warren, in memoirs published three years after his death, says he was surprised by several positions taken by the late President Eisenhower, who appointed him to the Supreme Court in 1953.

"I have always believed that President Eisenhower resented our decision in Brown v. Board of Education (which mandated integrated schools) and its progeny," Warren wrote.

He said that while the case was being considered by the high court, Eisenhower invited him to a White House dinner.

"I wondered why I should be invited because such dinners were political in nature, and there was no place for me in such discussions," Warren said. Also attending was John W. Davis, who represented the segregation states in arguments before the Supreme Court.

The former chief justice, who died July 9, 1974, said that during the meal Eisenhower praised Davis at length and after the meal told Warren to remember:

"These are not bad people. All they are concerned about is to see that their sweet little girls are not required to sit in school alongside some big overgrown Negroes."

"Shortly thereafter the Brown case was decided, and with it went our cordial relations," he recalled.

Warren, who had been governor of California when appointed to the high court and had no previous judicial experience, also said that after leaving the presidency Eisenhower on several occasions made it clear that he was not pleased with Supreme Court decisions.

U.N. names environment threats

By Casey Bukro
Knight News Service

Four global threats to the environment were named by the United Nations as a prelude to worldwide observances of World Environment Day Sunday.

Five years after the historic U.N. Stockholm conference on the human environment, the U.N. published its first annual review of environment threats:

—Ozone — Aerosol spray cans, supersonic aircraft, nitrogen fertilizers, and nuclear explosions all can damage the stratospheric ozone layer which screens the earth from the worst of the sun's ultraviolet radiation.

Damaging the protective ozone layer 10 to 40 miles above the earth could cause climate changes, increases in skin cancer, lower crop yields, biological changes in plants and animals, and possibly birth defects.

—Cancer — The U.N. reported that it generally is agreed that 60 to 90 per cent of all cancers are related to environmental factors. After heart disease, it is the leading killer in industrialized societies.

Seventeen chemicals in the environment have been proven to cause human cancers, and another 100 are suspects. The risk of cancer can be cut 30 or 40 per cent, says the U.N., by living in rural areas, not smoking, eating and drinking in moderation, and reducing exposure to sunlight.

—Soil loss — The world's population is expected to climb from 4 billion to 6.25 billion by the year 2,000. Farming is expanding to supply food, but overgrazing and overcultivation already has led to serious erosion.

At the same time, the world's food-producing system steadily is losing vast areas of productive land to urban sprawl or loss in soil fertility through salinity, alkalinity, or water-logging from poor drainage or excessive irrigation.

An estimated 60 billion acres of farmland are expected to be lost by the end of the century, while only 30 billion acres will be added.

—Firewood — Dwindling sources of firewood are called the poor man's energy crisis. In rural areas of developing countries, nearly 95 per cent of the households burn wood for heating and cooking.

Half of all trees cut down every day throughout the world are used for firewood, while the other half falls under the chainsaws of industry. More trees are being cut down than replaced, and collecting firewood is becoming a day-long chore in parts of the world where it once took an hour or two because millions of people must walk further to find wood in the retreating forests.

The U.N. Environment Program, meanwhile, said a growth process that benefits a small wealthy minority and widens the gap between the rich and the poor "can no longer be equated with development."

Stressing that no international strategy for development can ignore the wide differences between rich and poor countries, the U.N. environmental arm said old concepts of development aimed at increasing the gross national product (GNP) of a country are giving way to new ideas. These include equality in employment, income, education, nutrition, and housing.

Witness vows silence in House JFK probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Assassinations Committee is calling a witness this week in its investigation of President John F. Kennedy's murder who has already told the panel he won't talk.

The witness is Loran Eugene Hall, a Cuban exile who has been quoted by two newsmen as saying in interviews that Dallas businessmen offered him $50,000 to assassinate Kennedy.

Hall is to testify Tuesday and a committee aide says the witness has told investigators he will invoke Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination and refuse to answer questions.

The newsman who put the committee in contact with Hall says Hall has been threatened with death, purportedly by organized crime gangsters, if he testifies.

The newsman, Art Kevin, a reporter for KMPC radio in Hollywood, Calif., accuses the committee of misusing him as a go-between to get Hall and of causing the death threat by allowing word to leak out that Hall was initially willing to talk.

Kevin quoted Hall as saying an anonymous caller told him: "You're on the list to be subpoenaed . . . but that's not the only list because you're a dead man . . . Love and kisses from ——." Kevin said the caller named an East Coast mafia boss in the "love and kisses" portion but Kevin refused to give that name.

The newsman quoted Hall as saying in an interview that a group of Dallas businessmen offered him $50,000 to kill Kennedy.

Kevin also quotes Hall as saying he has knowledge about one of the CIA-sponsored plots by organized crime figures to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

New L.B. promotion is an old story

Scheme to underwrite Grand Prix draws council fire

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

The Long Beach Promotion and Service Corporation (PSC) is old wine in new bottles.

Less than a month old, the corporation is already drawing City Council criticism for a plan to underwrite the Long Beach Grand Prix Association to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The corporation as seen by City Manager John Dever, however, is necessary and will be a one-stop promotional agency for all shoreline activities.

As structured, it is a consolidation of Queen Mary Tours, Inc., and the Long Beach Convention and News Bureau.

The corporation is also the second name change for Queen Mary Tours, formerly called the California Museum of the Sea Foundation.

Creating PSC is part of a larger plan by Dever to streamline the city's tidelands activities "and eliminate substantial duplication and overlap in many of the functions now performed by other entities," he explained.

Dever says the larger consolidation is necessary to develop the coordinated tideland organization he feels will ensure that tideland activities (projects and programs totally or partially funded by tidelands oil revenues) become self-sufficient and not prove a burden on the city's general fund.

Most importantly, he says, "they need to be under one umbrella."

Dever proposes to consolidate the administrative and financial functions of all city agencies and programs throughout the tidelands area into a single city agency — the Tidelands Agency.

The "fragmented" agencies and projects, as Dever calls them, include the nearly completed Pacific Terrace Convention Center, Long Beach Marina, Belmont Pier, Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, Long Beach Arena, Marine Department, Department of Oil Properties, Long Beach Convention and News Bureau and the entire Queen Mary operation, as well as proposals for a Shoreline Aquatic Park, downtown marinas and other shoreline developments.

He won council approval in March to combine the marketing, sales and special service functions required for the Queen Mary and Pacific Terrace Convention Center under a reconstituted nonprofit corporation — PSC.

Those close to Dever's reorganization say the Convention and News Bureau wrote its own obituary because it was so ineffective.

"They were just spinning their wheels," one source said. "Here they were, trying to promote everything in sight, but they promoted very little.

"The right hand didn't know what the left hand was doing.

"To be fair, it was probably the way the bureau was set up — like it was condemned to failure. Nobody talked to anybody," he said.

Under Dever's consolidation plan, PSC would operate under a management contract with the city, administered by Dever through the proposed tidelands general manager.

The corporation will provide the services of specialized, professional and techinical firms and individuals which the city might feel are necessary to attract conventions, tourists and leisure-time visitors to the city.

These services would include employing a professional marketing, sales and promotion manager, a professional advertising and promotion firm and experienced sales and marketing professionals to sell conventions, meetings, group tours, performing arts shows, family shows and trade and exhibit shows.

Also included are an individual or firm that knows how to promote and produce performing arts productions, and an ad-hoc ability to find — for either the city or outside promoters using city facilities — experienced people for the Queen Mary tour and other activities.

They would include ushers, ticket-takers, private police, stagehands, musicians and whoever else was needed for a particular event.

One of the keys to a coordinated convention sales and promotion program, according to Dever, will be the creation, by PSC, of an advisory committee consisting of the Long Beach Hotel-Motel Owners Association.

At the moment, the concept is in limbo until the city appoints a permanent seven-member board of directors to oversee PSC. The appointments are due in two weeks.

Until then, Queen Mary Tours has formally changed its name to Promotion and Service Corporation, while the Convention and News Bureau has dissolved itself to permit takeover by PSC.

In the interim, the three-member board of directors of the former Queen Mary Tours is in the unusual position of operating the former Convetion and News Bureau.

The Convention and News Bureau's five-member board of directors was disbanded last month, and its 10-member advertising and sales staff was absorbed by PSC.

As for financing, the city will provide PSC with an estimated $700,000 in funding from the hotel-motel bed tax. An additional $92,000 will come from the "carry-over" of unspent bed-tax money allocated for the defunct Convention and News Bureau.

Dever added that the city will also have the authority to audit all of PSC's books, records and accounts.

Dever says the new PSC has its work cut out for it.

The consolidation plan mandates that PSC develop and submit to the city a preliminary marketing plan for the coming fiscal year — just how it plans to tell those now flocking to Los Angeles, Disneyland, San Diego and elsewhere why they should instead come to Long Beach and spend money.

Deadline for the plan is July 1, and Dever indicates "it had better be good."

According to the reorganization idea, PSC will employ a full-time professional promoter to develop, plan and supervise publicity, advertising and promotional programs that are consistent with the marketing plan.

Outlets for such promotions will include newspaper and broadcast ads, brochures, direct-mail literature and other typical devices for selling the "Come to Long Beach" message.

Also written into the reorganization plan is a "hold-harmless" clause saying the city of Long Beach and anyone connected with it will not be liable for losses, damages, charges or liability arising from any act — or failure to act — by PSC.

Dever admits PSC is an ambitious idea, but one whose time was long overdue.

275 teachers stage walkout in dispute

MILPITAS (AP) — About 275 teachers stayed out of their classrooms Friday in a dispute with the Milpitas Unified School District over contract negotiations.

Al Butler, president of the Association of Milpitas Educators, said the teachers were protesting the district's handling of contract issues including salaries, binding arbitration, transfer and class size.

Brown 'taking over State Bar'

Associated Press

A member of the State Bar said Saturday in Los Angeles that Gov. Brown is trying to run the group by appointing six nonlawyers to the board of governors.

Attorney Fulton Haight of Los Angeles said the six public members have joined with several lawyer members already close to the governor to take over. Haight made his remarks at a meeting of 40 attorneys called to try to counter what they say is Brown's actions.

"The governor is running the State Bar and will continue to do so for the next 18 months," Haight said.

The group agreed to form a steering committee and raise funds to achieve some corrective action. One proposal was to shift appointing power from the governor to the State Supreme Court.

Haight said the power of the public members became evident during the recent election of the bar's next president, when a majority of the board failed to prevail. Garvin F. Shallenberger of Santa Ana was chosen president-elect at a closed board session May 12.

Brown's six appointees were named last September under 1975 legislation. They are three women, two blacks and two Mexican-Americans.

"This is not a personal vendetta against the public members, who individually are charming and talented," said Joseph H. Cummins, a board member from Los Angeles.

Black 'boss' sweeps while whites profit

By James Coates
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — White entrepreneurs have reaped millions in profits by using poor blacks as phony corporation presidents to obtain federal contracts and special business benefits intended for minorities, Senate sources have disclosed.

A confidential General Accounting Office (GAO) report describes how one operation did $16-million worth of business through companies "directed" by a 70-year-old black janitor who signs his name with an "X" because he can't write.

The Small Business Administration (SBA) secured government contracts for the janitor's companies without the companies having to make competitive bids. The SBA's program sets aside hundreds of federal contracts each year to give to minority-operated businesses.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said he has found nationwide abuses of the SBA's programs in which well-connected operators enhance their profits by using black "fronts" to get the choice deals designed to help minority businesses get on their feet.

IT WAS LEARNED that a Senate investigator spent last week in the Midwest seeking out further "horror stories" about SBA programs.

Chiles's subcommittee on federal spending has uncovered several cases in the South, where operators concentrated largely on military bases to set up minority-front operations, one staff member said.

One operation in Florida used four blacks as canning company officials to obtain lucrative contracts to provide tomatoes for the mammoth Veterans' Administration.

The instant executives included a college student, a farm crew foreman, an airplane factory employe and a friend of a white "sponsor" of the operation. The sponsors included a millionaire art patron, an affluent clergyman and the administrator of a major Florida hospital.

One of the operation's first deals was to reopen a flagging cannery and provide $364,000 worth of canned tomatoes to the VA, Senate records show. Under the SBA program, the cannery received an extra $145,000 in "business development expenses" to get the cannery running.

THEN, RECORDS SHOW, the outfit went to another canning company and bought the tomatoes for the VA at a cheaper price than its own bid. The second cannery shipped the food directly to the VA, and the government wound up paying as much for its bulk order as "if somebody went down to the A&P and bought them off the shelf," an investigator said.

The Chicago Tribune obtained a classified report from the General Accounting Office which outlines in great detail an even more ambitious operation, which used minority figureheads to enrich non-disadvantaged operators.

Classified because it contains "proprietary information," the report discusses an operation called the Dunn Group of North Carolina. GAO investigators found that the group of companies did $16 million worth of business providing KP (kitchen police) food and clean-up service to the Army.

Like the cannery which didn't can, the Dunn operation had few physical parts, the GAO study said. "Although the seven firms sponsored by the Dunn group performed over $16 million in contracts," GAO reported, "they purchased no fixed assets except for one car and one truck, but instead paid National Estates $286,355 in lease payments for equipment and other items to perform all of their contracts."

NATIONAL ESTATES is owned by the three non-minority "sponsors" of the Dunn Group's companies. Thus, concluded the GAO, the sponsors got all the minority-directed benefits "even to the extent of leasing tables, chairs, carpets, draperies, etc."

One of the alleged executives in the seven-member Dunn Group company consortium was Henry Ferguson, who was listed with the SBA as secretary-treasurer and director of one company and a stockholder in three others.

Ferguson's duties actually consisted of janitor work, one investigator said. The GAO report says, "When secretary-treasurer to Technical (the company name), Ferguson accepted the position by signing an 'X'."

Despite his illiteracy, Ferguson's "signature" appears on numerous company meeting minutes sent to Washington. In one progress report a sponsor wrote that Ferguson was "progressing very well" as an executive.

Chiles has ordered GAO to turn its findings over to the Justice Department for investigation of possible forgery charges.

THE THREE SPONSORS of the operation eventually were forced to sell their interest in the firms, and apparently made a lavish profit at the expense of the blacks, records indicate.

According to the GAO report, the three white sponsors held 37,500 shares, purchased at $1 each. The minority executives also held 37,500 shares.

However, the whites sold their stocks for $1,066,600. The minority executives received roughly $1 per share for their stock. The GAO said that the profit to the three operators amounted to 2,844 per cent.

"The disadvantaged persons usually received only par value or forgiveness of their personal notes when they sold their stocks," GAO said. "Only one disadvantaged stockholder sold his stock for more than he paid for it."

In response to a request by the Chicago Tribune under the Freedom of Information Act, the SBA said it does not know how many of its contractors are doing business with the government "This information necessarily involves a number of government agencies, and as a single agency it is not possible for us to supply a conclusive answer," the agency admitted.

CHILES CHARGED, HOWEVER, that "our investigation has turned up case after case of SBA officials wasting tax dollars through one sham after another, all in the guise of giving minority citizens a break in business."

Chiles said he had found the problem was not confined to the South, but appeared to be nationwide. The program, he said, "is one which lends itself to manipulation, with the result that those we set out to help — the minority business people — are even further victimized and deprived of a leadership role."

"If the aims of the program were being carried out it would be a good program," he said. "But what we are finding are cases of white sponsors sharing exorbitant profits while paying a black janitor $2.35 per hour and listing him as president of the front firm."

Two dead in stabbings

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Two men have died from fatal stab wounds in separate incidents here, coroner's officials said.

Tillman Cromwell, 57, was identified as the victim in a stabbing Friday night at a downtown nightclub.

Cromwell was found near midnight in the club restroom by a taxi driver called for a fare by the victim earlier. Cromwell was stabbed four times in the chest and declared dead at the scene.

In the other incident, the body of a man believed in his late fifties was found early Saturday by a newspaper delivery boy.

Park named Korea agent

By Richard Halloran
New York Times Service

EXCLUSIVE

WASHINGTON — A former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Hyung Wook, has broken a long silence to identify Park Tong Sun as a KCIA agent who spent millions of dollars on an allegedly illegal scheme to influence American policy on Korea.

"When I was director of the KCIA," Kim said, "he was my agent. I controlled Park at that time," he said, although Park also was in touch with other officers of the agency in the Korean Embassy here.

Kim's statement contradicts repeated denials from the Korean government that Park was working for the KCIA or acted in any way for the government. Moreover, Kim's evidence appears to be a signal contribution to federal and congressional investigations since it is the first positive identification of Park as a foreign agent, a critical point in the inquiries.

Kim further named several other agency operatives and gave a new account of the origin and expansion of Korean intelligence activities in the United States, thus adding a deeper and wider dimension to the scope of the Korean scandal here.

Kim is the most authoritative first-hand source to describe for the record Seoul's six-year covert effort to affect the policies of the Nixon and Ford administrations, the votes and public statements of key congressmen and the attitudes of the American people toward Korea.

A self-imposed exile who lives outside New York City, Kim said that he was speaking out now because he believed that the scandal threatened to disrupt America's commitment to Korea. "I can no longer defend President Park by remaining silent," he said.

Kim asserted that President Park Chung Hee was responsible for the scandal and should apologize to the American people. He called on Park to resign to clear the way for a new South Korean government that would negotiate a peace treaty with Communist North Korea.

Epidemic of alcoholism hits nation's teen-agers

They drink sooner, more often—and more

By Dwight Ott
Knight News Service

PHILADELPHIA — Connie's parents used to think she was "nuts" because of some of the things she began doing three years ago.

Without any mention to her parents, the teen-age girl started staying out all night. Once an honor student, she let her grades plummet to barely passing. She got into auto accidents and started associating with "junkies."

Later, she started forgetting things and playing hookey.

Her parents punished her, but Connie paid no attention to them. Even now, she says, her parents are unaware of her real problem.

With her wholesome-looking face framed by shoulder-length black hair, Connie could easily have been cast for a spot in "Happy Days."

But the aura of youthful innocence ends with her appearance. Connie, at 17, is by her own description an alcoholic.

"I started getting drunk when I was 12," she said, sitting cross-legged on the floor of the Bridge rehabilitation center.

CONNIE is caught up in a nationwide epidemic of alcohol abuse among teen-agers and preteens that is of increasing concern to parents, school administrators, social workers and state and federal authorities.

Although some experts say the trend has begun to level off, Terry Bellicha, director of the National Clearinghouse for Alcohol Information in Rockville, Md., cautions: "Every indicator and every statistic available . . . indicates an increase in consumption of alcohol by young people. Our data indicate that young people are drinking sooner, more often and in greater quantities than ever before."

The most recent national figures show that there are an estimated 1.1 million people between the ages of 12 and 17 with serious drinking problems, according to the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

ALTHOUGH teen-age alcoholics have been described as a national problem for nearly a decade, what is alarming now is the change on the numbers. They have gone up — faster than most of the experts predicted — and they have spread into communities where alcoholism was thought to be primarily a hazard of bored housewives and harried businessmen.

Two of the more alarming side effects that have accompanied the surge in the number of young alcohol users are the increase in adolescents killed in traffic accidents and the inability of social workers to keep up with the drinking problem. There are still few treatment programs available exclusively for juvenile alcoholics, which means that many of them are forced to seek help from programs already overburdened with adult clients.

"Alcohol is the most prevalent chemical of abuse we have among juveniles today," observed the chief of psychological and clinical services for the juvenile branch of Philadelphia's Court of Common Pleas, Dr. Carlton Orchinik.

"A large percentage of the juveniles, from one end of Philadelphia to another, see their weekends through drinking and getting drunk. . . . They start drinking Friday night and may or may not end on Sunday. Friday and Sunday is the heaviest time. It's become more acceptable and fashionable among the young — almost the way 'pot' was once considered a novelty, the 'in' thing to do."

C[illegible] who has been [illegible] a few months, [illegible] with [illegible] like a nightmare [illegible] three years.

She recalled: "I used to get drunk every night and sometimes in the morning before school. I started out with a quart of beer, worked my way up to a six-pack, then a half case or maybe more some nights."

She said her parents both worked hard at blue-collar jobs and did not realize that she had a drinking problem.)

"They were just happy I wasn't smoking pot or taking something 'horrible'" she said.

Her parents' ignorance of her drinking, Connie added, made it easier for her to drink.

"I got in with some girl that didn't have to get home early like me. . . . We'd get as wasted as we could. . . . Sometimes I'd drive. We got into a couple of accidents. Never anything serious. But I'd, like, just drive away, and you'd laugh about it, because you're drunk, you know."

Connie's drinking spilled over into school but was never noticed. She would ask to be excused to go to the bathroom, then guzzle booze in one of the stalls.

"I went to a Catholic school," she said. "I'd get drunk in school. I'd bring (the liquor) in a bag or pocketbook. It was an all-girl school. The nuns didn't realize what was going on around them. People sometimes came to school really wasted on durgs and alcohol."

The problem of adolescent alcoholism has crossed all socio-economic, cultural and racial lines.

According to counselors who work with teen-age alcoholics, the home environment of their clients cannot be stereotyped: As many come from broken homes as stable ones, as many have a history of alcoholism in their families as not, and as many live in slums as in the affluent sections.

These counselors also note that as the ranks of the teen-age drunks have swelled in the last few years, the number of girls abusing alcohol has shown a marked rise.

"When I started my treatment, maybe a fifth of the young people were girls," said Marie, 29, a member of Alcoholics Anonymous who was one of the youngest women in the group three years ago. "Now the number has risen to maybe a third."

Although the reasons that teen-agers turn to drink vary widely, as Marie pointed out, a common thread in many cases is the inability to cope with the psychological and emotional pressures of adolescence.

Marie explained: "I wouldn't go through being a teen-ager again for anything. It is a horrible thing to be a teen-ager. It is an emotional time . . . hormone changes and everything else. You're growing up, but you're not taught to live by your parents."

Educators and police throughout the country generally agree that the switch back to increased alcohol use has occurred simultaneously with a decline in the use of hard drugs.

Frank Lamont, who runs a public-school drug education program in Philadelphia known as Rights of Passage, said there were several reasons for this. "Heroin on the streets was poor quality in the '60s," he said. "Kids saw what heroin was doing to their peers, and many decided not to go along. Stringent drug laws were a deterrent, as well. There is a real return to alcohol. . . . It is a more socially acceptable addiction."

Lamont speculated that another reason for the drop in heroin addiction among adolescents is that there is no quality control for heroin, as there is for alcohol. Because of this, a heroin addict is more likely to overdose and kill himself, "and the kids know this," he said.

But Bellicha of the National Clearinghouse of Alcohol Information points out that there is no reason to be elated by the teen-age trend away from hard drugs to alcohol.

"According to results of a 1974 study on the use of alcohol by teen-agers, among seventh graders 93 per cent of the boys and 87 per cent of the girls have had a drink," Bellicha said.

SOUTHGATE, Ky. — Bernie Doctor wanted a Memorial Day weekend to remember.

—He and his wife relished good entertainment. A favorite spot was the Beverly Hills Supper Club, a sprawling nightclub offering the biggest names in show business and fine food.

Since developing a heart condition, Doctor, a state engineering clerk, held a new appreciation for the good things in life — and life itself. He and his wife, Rose, had a fondness for singer John Davidson, top-billed performer at the club last Saturday, the final show of an 11-night engagement.

DOCTOR, 59, Rose, 56, and Aunt Tess Schlonsky, 75, had made reservations days earlier for dinner and the show. They drove from Columbus to the narrow, quarter-mile drive to the top of the bluff where the club overlooks a valley opposite a cemetery. A flurry of activity at the front door indicated a growing crowd.

"We arrived about 5:30 p.m., had our car parked and went in to wash up," Doctor recalls.

Freshened, the trio found a table in the bar inside the main entrance. They delayed cocktails and began a 25-minute wait for a table in the dining room.

Doctor scanned the ala carte menu and, concerned about a weight problem, selected fish. The women ate calf's liver. Then, sipping $3 cocktails, they chatted and relaxed.

Less than four hours later the nightclub was engulfed in flames. Doctor and the two women scrambled through dense smoke and flames to save their lives. But at least 161 others died.

A THREE-MAN investigating team from Atlanta reported to Kentucky officials last week that the fire began around 7 p.m., from a short circuit in a power cord of a decorative water pump near the club's Zebra Room, and burned unnoticed inside a wall for more than an hour. An aide to Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll said the state would not issue any official report on the cause until further investigation was completed.

Meanwhile, by 5:45 p.m. the paved parking lot outside was filling quickly.

Fred Cianciola, a musician in the 24-piece house orchestra, arrived in his tuxedo, delicately removing his Vuillaume violin from the car. The 80-year-old instrument, valued at over $5,000, has been an obsession in the middle-aged Cincinnati man's life. An even rarer model was destroyed by vandals years back.

Busboy Walter Bailey, 18, already was busy. The night before was busy enough, Bailey thought, but it seemed to be busier this night.

Bailey, five days out of high school, had worked at the club for more than a year, helping support his widowed mother and three younger brothers still living at home. But he was souring on the $1.20-an-hour job. "They don't tell you anything. They just put you out there to work."

HE WAS one of 300 employes at the entertainment palace, serving more than 4,500 customers some nights. During its 40 years, the club claimed to be "The Showplace of the Nation." In its heyday, casinos whirred and feather-costumed showgirls pranced Parisian style.

The aura ebbed in 1952 when coonskin-capped Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee cracked down on gambling.

With betting gone, the nightclub — Southgate's major industry — withered. It was revived in the 1960s by Richard Schilling, a local nightclub king. Fire of unknown origin ravaged the club in 1970, and Schilling rebuilt immediately, doubling the size, including a chapel and reception rooms. There were no deaths in the earlier fire.

The swank complex became a labyrinth of assorted rooms to accommodate big and small parties. Its crown jewel was the Cabaret Room.

The Doctors and Aunt Tess hurried through their meal. Bernie was miffed that his fish was fried rather than broiled. It wasn't good for him. They moved to the Cabaret where seats cost $8.50. It was 7:05. Early, he thought. But Doctor was shocked when he found the room jammed. His seats were 10 feet from the right side of the stage.

"We were sitting like sardines. It was a shame the way they packed us in there. I had to fidget around just to get my butt comfortable," he said.

UP THE corridor in the Zebra Room, Larry Hall and Margaret Seifert celebrated after their wedding in the chapel. The cool air turned hot and sticky as the reception wore on.

Finally, the groom's father, Oran Hall, recalls, "My wife said she was so hot she would have to leave. We started to sweat. It got so hot we asked the waitress to see if the air conditioner was off. She never came back."

The heat was too much for the partygoers. They left. The door was closed.

The Atlanta investigators said the Zebra Room was cool on one side and hot on the side where the fire was moving up a steel I-beam behind heavily plastered walls. They said the beam acted as a chimney and the fire eventually reached the club's attic space, where it spread to above the Cabaret Room.

IN THE Cabaret, meanwhile, Doctor sipped a $1.30 soft drink at his table and remembers whistling to himself. "It was the craziest thing," he said. "I remember thinking 'My God. What would happen if there was a fire?' "

It was past 8:30. Stragglers were filling the few remaining seats. The audience of 900 grew impatient.

Singer Davidson, 35-year-old son of a Baptist minister, relaxed in a second-floor waiting room.

One floor below a waitress smelled smoke. She called for help. It was 8:45.

Walter Bailey, a tray in his hand, watched the comedians in the Cabaret who started the performance minutes earlier. The waitress dashed over to him in the darkened theatre with a whispered message.

He rushed to the corridor where thick, black smoke billowed from beneath the Zebra Room. A queasy feeling built in Bailey's stomach. He raced to the Cabaret. It was 9:02.

COUNTY dispatcher Howard Froelicher was reading the paper when the telephone rang. Fire at Beverly Hills Supper Club!

He pressed a button on the plastic communications console before him. Sirens wailed, alerting the volunteer fire fighters in this community of 3,500.

Gripped in sweat, Bailey was back in the Cabaret. He went to the woman in charge.

"I asked her if I could go to the stage and tell everybody to get out. She didn't say anything, so I did it anyway," Bailey said.

He walked on as the comedy team watched curiously. He took a microphone. "He talked calmly, but he was shaking," one comic said.

Bailey tried to disguise the urgency of his mission. He pointed to the exits. He never said fire — until the end.

"Some guys were laughing," Bailey said. "They thought I was part of the act." He wasn't. Fire trucks were leaving the engine house.

DOCTOR remembers hearing a near-chant spread through the room when Bailey was finished: "Everyone was saying, 'Don't panic. Walk slowly.' " Bailey led a large group toward the rear exit.

Doctor started to leave: "We were walking and laughing. But the minute we got into the hallway, all hell broke loose."

Raging flames from the Zebra Room slipped through the air-conditioning into the Cabaret, igniting the decorated ceiling. Pandemonium broke. The two groups became mobs lurching toward exits.

The hot blasts incinerated the room within minutes. Flames danced on cushioned chairs. Elegant evening gowns ignited. Temperatures soared to more than 1,000 degrees.

Cries of agony poured from the burning building.

A human logjam plugged the rear door. A pursuing wall of fire ate what oxygen remained for those inside.

CINCINNATI Fire Capt. Peter Sabino, that night a patron, scrambled out an exit.

"I ran over and they suddenly quit coming out," Sabino said. "I heard screaming. I looked in and saw a double door. This is where the nightmare hit me.

"All I saw was arms and heads stacked up like cordwood. Some were waving."

Bailey watched in horror. He rushed to the door and tugged at shirt sleeves, ties and arms to free more people. Sabino started mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Fire fighters began to arrive.

Davidson, warned by a drummer, fled the south exit, holding the door for violinist Cianciola, the last band member to escape. He and others carried their instruments.

Harold Penwell earned a Silver Star in Vietnam for saving 14 lives. When the stampede for the exit began, he pulled his mother forward. She popped out of the building, choking for air. He watched his wife escape. Then he turned to help others. In seconds he was dead.

A WRONG turn in a darkened hall meant death. A woman stopped to catch her breath, felt a chair, and sat down. Firemen found her body the next day — upright in the chair. She had suffocated.

Bernie Doctor was twisted around backwards in the milling mob when he reached the exit. He tumbled down the steep stairs, hitting the ground hard as he rolled down the grassy hillside.

He screamed for Rose and Aunt Tess. They answered. He saw Davidson weeping nearby.

He clutched his chest in fear. His heart was thumping dangerously. Fumbling, he reached inside his scorched suit, found a tablet tin and popped a nitroglycerin pill under his tongue.

He reached to his throat for his Star of David. "I grabbed it and kissed it. I thanked God many times."

Teton Dam town thanks volunteers

REXBURG, Idaho (AP) — If it hadn't been for the 50,000 volunteers who put in one million manhours after the collapse of the Teton Dam, Rexburg might not have gotten out of the mud.

This weekend, the first anniversary of the flood that killed 11 persons and left thousands homeless, the people of Rexburg welcomed back the volunteer workers who helped them put their lives back together.

The dam collapsed June 5, 1976, as it was being filled for the first time. The anniversary commemoration — dubbed Volunteer Appreciation Day — was held Saturday, rather than Sunday, in deference to the Sabbath.

Buses wound around the city, taking visitors on tours of the area. Souvenir buttons and commemorative programs were sold. Politicians came to town.

No one knew exactly how many volunteers showed up. Many of them stayed with the families they had befriended.

It was estimated that the volunteers contributed $10 million worth of labor to this community of 10,000 until the federal government moved in with cleanup and reimbursement money.

"If it hadn't been for the volunteers, I might have moved and set up business elsewhere," said local businessman Jim Morris.

Mark Ricks, a regional representative of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), said the volunteers brought encouragement to flood victims so stunned and shocked by the disaster that they didn't know where to begin.

Ricks said few people suffered serious emotional problems as a result of the flood.

"Work is good therapy for people. We promoted that right from the start," said Ricks.

Today new homes and businesses are springing up in communities hit by the flood. Officials said destroyed homes which had a market value of $12,000 to $15,000 are being replaced through federal funds by dwellings valued up to $60,000, considered the replacement value.

'Minor quake' shakes North

PITTSBURG (AP) — A minor earthquake jolted residents near here Saturday afternoon, but no injuries or damage were reported.

The quake, which measured 3.8 on the Richter scale, was centered about ten miles northeast of this city and about 30 miles northeast of Berkeley, said Bob Uhrhammer, assistant research seismologist at UC's Seismograph Station.

Uhrhammer estimated the shaking, which occured about 2:01 p.m., could have easily been felt over a range of 30 miles.

Radio station KVON in Napa reported receiving about 20 telephone calls from residents in Napa and Yountville who felt "their houses shaking."

Secret Witness case summaries

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 75 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $51,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I,P-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Camilla Stassi, 20-year-old coed found raped and stabbed to death in her Long Beach apartment in the 500 block of W. Eighth St. on the night of Jan. 17, 1977.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of two masked bandits who held up the manager and clerk at Eddie's Liquor Store, 301 Market St., at 7 a.m. on April 25, 1977, and fled with the loot in the manager's car.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Antonio Magallon, 39, shot to death by unknown assailants following an argument outside his Wilmington home in the 100 block of West D Street at 11:30 p.m. on April 1, 1977.

—Rewards totaling $6,000 to $12,000, depending on the offense, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the disappearance of Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, last seen Oct. 22 when he was checking on some owned property on Cedar Avenue. Secret Witness guarantees a $1,000 reward for a kidnap conviction and $2,000 for a murder conviction. The victim's father, Dr. Allan Snider, has pledged $5,000 for a kidnap conviction and $10,000 for a murder conviction.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans Avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

—A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Samuel Law, 23, formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrest, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a woman manager in another. Mack is a black man 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 26 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

'Fat cats' quiet in '76 elections

By Don McLeod
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — The presidential elections last year cost almost $114 million. Uncle Sam provided most of it, small donors much of the rest and the "fat cats" of former times were pretty much out of it because of the new election finance laws.

These are the conclusions from an analysis of 1976 presidential campaign finances released Saturday by the Federal Election Commission and covering 23 candidates.

There were 13 Democrats who qualified for matching federal funds in the presidential primaries by first raising $100,000 in private contributions consisting of at least $5,000 in each of 20 states in amounts of no more than $250 per donor.

These 13 candidates received a total of $39.6 million from all sources. The Presidential Election Campaign Fund, financed by the taxpayers, supplied 37 per cent of it, or $14.5 million.

Only two Republicans qualified for matching funds in the primaries. President Gerald R. Ford and Ronald Reagan raised $28.3 million between them, including $9.7 million put up by the U.S. Treasury.

Public and private funds raised by the 15 major party candidates in the primaries totaled $67,867,624, the FEC said.

In a marked departure from past practice, 51.3 per cent of the money raised by major party presidential candidates from private sources was given by donors of $100 or less.

At the other end of the scale was the mere 1 per cent of Republican primary money contributed from non-party political committees, the so-called special interest groups. The Democratic receipts from these groups totaled only 2 per cent.

These new aspects of campaign financing reflect the post-Watergate election reform laws which prohibit a donor from giving more than $1,000 to a presidential candidate. Although non-party committees could give up to $5,000 each, few did.

Political finance experts also attribute the change to the publicity spotlight put on presidential races by Watergate and other 1972 election scandals. They say the combination drove the special-interest money out of presidential elections and into congressional races.

It has been estimated that such groups gave more than $22 million to congressional candidates last year, almost double their 1974 total.

In addition to the 1976 Democratic and Republican presidential nominees on the general election ballot, there were eight third-party or independent candidates in at least 10 states and they reported raising $2.1 million, all from private sources.

The 10 general election candidates received $46,118,867 for their races from public and private sources, raising the grand total for the 1976 presidential derby to $113,986,491.

Ford and Democrat Jimmy Carter were each given $21,820,000 for their fall campaigns from the federal fund built by income tax checkoff dollars. Each also raised small amounts of private money to defray legal and accounting costs, the only private gifts allowed in the general election.

Of the almost $114 million raised for primaries and the general election by all 23 candidates, the federal government provided 60 per cent, or $67.9 million.

Top aide to Amin defects

accounts, news reached Kyemba in Geneva that Amin had heard rumors he planned to defect, and members of Kyemba's family were arrested.

The account added that Kyemba called a news conference in Geneva and proclaimed his loyalty to Amin, who seemed gratified and freed Kyemba's family. The family then fled by taxi and on foot across the border to Kenya, the Sunday Times added.

Once Kyemba knew his son Henry, 6, and daughter Susan, 5, were safe in Nairobi, he slipped out of Geneva to London, Miller wrote.

Miller quoted Kyemba as saying he started planning his escape after he saw the bullet-riddled bodies of Archbishop Luwum and the two cabinet ministers after their deaths on Feb. 16.

"Miller's account said that as minister of health, Kyemba went to the morgue at Mulago Hospital to confirm his suspicions about the deaths.

The Ugandan government alleged at the time that the archbishop was implicated in a plot against the security of Uganda. The two cabinet members who were arrested were Arphaxed (Charles) Oboth-Ofumbi, minister of internal affairs, and Lt. Col. Erinayo Wilson Oryema, minister of land and water resources. They were arrested pending what Ugandan authorities said was an "investigation into their role in the plan to create chaos in the country."

Their deaths brought international protests. Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, denounced them as assassinations.

As for Mrs. Bloch, Kyemba said in his first-person account that he was "unwittingly responsible" for her death because he could have discharged her from the hospital on July 3 before Israeli commandos arrived to rescue the hijack hostages.

"Instead, as an act of ill-fated kindness, I decided to let her spend one last night in the comfort of a bed. . . . " Kyemba was quoted as saying. "She was, after all, 73 years old, and the hostages were sleeping on the stone floor of the old airport building."

After the raid, he said, two agents seized her from the hospital room and dragged her "still screaming and struggling" to two waiting cars outside.

He added that he later met Amin, who told him: "Oh, by the way, you know that woman? Forget her. They have already finished her."

Kyemba said villagers later found the body and buried it.

Another London newspaper, the Observer, quoted an Italian doctor who had worked at the Mulago hospital as saying Mrs. Bloch probably was strangled as she was taken from her room.

It attributed its report to Dr. C.A. Bonnini, 38, now an assistant surgeon at St. Matthew Hospital in Pavia, Italy, who had spent two years at the Mulago facility.

Mrs. Bloch had been admitted to the hospital after she swallowed a piece of chicken bone.

Bonnini was quoted as saying that shortly after the Entebbe raid the British charge d'affaires feared for Mrs. Bloch's life and asked him to search the wards for her.

Foreboding on airliner badly, but the captain came on and said to remain calm that we'd be all right. It was a very smooth landing."

AFTER THE passengers had been told to lower their heads and grab their ankles, one man sitting in the rear of the plane lifted his head for a glimpse of the damaged wing.

Another passenger recalled that out of the silence came the shout, "Get your head down, goddammit!" Then the silence resumed.

Smith, a frequent guest on the "Tonight" show, was in Tucson for a conference on hyperactive children. He had been scheduled to fly to Los Angeles to tape some television shows, but said he was canceling the tapings and going home to Portland, Ore.

"THEY WANTED me to do those shows for free, anyway," Smith said.

Smith, a pediatrician, said that as the plane circled back for a landing he had a foreboding that "this was going to wind up with someone calling for a doctor, and here I am knowing nothing but how to hand out St. Joseph's aspirin and sing 'Nearer My God To Thee.'"

'Adapt the law to fit needs,' says Nixon

"necessarily a gray area," and argues that "there is no way in which these powers can be codified satisfactorily."

Claiming that there are nearly two centuries of American history supporting his view, Nixon said the nation must "place some faith" in the judgment of its presidents, and must give them "room for maneuver."

The statement does not analyze the checks that may exist, constitutionally, upon the use of such discretion by presidents.

At one point, he does say a president "can and should be held accountable" for the judgments he makes.

At another point, he says that "the laws serve as a constraint on presidents as they do on all other officials and all other citizens."

But the central theme of his argument is that the Constitution and the laws of the country can only "protect against substantial abuse." He suggests that "no system, however circumscribed, can be perfect."

NIXON USES only two historic examples to illustrate what he means by "inherent powers," and one of those examples led to a Supreme Court decision that the president had acted unconstitutionally.

That was President Harry Truman's seizure of the steel mills during the Korean War, to insure that they would keep operating despite a labor strike.

While noting that the Supreme Court had overruled Truman, Nixon's statement dwells on the dissent in that case.

The other example he chose was President Thomas Jefferson's decision to make the Louisiana Purchase — a decision which, Nixon says, "history ratified."

Nixon's statement is more a discussion of his views than an attempt to answer his critics directly.

At one point, though, he does take on his critics, suggesting that they only disapproved of broad power when he used it.

"Many of my critics," he says, "construed the powers more broadly when Franklin Roosevelt or Harry Truman was president, and more narrowly when I was president...the debate often turns less on what the powers are than on who happens to be exercising them."

Wishon talks on retirement

tirement since the first of the year. We have some property in the mountains and wanted to spend some time there. I was spending much of my time up there and keeping this place vacant here, so we decided to sell it. We had plenty of time to do that, but it sold in two days. I want to do some building up there, a woodshop and darkroom. When it's fourth down, you've got to punt.

Q. What do you want to be remembered for?

A. This is the first time in 54 years that there hasn't been a Wishon on the Long Beach Police Department. We were the first father and son combination on the department. My father retired as an inspector. I'd like to be remembered for making the patrol division a more enjoyable place to work. Before you always transferred "down" to patrol—now it's "up."

Q. Chief Ralph Kortz said he was retiring because (formerly) police work was fun. Then it stopped being fun. Is that what happened with you?

A. It's true. You can only invent the wheel so many times.

Q. Is there anything you would have liked to see enacted before you left?

A. No, we've got a damn good department. We made the full circle. We have neighborhood policing now, where officers and the community get together and discuss problems. We used to do that every night on the beat. It's a good concept.

We're a little short of manpower, but that's been true ever since my dad came on the force. One of the things I've found is that we've got the same bitches now as when he first started. When I was 4 years old, he'd come home and bitch about the uniforms, "The chief said this," or "The chief said that; why won't they let us plan this or that?" It's the same thing now as it was then.

Q. How's morale?

A. It's good. We have good captains and lieutenants and excellent sergeants.

Q. What's going to happen if an outsider is appointed chief? Would that have an adverse effect?

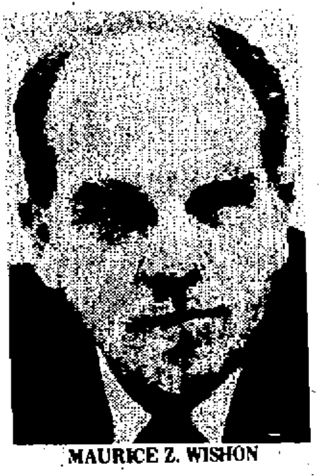
A. Sure. It's like everyone has a chance to be president of the United States. You know it's a bunch of crap, but you believe it. It's the same with being chief. Everyone wants the chance to be chief, but it just doesn't happen much any more.



MAURICE Z. WISHON

Q. Has Chief Calkins shown the ability to adapt to Long Beach police?

A. Yes. He's lived in Long Beach a while. He has some rapport, some feeling for the city.

Q. Has the department been affected by new City Manager John Dever?

A. Oh, yeah. By moving the motor officers, this has an effect on a certain amount of men because it changes money and hours, and it spills over to the men they come in contact with. It isn't something that can't be overcome. I think some of the guys now are finding out it's kind of fun to do police work again. When I started the four day week, wives called me on the phone to complain — they didn't like the idea. It wasn't two months later that the same wives called me and said: "This is great. The bathroom is painted; the living room is painted . . . " It's the same thing here. People will adjust to it.

Q. How big a factor was former City Manager John Mansell in the department?

A. John was a friend of mine, a golfing partner. He dealt on more of a personal basis with us. He'd called me up and say, "Hey, Maurey, what about this . . . ?" He wouldn't go through the chief, so I had to go to the chief and say, "Hey, John just called me and chewed my butt out. . . . " Dever's not going to do that. He'll go through the chief, and that's how it should be. But it was comfortable with John. I could call him up and ask what the hell was going on. I don't think you can do that with Dever.

Q. You started on the streets, didn't you?

A. On the beat, right. We had four beats then. We had the West Coast beat, the post office beat, the station beat and the dog trail beat. Very scientific. The West Coast was near the West Coast theater. The post office was near the post office. The station beat was around the station — but don't ask me how the hell the dog trail ever got it's name. I don't know.

Q. Have rookie patrolmen changed since you started?

A. Oh, yeah. I worked for the Ford Motor Co. one day, and the next day I was on the beat. Fortunately for me, my dad had been on a long time, so I knew a little about what to do. The guys now are highly educated and equipped to handle a lot more problems than they used to.

My beat used to be from Cherry to the east city limits, south of Willow. If you worked North Long Beach and you found a couple of bums walking down the boulevard, we'd say, "Hey, where you going?" If they were just coming in, we just took them to the Compton city line and dropped them off. Now you'd have a civil rights suit for that.

Q. You must have a mental scrapbook of your career — is there anything that really stands out?

A. I was in the dicks (detectives) bureau for 20 years, and I had some good associates, good experiences. I handled the first case in Long Beach court where the discovery rule was used — we had to turn all our evidence over to the defense. That was a traumatic experience. Always before we'd sit there with our briefcase against our chest and the defense wouldn't know what the hell was going on.

Q. Did you win the case?

A. Oh, yeah. (Winks.) We always won our cases.

Q. How did you keep yourself from becoming jaundiced on the job about court decisions — the man who was sentenced to serve weekends in jail for rape, for instance?

A. I figured that was not my problem. My dad told me my job was law enforcement up to the courtroom door, and then it was somebody else's. You get upset — but my job as a policeman is to catch the thief. If I don't get him now, I'll get him later.

Q. Do you have any regrets at not becoming a chief?

A. No, but I don't want to say I didn't want to go to the top. That would be ridiculous. I had the job I liked. I was the first deputy chief of patrol. I was closer to more people as deputy chief than I would have been as chief.

Cadets ousted for cheating to return

By James Feron
New York Times Service

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Two-thirds of the West Point cadets ousted in last year's cheating scandal will be returning later this month after spending their time as Army privates, college seniors, pizza-stand operators or short-order cooks.

Ninety-six of the 151 cadets who left under an Army leniency plan that acknowledged the U.S. Military Academy's own shortcomings will resume their training after six months to a year of self-selected work or study programs, which were broadly supervised by the Army.

But the Academy has changed as much as West Point officers believe the cadets have. The new procedures, many of them imposed on the 175-year-old institution under official pressure, will require that the returnees be given special briefings to bring them up to date.

THEY will learn that the honor system has been completely revamped, with due process now a crucial element. Cadets may now violate the honor code without being expelled. Teaching procedures have been modified, and take-home examinations of the type that led to the cheating scandal have been eliminated.

It has been a year of other changes for West Point. One innovation, the admission of women, will necessitate a special briefing for the returnees. A spokesman said they would be advised on how to relate to the women, who will become "yearlings," or second-year cadets, on Tuesday.

The returning cadets will go to the Academy on June 22 and 29 for resumption of training and, in the majority of cases, to face a grim summer course in Electrical Engineering, the subject that led to their downfall.

THE cheating, which many still maintain included hundreds of others who were not prosecuted, consisted mainly of what had become commonplace collaboration on a 10-part examination to be completed in the barracks. Cadets used each other's papers or suggested which pages of a textbook contained similar examples.

Actions by the Academy involving selection and prosecution of those allegedly involved, questionable legal and disciplinary procedures, and other actions long considered routine at West Point attracted the attention of Congress and led to major reforms.

The then secretary of the army, Martin R. Hoffmann, stepped in, however, even before the Academy's procedures had been fully evaluated by an impartial commission. He virtually guaranteed readmission of the implicated cadets under a supervised plan.

"Henry James could fill another 27 notebooks" with the stories of the ousted third-year cadets, said Col. Jack L. Capps, head of the Academy's English department, who headed the nine-member readmissions committee.

HE commented on the 15 cadets who had spent their time as Army privates, saying that the majority had achieved distinction — in one case under a lieutenant who had been a fellow cadet. The leadership ability instilled at West Point had quickly emerged, he said, with some former cadets being named "soldier of the month."

If their service in the lowest enlisted ranks was seen as positive outside the military establishment, the reactions of other soldiers and officers were different, Capps said. He indicated that the attitude was one of "live and let live," with the former cadets accepted on their merits even by those [illegible] West Point.

Many in the ousted group went to college, with five attaining bachelor's degrees during their civilian year. Each will receive another degree with his commission next summer as a member of the West Point class of 1978.

THE CADETS who chose to spend their year under broad Academy "supervision" engaged in a wide variety of work, from pumping gasoline to working as security guards.

The program was conceived as a compromise between the permanent expulsion that had been routine at West Point for violators of the honor code and immediate return if the proceedings leading to or including the expulsion had been found faulty.

Academy officials, under Hoffmann's guidelines, asked that cadets seek official approval for what became a special version of the junior year abroad, a time for reflection, perhaps. Although school or military service was recommended, almost any worthwhile and consistent endeavor by the ousted cadets seemed to have been sanctioned.

Two men spent their time working in an ordnance depot in Annapolis. "They were tabulating data on radar equipment," Capps said, "which is a bit ironic considering their background in E.E. 304," the electrical engineering course.

"WE found that one cadet wasn't getting our letters," he said, "because his parents were not forwarding them. They didn't want him to return. We reached him anyway and he is among those coming back."

A few followed the established procedures, maintaining contact with West Point until the Academy informed them that they were being invited back. "At that point they said, 'No thanks,'" Capps said, "apparently feeling they had proved a point."

Some cadets married in the interim, foreclosing any chance of returning, and some turned their backs on a military career almost immediately, declining to respond to any letter. Three former cadets became infamous among their peers, easing into a life of carefree pursuits in a Southern city.

The returning cadets will be "scattered" in cadet companies — although not the ones they left — for their senior year. "We would like to integrate them as much as possible," said Maj. Miguel Monteverde, a West Point spokesman.

THEIR return has not met with universal approval, however, especially in the "receiving" class of 1978. This hostility surfaced briefly in an exchange of letters published in the last issue of Pointer View, the cadet newspaper, which has also been revamped to include controversial issues that were once ignored.

Robert Stackhouse III, who will graduate Wednesday with 729 other cadets in the depleted class, addressed next year's senior class in the newspaper, saying, "Many of you have expressed anger at the readmission and have complained that you will be tarnished by the presence of these cadets." He asked that the returnees be accepted with an open mind.

Cadet Mark B. Wroth said his class of 1978 did not need such lectures — they have also come officially from officers — although it was true, he said, that "many of my classmates, myself included, are not enthused about the readmission of cadets who have committed honor violations." He said he felt it was "a blot on the Academy."

THE strained feelings are also evident among the families of returning cadets. Calls to the homes of three such returnees selected at random, elicited three rejections by mothers: "We can't talk," "This is not a good time," and "He's not at home and won't be."

Capp said the readmission committee had consisted of four cadets, two each from the "losing" and "receiving" classes, and five officers representing the Academy's administrative, educational, legal and medical areas.

Of the 151 cadets forced to leave because of the cheating scandal, 130 elected to make initial applications for return. Several others who had left for other honor violations during the same period accepted the same offer.

A total of 105 cadets eventually decided to seek readmission, of whom all but a few were accepted. Capp would not explain the rejections, except to say they dealt with "specific factors."

Jeff Davis' birthday observed

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Jefferson Davis' descendants gathered at the Confederate president's statue Saturday for a brief observance of his 169th birthday, pleased at the move to restore his citizenship.

"He gave a lot more to America than just as president of the Confederacy," said Jefferson Hayes-Davis III, great-great-grandson of the man who was also a U.S. congressman and senator, secretary of war and a hero of the Mexican War.

"It's good to hear the voice of a Jefferson Davis ringing through the hills again," said Frank E. Everett Jr., a Vicksburg attorney and emcee of the observance.

The event took place a day after Davis' birthday in the Vicksburg National Military Park, where his statue stands a civil-war cannon shot across the hills from the statue of Ulysses S. Grant, whose federals defeated Davis' grey-clad rebels in the 1863 siege of this Mississippi River town.

About 60 persons, seven of them direct descendants of Davis and his brother and sister, attended the ceremony in 90-degree heat.

"This would have been the sixteenth day of the siege, and it probably was as hot or hotter than today, and if they could stand it for 47 days, we can for a few minutes," Everett said.

"With time, some names that are known are forgotten, and some season with age and persist. And such a person is Jefferson Davis," Everett said. "As the years pass on, his name has enduring vitality."

Legislation to restore Davis' citizenship has cleared the U.S. Senate and is pending in the House. His great-great-grandson said in an interview that "it's about time.'

"Needless to say, it's certainly overdue," said Davis, a bearded San Francisco hotel comptroller.

His younger brother, Bertram Hayes-Davis, also said the legislation was "more a recognition of due worth."

"The realizaton that Jefferson Davis was not a traitor . . . is an important aspect of it," said Bertram Hayes-Davis, a Colorado Springs, Colo., resident who is a graduate student at the University of Alabama.

The Confederate president was born in Kentucky, but spent most of his life in Mississippi, a part of it near Vicksburg, where his old homesite is now an island in the Mississippi River.

Jefferson and Bertram Hayes-Davis have a hyphenated name because their great grandmother, Jefferson Davis' daughter, persuaded the Mississippi Legislature to combine her married and maiden names into one.

Town haunted by psychopath killer of kids

The quintessential American scene: A pleasant, tree-shaded suburb. Nice place to raise children. Only this one is haunted by a psychopath who kills children. And over the past 15 months, a community has learned to live with fear and suspicion. The social costs are high.

CHILDREN LEAVING school in Birmingham, Mich., find there's safety — from a psychopath killer — in numbers. —AP Wirephoto

By Victoria Graham
Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. — Murder, a mosaic:

Ten-year-old Maureen Degen has bad dreams. She sees a man chasing Timmy King, her murdered classmate. She sees herself walking down a broad, leafy street. "And then a man grabs me and starts beating on me."

In class, she says, children still cry, and they dedicate playground games to Timmy King.

Maureen clips newspaper stories about Timmy's murder.

IT WASN'T only Timmy King.

Seven other children and teen-agers have been killed in the Detroit suburbs in the past 15 months. The man who killed Timmy in Birmingham almost certainly killed three other children — first playing a grim game of house.

The long investigation hasn't turned up the psychopath yet, but it has cast a shadow on the community, piercing the facade of many private lives. Nonetheless, every snippet of the detective work is zealously followed and discussed.

JIM Hauncher, supervisor of trace analysis and serology at a state police crime lab, reaches into a paper bag and pulls out a little boy's red hockey jacket, shoes and underpants.

"I can visualize Timmy King, a little bundle in the snow," he says. "I can tell you everything about him — height, weight, blood type, hair. But you can't relate that to a human being.

"It's at night that it gets me, when I can't sleep, when I see my own son sleeping. It could have been my own boy."

STEVE Erdodi was having Sunday brunch at Uncle John's Pancake House when he saw a man "with beady eyes" who resembled a sketch of Timmy King's suspected killer.

He sneaked to the telephone and found five women fretting over whether they, too, should call police. After fumbling, dropping pencils and dialing a wrong number, he called.

The man dashed out. Erdodi gave chase, leaping into his car and followed until police arrived. Wrong man.

"People stop me now and say I did a good thing, that it was good to get involved," says Erdodi, who runs an auto rustproofing shop.

A YOUNG special education consultant who never knew Timmy King is distressed because police questioned him about the slaying.

The man, who lives with another man and wants to remain anonymous, was reported in one of 10,000 tips about neighbors, friends and family.

He doesn't know who his accuser is, and he finds that frightening.

Murder has disrupted a way of life, destroyed a sense of suburban well-being and stolen children's innocence.

Life will not be the same in Oakland County for a long time. Spring seems to be withering, and summer does not bring the prospect of warmth. The community cannot take a vacation from fear.

Police compare their investigation to turning over a stone or a board in a meadow and finding things dank and unsavory.

Timmy King was the last victim, and police believe the person or persons who kidnaped and killed him also killed three other children — Mark Stebbins, 12, Ferndale; Jill Robinson, 12, Royal Oak; Kristine Mihelich, 10, Berkley. The three other crimes apparently are unrelated.

POLICE think the killer kidnaps the children, plays house with them for up to 19 days, then kills them. Three were smothered; one was shot in the face.

They were not beaten or bruised. They were well-fed, clean and warmly clothed. Their bodies were placed where they would be easily found.

Police believe all four crimes had a sexual denominator, but only the boys showed evidence of molestation.

"He must have a heck of a personality and he must love children," says Sgt. Joseph Krease of the Michigan State Police, the No. 2 man in the task force investigating the crimes.

"He's not your typical weirdo or child molester. He's somebody's neighbor."

According to a psychological profile, the killer is a man in his 20s or 30s who lives or works in Oakland County. He is intelligent and probably a white-collar worker.

"This is a collective trauma to the community. There is no parent or child in Oakland County who has not been affected," says Dr. Emanuel Tanay, forensic psychiatrist at Wayne State University who has consulted with investigators. "It will affect the community for years to come.

"It has a great impact on child rearing, and families have altered their behavior patterns to adapt to this situation."

MURDER has invaded the consciousness of very young children who play games about the killer and pretend they are detectives.

Tanay's 5½-year-old son, David, was pushing a wheelbarrow with friends near their home in fashionable Grosse Pointe. The children picked up bottle caps, pieces of wood and string and conferred solemnly over each.

David explained, "These are clues about the killer."

"We think about it every day and the children talk about it every day. You feel helpless," says Carol Degen, Maureen's mother, who has four other children.

Timmy had to walk past their house on the night he was abducted. The police searched their yard. "It could have been any home that night," Mrs. Degen said, "any kid going to the store to buy candy."

JIMMY Simpson, a bright, adventurous boy of 11, is a major casualty of fear. He is not alone.

He had to give up his fort on Squirrel Road, scene of a police stakeout. No longer can he walk to see his best friend, Joe. He is not allowed to go alone to a public restroom or to leave a movie for a drink of water in the lobby.

He does not play alone. And the boy who was an irrepressible wanderer has become docile and meticulous in reporting to his mother.

He's scared, but there's just a little bit of a thrill in all this commotion.

"I don't mind giving up the fort. I don't want to get killed," says Jimmy brightly.

"When we skateboard down the hill, if we see a stranger we roll off into a ditch. And we don't play flashlight tag at night any more without the big kids around.

"It never used to faze me when it got dark. Now I feel uneasy. And I don't trust people so much anymore."

On a church retreat at Turtle Lake, Jimmy Simpson and his friends sat in a cabin at night and talked about the killer.

"We all talked about what we'd do to him," he recalls with some relish. "If I was a big guy, I'd hang him by the feet from the rafters in Pontiac Stadium. And we'd shoot him with a .22 and make him suffer."

The social cost for children is high:

—Maureen Degen had to learn the meaning of "molest" and "sick."

—Sarah Parker was taken off school safety-guard duty during the month of April because she had to stand alone.

—A young girl wandered away from her mother in a gift shop. The mother shouted, "Come back here! Do you want him to get you, too?"

—Kate O'Brien, 5, was afraid of the dark and woke up crying. She was afraid the killer was going to invade her home and take her away.

—The sign says "Stranger" and Patrick O'Brien, Kate's 12-year-old brother, hangs it around his neck. He walks up to a classmate and says, "Hi, if you come with me I'll buy you a bike." The boy runs. The class cheers. Now Patrick practices running from the stranger.

CEOLA O'Brien drives home the new message by role-playing with her children — Kate, Colin, Patrick and Shannon — in their home. She poses as a doctor, priest, man, policeman, teacher, and tries to entice them.

"Pretend you're in a parking lot," she says. "I'm a policeman and I say, 'Your mommie is sick and I'm supposed to take you to her.' What do you do?"

"Oh, we'd go," Patrick said. "You told us if we were ever lost to find the policeman."

"And I said, 'No, you mustn't. This is special. You can't even trust the policeman.' It's confusing for them. Who do you trust?"

Mrs. O'Brien says she doesn't want her children to be paranoid. "I'm really sorry to tell you this. I hate it," she says. "But you have to know. And when this person is caught, things will be different."

Killer plays house first with victims

cial service agency in Birmingham, conducts training and briefing sessions for parents, teachers and children. The children role-play with the cardboard "stranger" sign. They talk out their fears and frustrations.

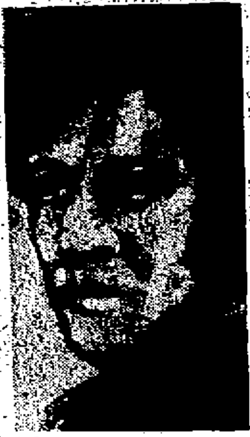
When the case is solved, or the tension is relaxed, Common Ground spokesmen say the children will have to be "debriefed."

In a thousand ways, although the first rush of fear has subsided, more than family life has changed.

Some girls don't like to babysit, and children are afraid of the babysitter.

Maintenance men can't walk into some schools without special introductions or escorts. Meter readers and utility company linemen carry composite sketches of the suspected killer.

There are neighborhood watches and CB radio patrols. There are pamphlets and booklets and placemats about safety. One woman designed a $5 T-shirt reading: "I will not talk to strangers."



THE FACE that haunts a community — composite sketch of suspected killer of at least four children.

THE investigation is intricate and bizarre, sometimes lurid, sometimes with traces of comedy.

Psychics call the task force with visions: There's a cottage with a coffin inside. A fish with bubbles coming from the gills. A man with a pumpkin head driving a blue Gremlin.

Some people have been stopped more than 20 times because police think a blue Gremlin may have been involved in the abduction. Five walls at the task force headquarters are covered with computer printouts of blue Gremlin registrations.

Theorists and murder afficionados come forth: The crimes are connected with snowfall. He's laying out the bodies in a diamond pattern. He's playing a strange game of poker.

Everyone has a theory: He's a priest, an undertaker, a doctor, a policeman, a teacher, a social worker, a caretaker.

"We are unavoidably encouraging a kind of paranoid attitude which is disruptive to the whole social process," says Dr. Tanay.

"USUALLY it's hard to get people to come forward." Not now.

"People call and say, 'Maybe I shouldn't be telling you this, but I think a man who is a friend would be capable of this.'

"No doubt it's not the best thing for the community, having neighbors suspicious of neighbors, friends of friends, employers of employes and vice versa," Kresse says. "But it's necessary to have this kind of personal involvement because the killer is not an obvious character."

There are tips about the quiet man who lives alone, the man with a male roommate, the man who keeps the shades drawn, the man who was always a little strange, the man no one ever liked.

Mrs. Degen said she told police to check out a "weird" woman who rented to men and had a blue Gremlin parked outside.

Lisa Kaichen said she urged a friend to report the man who once wrote a love letter about purity to the friend's young daughter.

Women turn in estranged boyfriends and ex-husbands. One woman said her former husband once fondled her 15-year-old daughter. A woman turned in her nephew as a homosexual.

THE investigation becomes lurid as police interview "chicken hawks" — boy prostitutes — about men who've picked them up. They ask owners of adult bookstores about suspicious clients.

Every known sex deviate or flasher is checked, and in the course of the investigation police have made numerous arrests.

"We're sterilizing this community," says Birmingham Police Chief Jerry Tobin, formerly with the Detroit vice squad.

"I thought I had come across a lot of perverted things before," he said. "But not such things involving children. If you knew what I know . . .

"People in prominent places have this defect. A minister who prefers little boys. Relatives with skeletons in the closet tell me, 'He molested my child and I never said anything until now, but now I must say something.'

"It's amazing how sick the world is."

WHEN A task force detective knocks on the door these days, it sometimes sends people into tailspins.

"They know you're not there for a social visit," says Det. Sgt. Louis Orlich of the Romeo police. "Sometimes people are so distressed they can't answer questions.

"They're so busy thinking, 'Who turned me in? Was it the guy downstairs? The girl I tried to put the make on? The man who never liked me?' "

And that knock on the door can mean a life disrupted in many ways. "The investigation is like a juggernaut," said one veteran investigator. "It rolls on and leaves a lot of lives to be picked up behind."

A homosexual called police to complain that because someone reported him, police interviewed people where he worked. He found work extremely uncomfortable.

ONE MAN, a substitute teacher in Birmingham, had been questioned several times because he bore some resemblance to the composite sketch. He declined to be interviewed, saying it was "too emotionally disturbing" and he "wanted to put it behind me."

Polly Carithers, director of information for Oakland schools, says two male friends of hers were in an emotional tailspin because police questioned them in the death of the two boys. The men, who live together, declined to be interviewed.

"There's more shattering going on than the deaths of children," Miss Carithers says. "If there's anyone you don't like or who is a little quirky — and who isn't? — you can turn them in.

"There is a dark side and witch hunt aspect to all this."

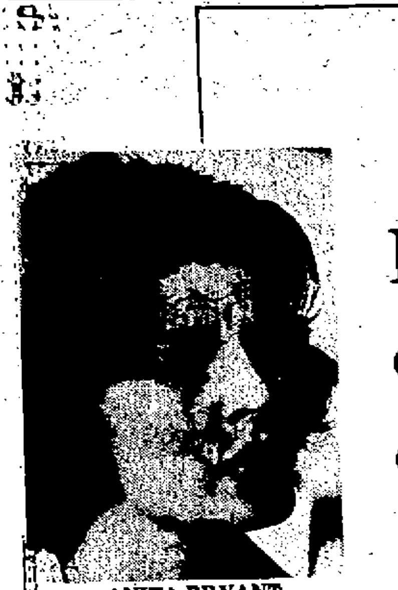
Nation watches crucial election on gay rights



ANITA BRYANT

By Theodore Stanger
Knight News Service

MIAMI — One of the most emotion-charged campaigns ever to confront an American voter will be decided by Dade County citizens Tuesday while the rest of the nation looks on with alarm, hope, amusement and intense curiosity.

The campaign is over gay rights, and it has all the ingredients — from sex to religion to Anita Bryant leading a "children's crusade" as she sings "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" — for a national media spectacular.

The media haven't missed their chance. The campaign has invaded television's "Today," "Tonight" and "Tomorrow" shows; Anita Bryant and placard-waving gays have made the cover of Newsweek; small-town Americans and urban gay communities have become passionately concerned with what happens at the polls in Miami.

But for many of the 200,000-plus persons expected to vote, the glamour and attention has done nothing to define the question. If anything, they have left many of them perplexed, confused, even indignant.

"IS THE GAY Rights Ordinance a human rights issue, a Christian and religious issue, or is it a moral issue?" asked Miamian Rose Weiss of the Metro Commission.

Her confusion originated with four words — "affectional or sexual preference" — added to the county's anti-discrimination ordinance in January when the commission adopted a proposal by new Commissioner Ruth Shack.

Those four words, lobbied into legislation by an increasingly activist gay community, caught the attention of Miami Beach resident Anita Bryant, a former Miss Oklahoma best known for selling Florida orange juice to national television audiences.

Miss Bryant and religious and political leaders pooled their indignation into the Save Our Children group that marched into churches and shopping centers to collect 62,000 signatures. That forced a referendum to repeal the so-called Gay Rights Ordinance.

Miss Bryant's campaign struck an exposed national nerve on the issue of homosexuality. Gay communities from New York to San Francisco rallied to the defense with Orange Juice boycotts, bumper stickers proclaiming "Anita Sucks Oranges," professional political organizers and a huge campaign treasure chest of more than $350,000.

NOW the intensely personal and often bitter campaign — frequently played out under the glare of hot television lights — is in its last 48 hours. Voters like Mrs. Weiss must decide whether to repeal or keep the 120-day-old measure, officially Dade County Ordinance 77-4.

Even the ballot question is confusing: People who oppose the ordinance must vote for repeal and those favoring the ordinance must vote against repeal.

Both the pro- and anti-repeal forces predict they will win. But there has been no independent poll to support either side. A simple majority of all votes cast is required to achieve or defeat repeal.

"We can really feel the support now. The vote for us and against Anita is building every day," said Robert Kunst, the most vocal Miami gay leader.

"I think we'll win by about 60-40 per cent," replied Coral Gables Councilman Robert Brake, who helped found Save Our Children with Miss Bryant and her Baptist pastor, the Rev. William Chapman.

"GOD WANTS us to confront evil everywhere," said Bryant in a recent interview. She said the backers of the rights ordinance "are tearing down what America is all about."

One yardstick of the campaign — contributions — favors the supporters of the rights ordinance by better than 2-1. Much of that money came through fund-raisers in New York City, San Francisco and Washington, D.C. — such as April's "Disco for Democracy" party in New York's Waldorf-Astoria.

The Dade County Coalition for Human Rights — headed by homosexual millionaire Jack Campbell, who owns a national chain of gay baths — has used its money to mount a smooth campaign from its Biscayne Boulevard headquarters decorated with campaign posters and 18th-Century French lithographs.

Local support for the rights ordinance came from attorney Marshall Harris, a State Board of (college) Regents member and former legislator. He formed his own group, the Greater Miami Coalition for Human Rights.

THE SAVE Our Children forces say they're not worried about such support for the ordinance because of their "bedrock" of churchgoers — the most prominent being Gov. Reubin Askew — who back their repeal drive. But the county organization of the governor's own Democratic Party oppose the repeal.

Much of the $140,000 raised by Save Our Children came from small towns like Correctionville, Iowa, Plainview, Tex., and Clam Gulch, Alaska. That grass-roots support plus large gifts from prominent residents, such as the $500 from Miami Dolphins general partner Joe Robbie and $1,000 from land investor Alec Courtelis, buoyed their victory hopes.

The referendum campaign now winding up with an 11th-hour media advertising campaign features ads in which Save Our Children stresses recruitment of children to homosexuality and the coalition emphasis on the loss of rights by other minorities if gays lose theirs.

The emotionalism of both sides generated so much controversy that most civic organizations and politicians kept their distance. One B'nai B'rith organization even called a special press conference just to announce it "takes no stand on the gay rights issue."

OTHERS, like Metro Mayor Steve Clark, opposed the ordinance because they didn't think homosexuals are discriminated against. Clark voted against the ordinance, saying he saw no proof of bias.

It was Miss Bryant's appearance — with Bible in hand — before Clark and Metro commissioners on Jan. 18 that exploded the issue onto front pages and television screens across the country.

She has remained the central figure ever since.

The 37-year-old mother of four spent most of the campaign at her spacious Miami Beach home, Villa Verde, sallying forth only on selected occasions.

Husband Bob Green, who is her manager and also treasurer of Save Our Children, said his wife decided not to forget "her duties as a mother" during the campaign.

Active or not, Miss Bryant continued to attract the most attention. In one local appearance for a "debate" with gay leader Kunst, she again got attention by singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" for her opening statement. That left Kunst nearly speechless.

MISS BRYANT has been the object of derision on "Anita, You're Dreaming" T-shirts and "Anita Sucks Oranges" bumper stickers. Kunst and other gay leaders, in fact, feel that Miss Bryant is the best thing that ever happened to the gay rights movement.

The campaign has been marked throughout by bitter feelings on both sides and accusations of "gutter" tactics.

The bad feelings pushed to the surface Friday when Mike Thompson, the most active of the Save Our Children representatives, showed up at a press conference given by the Dade County Coalition at their headquarters.

Thompson and other Save Our Children people had "crashed" other coalition events before. But this time New Yorker Ethan Geto, the coalition's tall, bearded and well-paid campaign manager, told Thompson to leave. When they saw television cameras concentrate on that incident and almost neglect the ensuing news conference, coalition officials admitted Thompson's ejection may have been a mistake.

THE ILL WILL started with Save Our Children's "child recruitment" arguments: that the ordinance will help gays to "convert" heterosexual children to homosexuality, especially in the schoolrooms.

The coalition, which rejects that as a "false" issue, countered by bringing in San Francisco Sheriff Richard Hongisto and nationally known psychiatrists and psychologists to testify that most child molestation is done by heterosexuals and that homosexuals do not recruit children.

"I could easily put together ads showing newspaper clips of heterosexuals molesting children. And I'd have 10 times as many clips," said Geto, referring to a Save Our Children ad.

Save Our Children also complained about the coalition's advertising campaign that linked rights for homosexuals with rights for other minorities, especially Jews. One television spot ad, for example, features actor Ed Asner saying that if homosexuals lose their rights, Jews might be next.

"I THINK it's totally reprehensible," said Save Our Children's Thompson, "to try to reopen the wounds that many (Jews) suffered personally or certainly through their families in (Hitler's) reign of terror. They're trying to frighten people. It's a bald attempt for votes."

"That's not even worthy of response," said Campbell of the Dade County Coalition. "If these people (Save Our Children) are able to take away the rights of one group, they're not going to be happy until they take others' rights away."

Dade County's electorally potent Jewish community is split over the issue. "We're terribly concerned by the schism in our community," said Richard Essen, board chairman of the Anti-Defamation League. His organization has taken no stand on the issue, although he does say, "We deplore the injection of appeals to religion."

The Dade County Coalition saw the Jewish community, especially in Miami Beach, as crucial to their campaign. The Jewish voters have a reputation for being liberal and for turning out in high numbers.

MISS BRYANT also apparently realized the importance of the Jewish vote when she attended a recent Miami Beach rally for Soviet Jews. Her children waved Israeli flags.

But Save Our Children strategists know that electoral salvation is in the 62,000 people who signed their petitions.

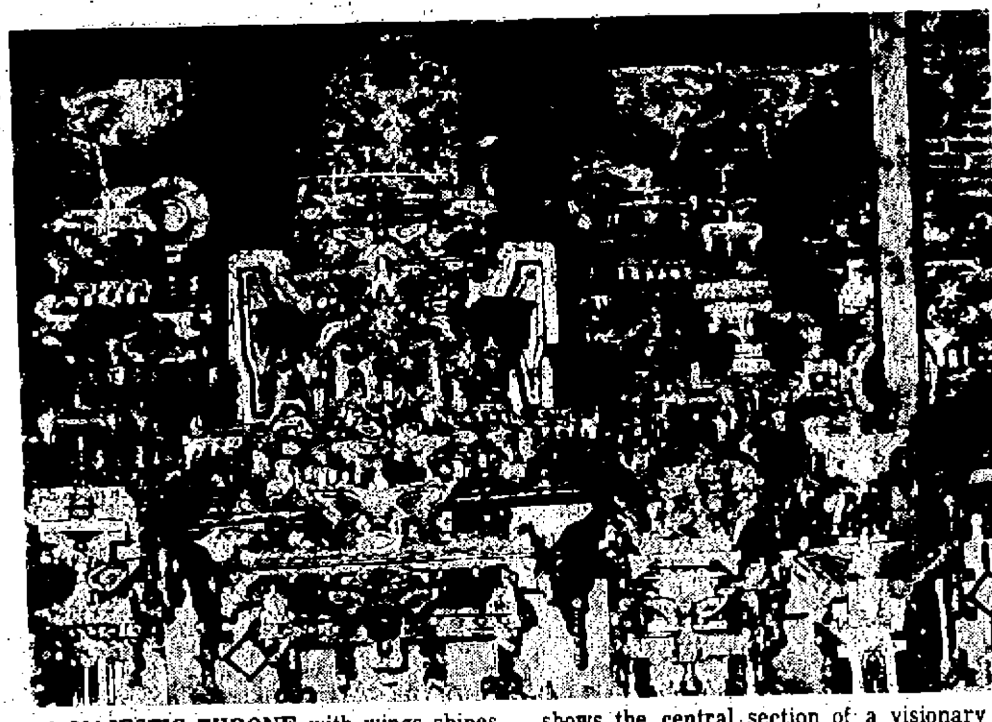
Janitor's junk fashioned into 'God's throne'

He was born in the South to a poor black preacher family. He migrated to Washington and died in the service of the federal government as a night janitor. Few knew him. But his legacy has stunned historians of American folk art. From castoffs he created "The Throne of the Third Heaven of the Nations Millenium General Assembly."



A MAJESTIC THRONE with wings shines out in a back alley garage in Washington, D.C. The photograph, taken in 1965, shows the central section of a visionary creation by James Hampton, a janitor, who used refuse he found while sweeping.

By [illegible]al Weaver
Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — James Hampton, born poor [illegible] black in the South, [illegible] a gentle, reclusive janitor who believed in miracles. Upon his death, one happened.

It wasn't the sort of awesome, spiritual resurrection he had envisioned.

Instead, it was the slow, quiet revival of a life's work, powerful in its human proportions. James Hampton, it turns out, had the gift of transforming janitor's junk into artist's gold. The miracle is that we know of it.

When he died 13 years ago in Washington, D.C., no one was around to say he knew James Hampton well. [illegible] bachelor janitor on the [illegible] shift, he was by all appearances one of this nation's obscure figures destined for oblivion.

THEN HIS landlord, told of the death, opened the door of Hampton's rented back-alley garage.

Within was a stunning assemblage of altars, chairs, tables, wall pieces, tablets and crowns. There were [illegible] objects, each incredibly ornate, gaudy, elaborately hand-crafted. They were coated in gold and silver foil that gave the [illegible] of a radiantly be[illegible] throne room.

[illegible] the centerpiece was [illegible] majestic throne with wings.

All of the objects were made from the refuse of a floor-sweeper's life: Discarded furniture and cardboard, burned-out lightbulbs, jelly glasses, cigarette boxes, desk blotters and aluminum foil retrieved in part from the bottles of winos.

HIDDEN away for the long years he worked on it, the shining work — considered by specialists a treasure of 20th Century folk art — still is virtually unknown to the American public.

But that may be changing. Three years of research by an art historian, Lynda Roscoe Hartigan, have begun to shed light on some of the mysteries of this janitor-artist and have taken his work from the shadows of a museum warehouse.

Last year the melange was exhibited in New York and Boston, and currently is on display at the Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts through Sept. 4. A permanent home is being prepared at the National Collection of Fine Arts in Washington.

The title of the work was scrawled on a garage blackboard by Hampton: "The Throne of the Third Heaven of the Nations Millenium General Assembly."

Mrs. Hartigan was an intern at the National Collection in 1974 when she first saw fragments of "The Throne" in several crates, but what she saw persuaded her that "it was what I wanted to work on."

Mrs. Hampton is now assistant curator for 20th Century Painting and Sculpture at the National Collection, part of the Smithsonian Institution. The "Throne" is one of its prize possessions.

If "The Throne" is to be categorized as folk art, says Mrs. Hartigan, "its most legitimate relatives are the idiosyncratic projects of people described as grass roots artists or naive and visionary artists."

BY SUCH terms "The Throne" is comparable to the uplifting Watts Towers of Los Angeles, which Sam Rodia made of concrete, railroad ties, bottles, cans, tiles and bailing wire, and the now-destroyed labyrinthine passageways which Clarence Schmidt constructed of mirrors, tinfoil, far, timber and oddments on Ohayo Mountain in Woodstock, N.Y.

But "The Throne" is different. It can be moved. And it is puzzling.

As Mrs. Hartigan unraveled the story of James Hampton, she found at its heart a deeply spiritual man who had visions. At one point Hampton wrote: "This is true that on Oct. 2, 1946, the great Virgin Mary and the Star of Bethlehem appeared over the nation's capitol."

From such inspiration — Hampton jotted down other visions as well — he spent the odd hours of the last 20 years of his life constructing "The Throne."

He never explained what he was doing. His writings are vague, some in an undecipherable script. Photographs were found of Hampton with his creation, but the person who took them is unidentified.

Hampton's work clearly is rooted in his own form of Christian vision, and it seems a celebration of life's castaways.

The centerpiece, a tinfoil-winged throne, is a sort of flophouse chair with cheap maroon upholstering. By its transformation into a throne for the Almighty it seems an affirmation of human potential.

"Clearly James Hampton built 'The Throne' as testimony to his faith in God and to insure his personal salvation," says Mrs. Hartigan. An analysis of the work's portentous title, she adds, "reveals the degree to which he was preparing for the imminently anticipated Second Coming."

THE IMAGE of a throne for God, she says, is central to the Book of Revelations, Hampton's favorite part of the Bible, and his preference to the Third Heaven is based on a hierarchy of heavens in the scriptures. The Third Heaven is "God's abode."

The final phrase of the title — "Nations Millenium General Assembly" — is more complicated, she says, but it also can be traced to the concept in Revelations of a millenium in which the nations are besieged by the devil, whom God vanquishes to create His kingdom.

Did Hampton have an earthly purpose for his creation, perhaps as a place of worship?

"I think he was building up to the point where others could use it. And he would be the one to show them," says Mrs. Hartigan. "Unfortunately his life was cut short before he could enter the next phase."

Hampton, born into rural poverty in Elloree, S.C., the son of an itinerant black gospel singer and preacher, died of cancer at the age of 55 in Washington, D.C., where he had moved and held odd jobs, finally as a federal government janitor after Army duty during World War II.

Most of his employment records were destroyed in a fire at a government building, but back at his bleak garage, the fate of his glittering work was more fortunate.

As Mrs. Hartigan recounts it, Myer Wertlieb, Hampton's landlord, had gotten glimpses of the work over the years. When Hampton died, Wertlieb called the Washington Post, which sent a reporter and photographer. Meanwhile, Wertlieb ran an ad to rent the garage space.

THE FIRST person to answer the ad was Ed Kelley, who happens to be a fine arts photographer with friends in the cultural community. He spread word of what he saw.

Censure for rape case judge sought

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A state senator Saturday said he has filed a complaint with the Wisconsin Judicial Commission against a judge who said during a rape case that permissiveness and women's revealing clothing were to blame for the sexual arousal of some young men.

The action by state Sen. Timothy Cullen — which could lead to censure but not removal from the bench — came as reaction continued to mount to the remarks by Dane County Judge Archie Simonson.

State Rep. David Clarenbach said he may initiate impeachment proceedings. A coalition of women's groups said 7,000 of the required 21,000 persons have signed petitions in three days demanding a recall election. The city council and county board have passed resolutions condemning the judge and the courthouse has been picketed by placard-carrying women wearing everything from bathrobes and nun's habits to [illegible] swimsuits.

Simonson, meanwhile, went on vacation Friday and refused further [illegible] comment on the rape case or his remarks.

However, his attorney, Richard Cates of Madison, said the judge has decided to release edited transcripts of the case. These transcripts will vindicate the judge and head off efforts to remove him from office, said Cates.

Scientists wing it in study of birds

CORNELL'S KEETON AND "GUINEA PIGEON"
—AP Wirephoto

By Joe Wing
of Associated Press

ITHACA, N.Y. — Blur their vision, eliminate landmarks, remove their peers, play tricks with time, light and sound. Scientists have done all these things and more and still don't know how birds find their way in the world.

As surely as the swallows return each year to Capistrano, researchers return from the field with fresh data and new theories. But clues have become so numerous, says one authority, Prof. William T. Keeton of Cornell University, that "in some ways we are more confused than ever.

"Obviously we must have a better understanding of the birds' sensory world."

After a period of frustration, scientists have made impressive progress in the past six or seven years and are far past the stage where "instinct" is the acceptable explanation for bird behavior.

Part of the problem is understanding how birds find paths across pathless skies is that they do not see, hear or feel things the way we do. Also, understanding avian navigation depends on combinations of factors that vary with weather conditions, the season, the species and the ages of birds, and the experience of individuals among them.

This complexity, says Dr. Keeton, discouraged investigators, because their observations failed to yield uniform results. But once again new theories are evolving from renewed scientific efforts.

This spring Cornell researchers reported that caged pigeons — the guinea pigs of the avian behavior laboratories — can sense "infrasound" caused by vibrations that human ears can't detect. Such sounds may travel thousands of miles without fading. Thus it might be possible for a bird to orient itself by the roar of some remote volcano, the rumble of far off heavy machinery or the surge of surf.

Experiments now in the works may clear up the question of whether birds use such sound.

Another promising lead came recently from Prof. Donald Griffin of Rockefeller University. He analyzed reports from balloonists and found that ordinary sound penetrates the silent skies more certainly than it spreads along the ground. Roger Pasquier of the American Museum of Natural History says this might help a night flyer to find marshes by the croaking of frogs, or seashores by the pounding of surf. But again it is not known whether birds use these clues or whether they are wiped out by background noises.

There is a possibility that birds have a super sense of smell to guide them to their breeding grounds, just as salmon follow their noses back to the streams of their birth. Prof. Floriano Papi of the University of Pisa will discuss this theory here this summer with American scientists who have been unable to duplicate his findings with similar experiments.

Another recent breakthrough, by Cornell scientists again, is evidence that birds, like bees, detect polarized light, enabling them to orient themselves by the sun even on overcast days.

The fact that birds at times do get their bearings by the sun was established long ago by a German, Gustav Kramer. He noted that starlings, when migratory madness hit them, clustered in a sunny cage according to the direcilon they would have flown if free. They then changed their postures when the sun's rays were deflected by mirrors.

Carrying the idea a step further, E.G.F. Saner showed that white throat warblers, caged in a European planetarium, were guided by the changing position of the stars at migration time. This was important because most small birds migrate at night.

Keeton and his associate, Dr. Melvin Kreithen, report that birds are so sensitive to barometric pressure that they can tell the difference at the floor and the ceiling of a room.

All this points to the conviction that birds use an array of clues in migration. And it presupposes that they have physical equivalents for instruments used by men to guide planes and ships across land and sea.

That is not all. Long ago the theory was proposed that birds are affected by the earth's magnetism. Although it appeared they were distracted on occasion by radio transmission, the thoery lost adherents.

About a decade ago, however, Dr. Wolfgang Wiltschko of Germany began a series of reports that migrating birds are affected by weak magnetic fields. Keeton found that pigeons were affected in like manner, and Dr. William Southern got similar results in Illinois with gulls. This year Dr. Ronald E. Larkin of Rockefeller University reported that birds are sensitive to magentic fields — such as the one that might be set up by the Navy's Seafarer project in Wisconsin to transmit radio messages.

Others thought that birds traced ancestral routes by following their parents. That's the way geese seem to do it. But not, for instance, the cowbirds, which are raised by foster parents of other species, or by the shore bird called a knot, which waits until its elders have departed before beginning its journey from the Arctic to South America.

Sharks cruise out like lambs

New York Times Service

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — As mysteriously as they arrived here three days ago, the sharks disappeared from Padre Island Saturday.

Crewmen on Coast Guard helicopters on early morning patrol reported spotting only three or four sharks in the waters where hundreds and, by some accounts, thousands of dangerous hammerheads and other species had cruised since Wednesday in languid circles as close as 20 yards from the long, white beaches of this Gulf Coast resort.

As word of their departure was passed, sighs of relief were doubtless breathed by the hotel managers who cater to the area's weekend vacation trade and by the local Chamber of Commerce, whose officials had been trying, as one said Friday, to keep the invasion "in perspective and not become alarmist."

The tourist industry had dismissed suggestions that the broad publicity given the bizarre marine phenomenon might frighten away the summer trade, and major hotels had predicted confidently that they would sell out this weekend like any other.

But before Saturday's welcome announcement by the Coast Guard that the sharks appeared to have vanished, rooms in several hotels were still unsold.

Resort owners gamely tried to make the best of the situation. At the Padre Island Beach Hotel Friday night, where Jon Fels, the general manager, said he had received a half-dozen cancellations the day before, "hammerhead wallbangers" were being served in the bar and "shark catcher's chowder," which waiters were quick to assure patrons contained no shark, was an addition to the dining room menu.

At Malaquite Beach, a major spa on the Padre Island National Seashore, lifeguards had responded to the appearance of the sharks by hoisting a yellow flag that cautioned swimmers to "use extreme safety in the water."

Although young men with bullhorns roamed the sand warning those within earshot of the potential danger, the National Park Service rangers who administer the beach never ordered that it be closed.

"THERE would be a great uproar from the public if we were to do that," Robert G. Whistler, the seashore's chief naturalist, said Friday. Asked whether he feared a similar outcry from the tourist operators, Whistler replied, "We don't worry about them."

Max Hancock, the chief ranger, said Malaquite Beach had not been closed because there had been no reports of attacks on bathers and because there had been "no indication of aggressiveness on the part of the sharks," something he said he did not expect "as long as there are adequate fish for them to eat."

Shark attacks in this area are uncommon, Hancock said, but he acknowledged that the hammerhead variety, of which some as large as 12-feet in length were seen by aerial spotters Friday, were "known for unprovoked attacks."

ESTIMATES of the shark influx given by the spotters, who crisscrossed the beaches in orange-and-white helicopters and light planes for much of the past three days, have ranged from several hundred sharks to 2,000 and more. Some spotters said they had simply given up attempting to count.

George Dominguez, 19, and Mark Gilliam, 16, who had come from nearby Rockport Friday, said they were standing in waist-high water about 50 yards from shore when a helicopter paused overhead.

"They called to us and said there were four six-footers between us and the beach," Gilliam said, and the two young men, both of whom appeared slightly shaken, scampered back to safety.

Their concern did not seem to be shared by Steve Larsen, a 26-year-old grocery executive from Houston who, alone among the curiosity seekers, was venturing into the surf with a fishing pole, hoping, he said, to snag a passing shark.

"Ah," Larsen said when asked if he wasn't a little nervous, "they don't want me, they want these things here," and he pointed to the still-wriggling mullet with which he was baiting his hook.

AS LARSEN waded back out for another try, Gilliam and Dominguez, their eyes wide, looked in amazement and shook their heads.

"I think he's wrong," Gilliam said. "I think sharks will bite you."

"I think they will, too," his friend agreed.

Shark fishing is a popular pastime here, though it is generally conducted from safer surroundings such as small boats or the Bob Hall Pier that stretches seaward from the northern end of the island.

The teeth and jawbones of the sharks are sold as novelties and the carcasses, some say, are purchased by restaurant chains that specialize in "fish" and chips. The pier was swarming with anglers Friday, but only a handful of sharks, the biggest weighing about a half-ton, was reported to have been caught.

ACCORDING to Faust Parker, a fish physiologist with the University of Texas Marine Science Institute here, the unusual convergence of sharks, which at its height reached for more than 20 miles along the Padre Island coast, was most likely due to unusual weather conditions here last week.

An unseasonal absence of wind, Parker said, had reduced the ocean currents along the coast to almost nil, with the result that the shrimp and crabs that proliferate in Corpus Christi Bay were pushed by the tide across the calm water toward the shore, instead of out to sea.

"A lot of predatory fish species came in to feed on them," he said, and they in turn attracted the hungry sharks which, other biologists have theorized, were passing this way on their annual eastward migration across the Gulf of Mexico.

Please don't water plants — they're getting welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has a welfare program for its potted plants, so please don't interfere by trying to help them through voluntary action.

So says a brief memo to employes in HEW Secretary Joseph Califano's office from his executive officer and sometime-bodyguard, Thomas L. Johns.

Addressed to all employes in the immediate office of the secretary, the memo said:

"Subject: Watering of Plants.

"Please do not water the plants in your offices. They are under a maintenance contract and will be taken care of properly."

It seems some office staffers had been watering the large tropical-appearing plants, such as cornstalk dracaena and schefflera, near their desks.

These freelance gardeners didn't know the watering duty is done by a private firm working under contract with the General Services Administration, the agency which maintains federal buildings.

Employes of the firm tend the plants after regular working hours. They recently found the plants had been watered by someone else. And that led to Johns' memo.

"More house plants are killed by drowning than ever died from thirst," said one horticulturist when informed of the agency's problem.

The GSA said the plants in question were placed as part of the design of the new HEW headquarters building, whose architect planned it according to the "open space" concept of office design.

The GSA pays the private firm $450 annually to care for 25 tropical plants in the HEW headquarters, the spokesman said. He added that similar contracts exist in newer government office buildings across the country and in many private buildings as well.

Throughout the Washington area, the GSA has 576 plants that are maintained by private contractors, costing an average of $1.50 per plant per month.

Mets treat 'Vets with heart' to ball game

NEW YORK (AP) — There were no sad faces at this reunion of veterans. Most were under the age of 10, and the reunion was a celebration of life.

Heart Day at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center Saturday was noisy and there were many speeches, but no one got up to leave. Not just because Joe Torre, new manager of the New York Mets' of baseball's National League, and outfielder Mike Vail were there, and not just because there was a big baseball game in Shea Stadium to come.

The occasion was a gathering of 700 persons who had had open-heart surgery, their parents and their doctors. Most of the young patients were alive because of the delicate surgery that had been performed.

"I feel pretty good," said Brian Beaudoin, 9, who has been on television to tell about his operation, one of the first valve replacements performed on a child.

The parents were a little wordier.

"Every mother and father here had to face the experience of being told by a doctor that their child would be dead without a risky operation," said Cliff Coppinger, father of Matthew, age 5.

The Mets donated seats to the group for Saturday's game with Philadelphia.

City farmers till slums

By Lee Mitgang
AP Urban Affairs Writer

NEW YORK — A vacant lot in the nation's worst slum is being turned into a vegetable garden by people tilling city soil as part of a new federal program.

In the midst of the rubble of the city's South Bronx section, a 70-by-60-foot plot of land has been cleared of trash and made ready for planting.

The farmers are mostly children, some from a nearby school for youngsters with drug-related and other problems. Their teacher, Naomi Barber, is moved to verse by the land they call "a farm in the Bronx."

There are also older faces behind the hoes spreading topsoil to make the vacant lot in this desperate neighborhood bloom with cabbages, eggplant, tomatoes, squash, collard greens and pole beans. Dottie — no one knows her last name — a Blackfoot Indian, occasionally walks out to the garden, fondles the new topsoil and raises her hands in prayer. Neighbors say she rarely had been seen outside her apartment before the garden came.

The $1.5 million program run by the U.S. Department of Agriculture is helping communities in New York and five other large cities grow food for themselves on vacant land.

The program is turning 800 vacant lots into gardens in New York. The same urban farming is going on in the slums of Los Angeles, Chicago, Houston, Detroit and Philadelphia.

"There are thousands of vacant lots where urban renewal programs were frozen, so you have rubble. An urban gardening program can clear them — change them from an eyesore to a symbol of community pride," says an aide to Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-Brooklyn, who sponsored the bill creating the 1977 Urban Gardening Program.

Richmond announced recently that the House agriculture appropriations subcommittee has decided to double the program to $3 million next year to include 10 more cities. The additional cities haven't been determined yet, but Richmond's spokesman said the list might include Newark, Boston and San Francisco.

The first goal of the program is to show inner-city residents the problems farmers have in growing produce and the techniques they use.

But the urban farming has its unique problems. Instead of clearing tree stumps, Bronx farmers start by clearing broken glass, garbage, and old building debris. Then the City Sanitation Department comes in to run over the plot with a bulldozer.

In Philadelphia, 2,000 to 3,000 families are working community gardens, says Libby Goldstein, who runs that city's program. "A family that likes vegetables might find it doesn't have to buy them for an entire summer. The main thing we find is a great sense of joy and pleasure in the community that 'We did it,'" she says.

In Philadelphia and other cities in the program, private firms and organizations have volunteered money for seeds, soil and fences. In most cases, the $1.5 million in federal money is to be used only to provide tools and to provide residents with expert advice.

First Pennsylvania Bank sponsors gardens in Philadelphia. Dutch Valley Growers, a Chicago firm, provided free onion sets there.

In East Harlem in New York, local merchants are helping raise donations to buy fencing for six vacant lots being cleared for gardening by 33 neighborhood children.

President's kin gets Redbook assignment

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's daughter-in-law, the former Judy Langford, has taken a job as a contributing editor of Redbook magazine.

Carter said Friday he had not been told in advance about his daughter-in-law's job, but he said he saw nothing wrong with it.

Mrs. Carter, discussing her new job, said she was pleased to be "working with a magazine dedicated to doing something positive for the women of this country."

Redbook said Mrs. Carter will work at home in Georgia where she is taking courses at Valdosta State College. Her first article will appear in the October issue.

She has been married to the President's eldest son, Jack, since 1971.

Press-Telegram Delivery: A Family Affair

For the Sullivans of Rossmoor, delivering the Press-Telegram is an event for the entire family and has been for years. Leona Sullivan got involved back in the days when her sons each had Press-Telegram routes. Now the routes belong to Leona, and sons Pat and Tim help out daily. Even her husband Frank gets involved on weekends.

Leona says it's easy work, especially when everyone pitches in. A couple hours each afternoon and the papers are delivered. Collecting's no problem either; her customers are prompt and most pay by mail.

The Sullivan's Press-Telegram delivery routes get the family together every day in a common chore . . . plus the extra money is building a tidy college fund for the boys.

By truck or car, by bike or foot. For the single, the couple, the family, retiree or college student. A Press-Telegram delivery route can mean $200, $300 or more each month for just a few hours work each day. Why don't you look into it?

Hostages reported OK

Mediators huddle on train with S. Moluccans

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Two South Moluccan mediators who boarded a hijacked train Saturday reported that they got assurances from South Moluccan terrorists that 55 hostages were "in fairly good condition."

Mediators Josina Soumokil and Dr. Hassan Tan spent about six hours on the train talking with the terrorists in an attempt to end the 12-day-old siege. They then went to the siege center in Assen and reported to Dutch authorities, said Toos Faber, a justice ministry spokeswoman.

Justice Ministry spokesman Wim van Leeuwen said a report of what the mediators said was rushed to the Hague where Prime Minister Joop den Uyl and other ministers were in emergency session.

The mediators walked through the section of the train where the hostages were held but did not speak to them.

Mrs. Faber said there was no decision on when the next meeting would take place. Referring to the two intermediaries as "contact persons," she said Tan relayed the report on the condition of the hostages.

Mrs. Faber quoted Tan as saying the terrorists were giving the best of care to a 23-year-old woman who is seven-months pregnant. They told Tan she had been given her own compartment on the train.

There was no indication if the mediators had made any progress toward ending the siege that began May 23 when one band of armed Moluccans seized the train while another group seized a school house at Bovensmilde on the outskirts of Assen. Four Moluccans continue to hold four teachers hostage at the school, but they were not directly involved in the negotations.

Reporters saw gunmen on the rear platform of the train wave goodbye to Mrs. Soumokil and Tan as they walked away from the train to a waiting car.

The terrorists ordered two extra meals sent aboard the train for the mediators. They dined on meatballs, potatoes and peas with the 7 to 10 young terrorists and their hostages.

"THERE ARE NO indications whatsoever on what went on or what was talked about during the last six hours," Mrs. Faber said.

Mrs. Soumokil, widow of a South Moluccan guerrilla leader, and Tan, a former minister in the self-styled South Moluccan "government-in-exile," had been escorted aboard the train in the early afternoon by three of the gunmen.

The gunmen ordered two extra dinners for the mediators during the negotiations.

Up to 10 gunmen are holding some 55 hostages aboard the train near Glimmen, eight miles north of this small Dutch city. Another four terrorists hold three teachers and a principal at the village school in Bovensmilde.

The gunmen in the school, who have not been taking part in the negotiations, also held 106 school children but released them last week after many fell ill.

On Friday, Dutch officials and the terrorists accepted Mrs. Soumokil and Tan as mediators after two days of telephone negotiations in which each side rejected the other's nominees.

Before boarding the train, the mediators huddled with government officials at the crisis center in Assen and at a command post near the train. Then they walked several hundred yards across an open field in view of the train before the gunmen emerged to escort them aboard.

Mrs. Soumokil's 24-year-old son, Tommy, is serving a seven-month jail sentence for his part in an abortive attempt to kidnap Queen Juliana in April 1975. He was one of the 21 jailed Moluccans whose release was one of the terrorists' chief demands.

Dutch sources said the terrorists have not mentioned that demand for several days, and they are no longer insisting that some of the hostages be flown out of the country with them. Government sources said a few of the 21 young Moluccans would rather finish out their sentences than leave with the terrorists.

Mrs. Soumokil's husband, Chris, was executed by the Indonesians in 1966 for his efforts on behalf of South Moluccan independence.

She helped negotiate an end to a 12-day-long train hijacking by South Moluccans in nearby Beilen in December 1975. The current hijacking passed its 12th day Saturday.

Early Saturday, some of the 2,000 police and troops surrounding the train were alarmed to see what appeared to be a cloud of smoke billowing from the last car.

Dr. Dick Mulder, an army psychiatrist who has handled much of the telephone contact with the terrorists, telephoned the Moluccan leader for an explanation and was told the gunmen were emptying fire extinguishers "just for fun."

Retirement age bills advanced

State and federal assaults against mandatory retirement practices were pressed by Long Beach legislators this week.

State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, announced passage by the Senate, 27-4, of his legislation, SB 130, which would raise the mandatory retirement age to 70 and which applies to both public and private employment.

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, testified before the House Education and Labor Subcommittee on Employment Opportunities in support of legislation which would extend provisions of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act to apply to all persons regardless of age. The act now applies only to those between 40 and 65 years old.

Hannaford's views also have been published in this month's edition of a national civil rights journal, Equal Opportunity Forum, and in an editorial reply he made on Channel 4 television, Los Angeles.

All shapes, sizes win awards in beauty race

A SPECIAL award went to the Central Area Neighborhood Facilities Center at Lemon Avenue and Rhea Sreet. Landscaping and totem pole type sculpture are outstanding features.

At its 15th annual awards presentation dinner Thursday night, Long Beach Beautiful, Inc., gave 28 awards, the greatest number in its history, in recognition of efforts to improve the city's appearance.

There were 11 business awards, 12 homes awards and 5 special awards. In addition, the judges named a sweepstakes award, a prize withheld last year, and announced a surprise award to an individual.

Mrs. Robert C. Wylder, president, said that the judges were so impressed with the continued improvement, maintenance and dramatic landscaping of the Burnett Library, 560 E. Hill St., that they singled it out for a second citation. The library won an award when it was dedicated in 1960.

Most surprised among the 125 persons attending the dinner at the Golden Sails Restaurant was the recipient of the extra award, Robert C. Wylder. He was commended for his continuing efforts, first to instigate, then to promote, the Organic Garden and the Recycling Center at Long Beach State University. Both won awards this year.

RON BELKIN, chairman of judges, with Bill Abate, Sherry Swan and Jeffrey Mann, visited sites which had been nominated by the public through phone calls and letters. They made their choices with no previous knowledge of the projects.

Belkin explained that criteria for judging were: upgrading and significant improvement of the area; landscape design which complements the building and parking area; aesthetically pleasing design; and outstanding and continued maintenance with paint, gardening and cleanliness.

As Mrs. Wylder described winners, colored slides of the projects were shown.

Three persons who shared the award for specialties in construction and development of Marina Pacifica Shopping Center were Steve Bagnall, Bill Abate and Bob Wolf. For remodeling an old market into a dual venture, Edwards Beverage Company and Polly's Coffee at 4618 E. Second St., Eddie Greenwald and Eddie Sheldrake took awards.

Imaginative land use and placement of the building of the Isabel Patterson Child Guidance Center, 5700 Atherton St., persuaded judges to give prizes to director Louise Maddox and architect Frank Sata.

ATTORNEY Lyman Lough saw a fountain in Christchurch, New Zealand, requested specifications and presented them to Long Beach State University where a replica of the fountain was constructed as

MR. AND MRS. Robert Gottfried created this Mediterranean style home at 3595 Pacific Ave., left, using stone and doing the work themselves. Above is Polly's Coffee Shop, 4618 E. Second St., which, with adjoining Edwards Beverage Company, won award for Eddie Greenwald and Eddie Sheldrake.

SINGER Doris Day and her husband, Barry Comden — a difference with her mother-in-law over her dogs.

Q: How true is it that Doris Day and her mother-in-law fight like cats and dogs?

A: Like cats over dogs is more like it. A current Hollywood story tells how Doris was invited to lunch at the elegant home of her mother-in-law, Natalie Comden Shapiro, and arrived with seven of her 12 dogs. When the 53-year-old actress led them into the dining room, the maid threatened to quit, so Mrs. Shapiro put them on the terrace and shut the door. At this point, Doris reportedly pouted: "If the dogs cannot be at the table, I refuse to eat." Good help is hard to find in Hollywood. The maid stayed; Doris and the dogs left.

ACTRESS Elizabeth Taylor — tells her favorite movie role.

Q: After more than 30 years in movies, which is Liz Taylor's favorite role?

A: Remember Martha in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" Liz absolutely reveled in all those shrieking fights with Burton. "I love parts that aren't me" she explains, "where I can scream and tear up scenery. I concentrate on my role at the studio, but I shed it like an overcoat when I go home to my personal life." Interestingly enough, Liz says she has no trouble learning the script. "I have a photographic memory. I read my lines three times for the next day's filming and sleep on it. I'm known as one-take Liz." Except by her ex-husbands of course.

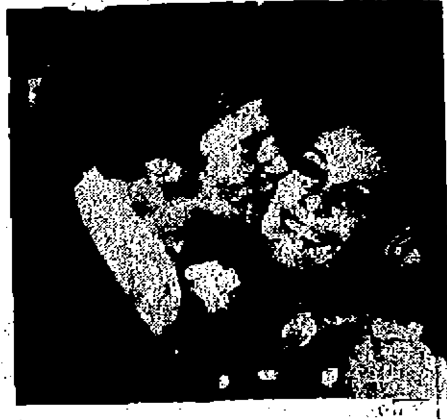
Q: Please settle a bet. Which Hollywood star receives the most fan mail these days?

A: It's "Happy Days" at the Los Angeles Post Office when they add up the profits from the 80,000 fan letters that Henry (The Fonz) receives each month. This is believed to be an all-time record for any star of either the movies or television.

Q: What's the real story behind the lawsuit that Roger Moore and his current wife, Luisa, are said to be bringing against his previous wife?

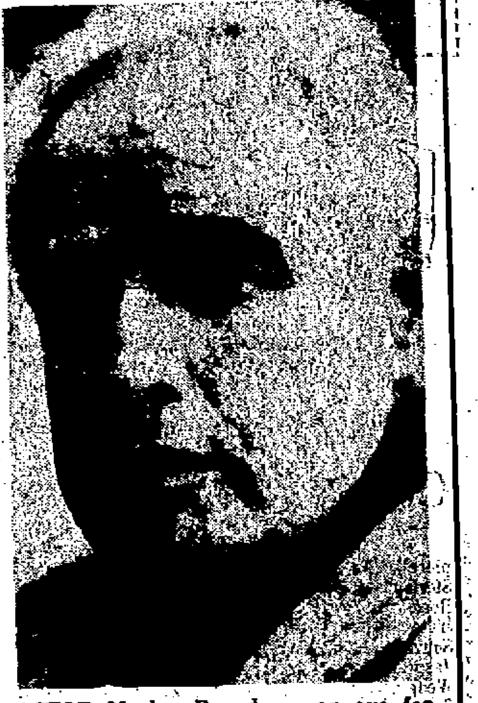
A: The star of the new James Bond epic, "The Spy Who Loved Me," claims he is under attack by a "spy" who loved him — British pop singer Dorothy Squires, the former Mrs. Moore. Seems that Ms. Squires is threatening to publish a book containing not only Roger's love letters to her, but Luisa's to Roger, which by some twist worthy of an 007 plot, have found their way into wife No. 1's possession.



MR. AND Mrs. Roger Moore, above, after their wedding in 1969 and the ex-Mrs. Moore, right — finally got divorce, but now book brings new court problems.

Q: It is true that Marlon Brando has found himself another exotic beauty?

A: The paunchy godfather, 53, squired chinese-born photographer Stefani Kong around London recently. But friends insist that "they just wanted to enjoy themselves — nothing special." An intrepid internationalist, Brando's former wives were Anglo-Indian actress Anna Kashfi and Mexican Actress Movita. And he is currently married to Tarita. Incidentally, the actor was in London filming "superman" — though, at 240 pounds, he's hardly in shape to play the title role.



ACTOR Marlon Brando — an eye for international beauties

Q: Can you give me an example of what the proposed excise tax on gas guzzlers would cost the buyer?

A: If the taxes were in effect today, the Dodge Monaco and the Plymouth Gran Fury would cost an additional $449 in taxes; the Lincoln Continental, a full-sized Ford and the Cadillac Eldorado, $345 more. The taxes could go as high as $2,488 by 1985.

Cannes film festival ends in flood of criticism rex reed

CANNES — The 30th Cannes Film Festival is mercifully dragging its bloated carcass to the last roundup, like a diseased and dying Buffalo.

What started out optimistically has ended up despairingly out of sorts. The rains came and nearly drowned the festival in such a tidal wave of gloom that even the old-timers declared it was the worst weather in 20 years.

The films turned sour, too. Even chief organizer Maurice Bessy, who hailed the event "a great motion picture holiday by an enchanting seaside" on the opening day, ended the two-week affair decrying: "The cinema is dead!" After 80 films a days for 14 days, most weary, half-blind festival-goers will probably agree.

The first few days were cheerful, with small, unpretentious films from Russia, Greece and Italy sweetening the bitter sediment of trash like "Three Women," "Slap Shot" and "Car Wash." But the festival ran out of hope just as the poor viewers trying to keep up the pace ran out of patience. By seeing a mere six or seven films a day, it's all a poor critic can do to see as much as his eyes, his mind and his often empty stomach can bear, and hope luck leads him to the right choices. Catching the latest Algerian classic at noon means skipping lunch and missing the highly touted Japanese documentary about tunafish poisoning at 1. Dropping in for an hour of a new Marco Bellochio production of "The Sea Gull" with Valentina Cortese at 6 means missing an hour of the latest Agnes Varda film, which began at 6:30. At last I understand why French journalists never seem to bathe. They don't have time.

Dragging about in pouring rain doesn't help, and to make matters worse, the French everything went on strike. Every year the phones are out on Monday, the electricity goes off on Wednesday and by Friday it's an even toss as to whether the taxis will be working or not. This year, the French got organized and the entire country shut down, paralyzing the festival "until further notice." Listen, it's still by the sea, but Cannes is no holiday.

ONE TRIES to work in a bit of haute cuisine in the famous restaurants of the Cote d'Azur, but it's not much fun when the duck smothered in pears is squeezed between a three-hour Italian epic about the Naples sewers and a two-hour Canadian horror about a paralyzing plague that brings terror and disease to an apartment building in Montreal.

I'm sending my liver home air freight. While everyone loaded up on candles, wine and flashlight batteries, I rushed about trying to see as many films as possible before the projectors stopped turning. (The projectionists went on strike in sympathy with the garbage collectors.) For my trouble, I got a pinched nerve in my neck, and I am now in the beginning stages of what will surely be diagnosed as glaucoma. The movies were awful.

Call me irresponsible, but after I walked out of the new Jan Troell film, "Bang!" I asked 10 different critics from 10 different countries what they thought, and not one of them had a clue as to what the picture was about. I had eagerly anticipated this one, Troell is the Swede who electrified American audiences with "The Emigrants" and "The New Land."

Neither film has anything in common with "Bang!" either in style or content. As well as I could make out, it was about a physics teacher, although the publicity handout said he was an organist and there is never a sign of an organ in the picture. Anyway, he spends a great deal of time composing an electronic symphony, falling with women and banging into things.

Occasionally, he sticks his finger down his throat, and there's a loud, accompanying sound of a gunshot on the sound track. Sometimes he sits and stares at a Snoopy poster with which he readily identifies. There is also a ghost in his attic who occasionally drops in for a sandwich. Would I lie to you?

FROM GERMANY, something even more unendurable: A Romy Schneider epic called "Group Portrait with a Woman," directed by Yugoslav director Alexander Petrovic and butchered from a Nobel prizewinning novel by Heinrich Boll.

In a subterranean plot that would baffle even Erskine Caldwell, it seems that in [illegible] Romy might or might not have been a nun and now, in [illegible], red roses sprout mystically from the graves of another nun, who is never seen in the film, and from a Russian prisoner-of-war who may or may not have made Romy pregnant.

But this unexplained madness is quickly disposed of as the scenario wanders disconnectedly through 30 years of death, grief and explosions. There was something about a mortgage during which the translator went out for a coffee break, leaving dazed American- and English-speaking journalists clutching their earphones with frustration and rage.

It all ends with Romy serving tea and cookies to all of the dead people in the movie. But why am I telling you all this? Nobody in the world will ever see this pretentious bore anyway, except those of us who labor to bring you the latest news of the cinema world. The news is all bad.

Italy came forth with "An Average Little Man" with our own Shelley Winters, dubbed in Italian, and Alberto Sordi, as the dreary government clerk who mistreats her. The first half of the movie is Abbott and Costello Italian-style, but it takes a sharp [illegible] towards violent realism when, to avenge the death of their son, Sordi turns into a lunatic vigilante, torturing the boy's killer and sending Shelley into a fatal stroke. It's a combination of low comedy and "Death Wish," and it leaves the exhausted audience in a stupor of sadness and anger.

TO INSURE a wider international distribution, more films are combining international artists and technicians, but in the case of French entry, "Un Taxi Mauve," the result is a giddy melange of mistaken identities and unfulfilled promises. It's directed by France's Yves Boisset in Ireland with an Italian crew and a Chinese menu of a cast, who speak English with varying accents, and it's a dismaying mess of a movie.

The plot concerns the Machiavellian sexual and psycotic drives of a group of soap opera characters who have come to Ireland "to hide from the truth." Charlotte Rampling, looking temptingly like a young Gene Tierney, is an American socialite married to a German prince. Edward Albert is her neurotic baby brother trying to escape the guilt of another girl's death.

Peter Ustinov is a Russian rumpot who sleeps with his own daughter, a sexy mute who eventually escapes, causing him to burn down his own house. Philippe Noiret is a French writer recovering from a nervous breakdown who seduces Miss Rampling, who may or may not have later aborted his child. And wandering through the maze of ludicrous dialogue and picture postcard scenary is Fred Asaire, as the local doctor who records their idiotic tears and tantrums like a kindly old leprechaun.

ENGLAND, a country with the most rapidly declining film industry of them all, nevertheless makes an impressive showing with "The Duellists," a sumptuously mounted tale of rivalry between two French cavalry officers during the Napoleonic Wars, with Keith Carradine and Harvey Keitel as the warring enemies who pursue each other through life in a beautifully reconstructed canvas of time and period.

"Black Joy," an equally gratifying British entry on a smaller scale, traced the life of a newly arrived black immigrant from the British West Indies trying to adjust to the seamy, competitive and shocking "civilization" of the London slums.

Not all of the films in Cannes have been disastrous. I had a particularly good time watching "Gizmo," a funny, fresh documentary by Howard Smith, the Village Voice columnist, about inventors and their inventions through the ages. From an inexhaustible supply of sources throughout the world, Smith spent three years compiling the footage in "Gizmo," and the result is a dizzying series of film clips of nutty inventors and their Rube Goldberg inventions: magnetic fishing poles that suck up fish; dummies in cars to discourage hitchhikers; a tree-stump saxophone you can play with Coca-Cola bottle caps; cars that run sideways and backwards; commuter air taxis with ejector seats that drop you out over the stops on the Long Island Railroad accompanied by your own personal parachutes; and dozens of others, including my favorite — a neck-deep swimming pool through which a line of people in Budapest walk fully clothed, and emerge, on the other side, with their apparel not only dried but dry-cleaned . . .

It's an affectionate salute to all those dear loonies through the years whose crazy dreams may not have improved our world, but always left us laughing.

Aces on Bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Rubber bridge, both vulnerable, partner opened four diamonds — a preempt. Opponent passed. What should I have bid with?

♠ 7 5 6-5-A
♥ 8 6 4
♦ J 10 9 8 7 3
♣ K 5

Single Raise, Indian sports

Answer: An interesting problem with several possibilities. The main point is not how many diamonds your side can make but whether the opponents can make six or seven. A jump to six diamonds is probably best. Against some opponents it might be better to bid a "five-loser" Blackwood. This might silence them and perhaps you can play five or six diamonds undoubled.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner gave me a jump shift after I opened the bidding. I played her for a big hand and after the huge set, she said, "Oh, I should have warned you. I play preemptive jump shifts."

What was she talking about? Is there any such bid?

Hard Lessons, Detroit

Answer: Yes, but it is not part of most standard systems and should not be used without prior agreement and understanding. Players who use this treatment believe that the normal jump shift is dealt very sparingly (true) and the bid is better used as a preempt against the opponents (debatable).

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is the game called "goulash bridge?"

Hungarian Gourmet,
Flushing, N.Y.

Answer: A deal in which the cards are unshuffled and are dealt five at a time twice and three to each player once. Players sometimes agree to "goulash" when a hand is passed out, especially in private or commuter train games. The added spice of distribution presumably makes up for the dullness of a passed out hand.

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is a grand master in bridge?

Chess Player,
San Francisco

Answer: A rank accorded international competitors for accumulating 200 or more World Bridge Federation master points in international competition.

The current world leader is Georgio Belladonna of Italy with some 1500 points. Leading the U.S. is Ace Bob Hamman of Dallas with some 730 points.

The highest national ranking in the U.S. is a life master and the current leader is Barry Crane of L.A.

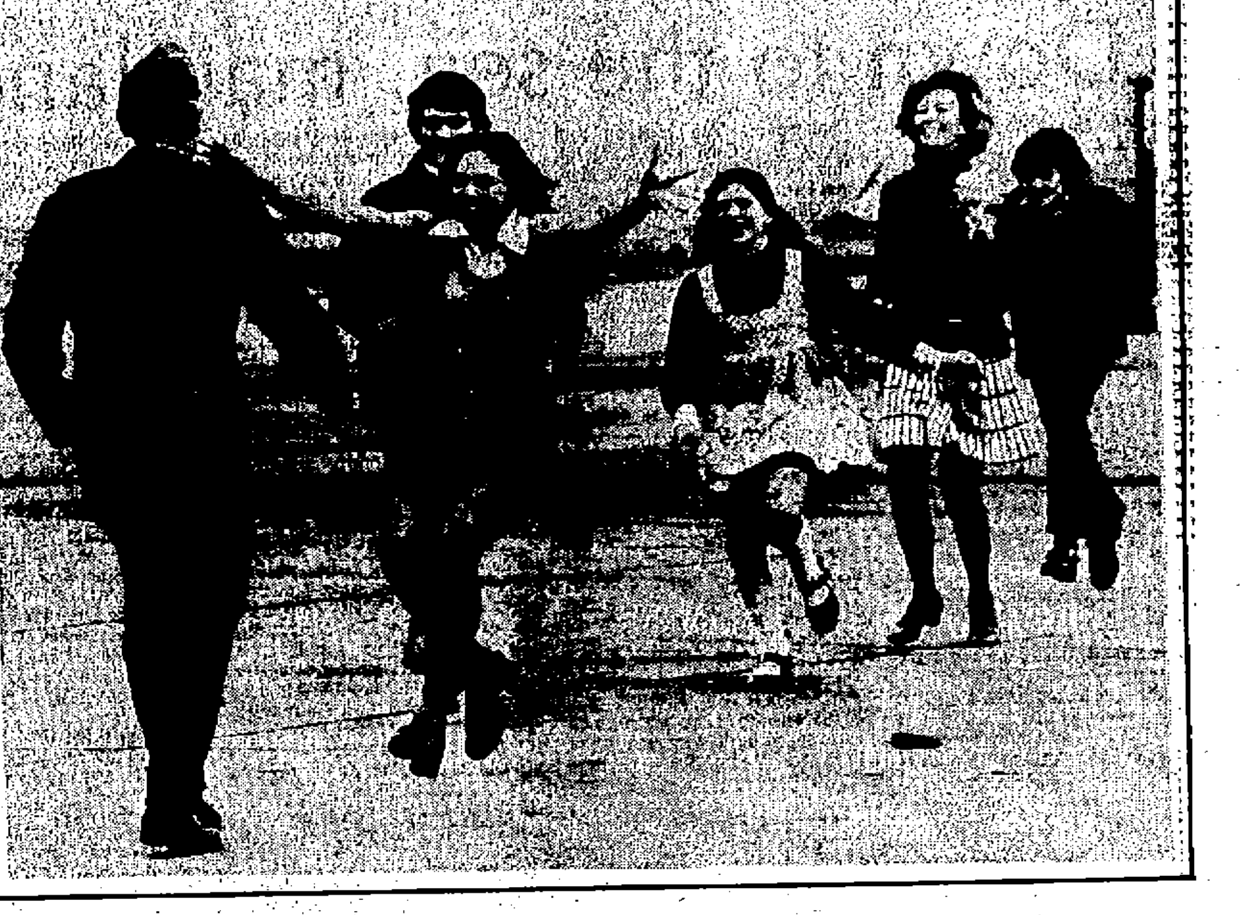
'Daddy!'



One at a time, they came running in a sunburst of joy and motion: Lori, 15; Robert, 14; Cynthia, 11; wife, Loretta, and Roger, 12, last but pulling up fast on the field.

Lt. Col. Robert L. Stirm had been a prisoner of war in North Vietnam for more than five years, half of Cynthia's life.

And now the reunion, March 17, 1973, at Travis Air Force Base, California.

Stirm was one of 596 POWs sent home from North Vietnam in February and March as a result of the treaty signed in Paris Jan. 28, ending the longest war in American history. In the 12 years of that national agony and frustration, more than 55,000 Americans were killed, many more wounded.

The American pullout was completed on Aug. 15, 1973, when U.S. warplanes ceased bombing throughout Indochina.

Neither the large nor the small story could be said to have a Hollywood ending. While Americans were no longer involved in combat, the war in Vietnam continued at a great cost in blood.

The Stirms?

They were divorced one year later, each to marry another.

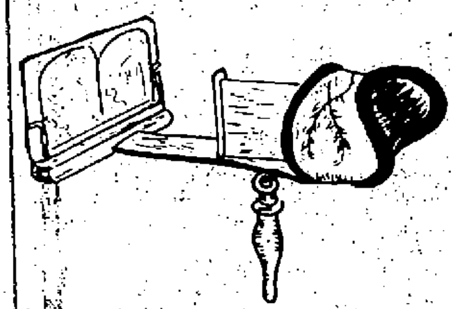
Flea Market Finds

Stereoscopes add an extra dimension



19th century home movie fare

Q. "We just acquired an antique stereoscope." — Mr. and Mrs. T. W., St. Louis, Mo.

A. The stereoscope invented in England about 1838 was widely proclaimed as a simple optical contrivance in which two slightly dissimilar views were fused into one image creating an almost three dimensional effect.

Plain and fancy models were offered by leading toy emporiums throughout the century, accompanied by view cards covering every possible subject. In the early 1900s hand-held models were selling for under 50 cents while 50 views sold for 35 cents. The earlier more intricately involved stereoscopes have fallen into the now you see them, now you don't category. Value guide: hand-held type, circa 1895, $35; view card Spanish American War, $2.

Q. "Don't ask me why, but I've been acquiring old shoe horns whenever possible." — Ed, Oceanside, Calif.

A. When a flea marketeer sounds the happy hunting horn, quite often it signals the search for a vintage shoe horn. Over the centuries they have been fabricated of numerous materials, including brass, ivory, pewter and celluloid.

Only a well beeled antiquer can afford one of the polished hardwood types boasting inlaid or carved handles. Designers attempted to make these functional objects as fancy as possible, reserving their major thrust of creativity for the handles. Animal, figural and floral subjects adorned many 19th century examples.

The promotional types widely distributed by retailers and manufacturers around the turn of the century slip easily into Americana advertising collections. Value guide: celluloid, Beacon Shoes, circa 1900, $12.

Q. "Coronation items relating to King Edward VIII always tempt me." — Stella, Monroe, Mich.

A. Souvenir manufacturers anticipating this occasion had tons of mementos already in production, some even marketed for months previous to his abdication. This "non-event" has provoked considerable collector fascination. The Duke of Windsor had a heartache, the manufacturers had a headache, but ultimately their plight has been transformed into an antiquers delight for these Coronation pieces are coveted! Value guide: cup and saucer, $25; mug, 3½-inches tall, $26; plate, Meakin, $22.

Down to the sea, mainland and Island style

By Jean Sanders
Staff Writer

TIME FLOWS like waters in the jetty. Can it really be 51 years ago that Alamitos Bay Yacht Club was founded? It can. It was. On May 30, 1926, to be specific, and that is why ever since its anniversary has been observed with a Memorial Day regatta and dinner.

This year there was a dual celebration when Ann Exley surprised husband Sid, a charter member and staff commodore of the club, with a three-tiered cake celebrating his —?—th birthday. (We know which one, but let Sid do the confessing.)

As the dance band played, 150 members and guests at the dinner serenaded Sid and shared that huge cake.

Joining in the festivities were Exley daughters and husbands Sue and David Crockett, Pat and Norman Ahlquist, and Jane and Jerry Hewitt.

Steak barbecue hit the spot with Commodore Tick Weber and Georgette, Vice Commodore Bill Nicolai and Mary Lou, Staff Commodores Ted Matson and Mary, Roy Conn and Margaret, Ron Fox and Karen, Ernie Marr and Pat.

Others in the nautical throng were Dave and Bonnie Dorrans, Jim and Marilyn Shirley, Bruce and Evie Belisle, Earl and Marty Bowman, Jack and Ronnie Cook, Pete and Elenor Gantz, Gib and Gladys Gibbons, John and Audrey Hand, Mack and Betty Mills, Tommy and Evelyn Thomas and Henry and Bernice Weiss.

HOW COME decorations were Oriental when Terri Enders and Virginia Wailes entertained at a bridge luncheon requires some explanation.

Seems that several years ago both women coincidentally purchased the same Japanese tallies. That started it.

"We'll have to give a party sometime," they agreed. And they didn't forget. They kept gathering appropriate additions like lovely Japanese fans, dolls, kimonos.

So when the Long Beach group caravanned up to Virginia's home in Sierra Madre, there greeting them at the door were kimonoed Terri in lavendar and purple and Virginia in blue, each with flowers in their hair. And over there at the piano, playing Occidental numbers, was Roger Enders in a happi coat. And over there at the punch bowl was Pammy Powell in a fetching kimono.

Flowers from Virginia's gardens brightened the spacious rooms. The centerpiece was a stunner in spider mums and purple blooms.

Hart (Davis) Bond wasn't about to miss out on the fun, even though she had to skip bridge in time to get back to Palm Desert for another party.

TRAVEL AGENT Marjorie Sien is considering adding weather forecasting to her list of proficiencies, especially after what happened within her own family. She knocked herself out setting up a first trip to Hawaii for daughter Bonnie and son-in-law Jim Watkins. So what happened their entire week on Oahu? Poured buckets.

Things were sunnier when the couple visited the Napili Kai on Maui. Good thing. They were beginning to think dismally about this "into each life a little rain must fall" bit.

Interesting to learn that among Marjorie's new partners in her travel biz are Bud and Donna Riddings.

Perhaps the Hawaiian gods will smile favorably on Jack and Carlene Stroble when they take young daughter Kelly to the Islands later this summer.

They did all right by Norm and Iola Masterson who squired the younger Mastersons, Army Capt. Mark and his wife, Debby, on their first visit to the Islands.

The Mastersons, senior types, tried to refrain from comment, but they were aghast at the wall-to-wall high rises on Maui. Quite a change from their visit there 13 years ago.

Big reunion when, driving the Kona Coast, they stayed at the Kona Riviera managed by George and Barbara Powell. George is GAP's son; GAP is still a mainlander here.

Another fun time was staying at Frank and Ann Wade's hideaway in the Hanalei Bay area on Kauai.

Iola's current occupation, now that they're back: trying to bleach out the lava dust out of what had been spanking white shoes purchased especially for the trip. Pair of tattletale gray flats, anyone.

BUSINESS and pleasure took Dick and Verla Browning to Portugal. Everything wrapped up and sightseen in one week. These jet setters!

CENTURY CLUB rarely honors one of its own, but it made an exception when some 50 members and guests drove over the Vincent Thomas bridge for a special gathering at Trani's Majestic restaurant in San Pedro. Since Trani's is a favorite spot for many in the sports fraternity, it seemed like the ideal place to pay tribute to Al Kirby, one of the founding fathers of the club and such a loyal member that he has rarely missed a weekly meeting in the 20 years of the club's existence.

The 1926 Poly High grad was presented a plaque by club president Al Cruchley inscribed "To the Noblest Century Clubber of Them All."

Century Club was formed in 1957 by local businessmen, each of whom coughs up a century note each year to promote Long Beach athletes and athletic events in the city.

SPEAKING of sports, when Neil Peek was at Jordan High, he was named "athlete of the year" by local sportswriters. Now he is principal of Brethren High School in Paramount.

But that's not what this item is really all about. Friday, the 13th in 1952 spelled good luck for the Peeks who were married on that date, the night after their graduation from Jordan.

Now, 25 years later, their children, Jan (Mrs. Matt) Mohutsky of Lakewood, and Bruce, Chris and David, will honor them on their silver anniversary at an open house Saturday afternoon in the patio room of North Long Beach Brethren Church where Neil's father was pastor for more than 28 years.

the Lough Memorial Fountain. Howard Still, executive assistant to LBSU president Stephen Horn, accepted the Long Beach Beautiful award on behalf of Lough and the university.

Other winners in the business category were for the Old Faithful Hot Tub Works, 2148 E. Fourth St., to Mel Amann and Myles Karpman; a building at 1327 E. Fourth St., converted by Daniel Driskell; the Independent Press-Telegram for exterior improvements; a small shopping area, Park Place, 4647 Long Beach Blvd.; the National Bank of Long Beach at San Antonio Road and Business Street; and the Townhouse Section of Parkview Terrace, 4835 E. Fourth St.

NOTING the variety, character and originality of home designs, the judges selected 12 from many areas of the city.

"We never before have had the entire staff of a school nominate a house, but this year the staff of the Huntington School wrote us a letter, signed by all the teachers, administrators, the housemother and even the bus drivers recommending the houses owned by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Schubert at 2927 Spaulding St.," Mrs. Wylder said.

Other locations with their owners or designers are at 3670 E. First St, Bruce Mathis and Roger Montgomery; 2700 E. First St., Phil Hughes; 2470 and 2476 Webster Ave., Northrup Lopes and Alice Lopes; 2272 Webster Ave., Brigido O'-Campo; 3585 Pacific Ave., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gottfried; 3527 Lime Ave., Manuel and Pat Jimeniz; 1802 Tulane Ave., Rollin and Judy McCombs; 5470 E. Anaheim Road, Edward Evans; and 357 Ximeno Ave., Vivabelle Fisher.

The last home award, said Mrs. Wyler, really belongs to either business or special awards. It went to a condominium project, the Poly High Redevelopment Project at Atlantic and 17th Street. Chris Jones was architect.

THE SPECIAL awards were for projects rather than structures. President Steve Sanders headed Millikan High School's Pride and Beautification Club which undertook many activities during the year. So did another winner, the Stephens Junior High School Optimist Club. Patti Hartzell accepted the citation for the "new, neat, landscaped, attractive and easy-to-use" Recycling Center and Dr. R. Burdett Burk acknowledged the award for the Organic Garden.

Dwight Bennett and Associates, who also were credited for the National Bank, received the final award for the design and construction of the Central Area Neighborhood Facilities Center adjacent to King Park at Lemon Avenue and Rhea Street.

This year, Long Beach Beautiful, Inc., has been funded by the city. It has met in various city parks, an innovation which, said Mrs. Wyler, has encouraged participation of residents in the neighborhoods.

The weekend guest

It's time to go visiting friends in the country again. Summer brings those double-edged invitations to "come spend a quiet weekend" — which often ends up a nightmare for guest and host alike. Survival of such weekends is possible only if we shoulder our responsibilities, grit our teeth and polish our manners.

The first thing a good host tells his guest is what to pack, including everything from swimsuits to raincoats, to long dresses.

Guests need to know, too, if they may lounge around in their favorite jeans or shorts. The considerate host tells his guests what the restrictions are regarding clothes at the club for golf or tennis.

The second most important thing is to determine the exact time of arrival and departure. If there are going to be several guests, it's a good idea to tell all of them just who will be there. Surprises can backfire and result in a miserable weekend for everyone.

It is up to the host to provide comfortable quarters for the guests and not to invite too many people for the space available. There should be enough to eat and drink (snacking foods — fruit, crackers, cookies — are musts). As much cooking ahead as possible should be done before the weekend starts.

Guests should not be over organized. A host is not a cruise director. Guests should be given their options: the tennis buff, the gardening enthusiast, the swimmer, bird-watcher or hammock swinger should be allowed to do his own thing. No one should be forced to do someone else's thing for very long.

Good hosts don't require guests to enter into all-night partying either. Many people want, and desperately need, to unwind and rest on weekends. They shouldn't be forced into tribal rituals of drinking and dancing in a smoke-filled, non-stop-noise environment. Arrangements might be made for the swingers to stay out late (and be driven home by someone who has not been drinking), while the others may go home early.

GUESTS SHOULD arrive on time, arrange their own transportation and leave at the predetermined time (or sooner).

Guests should readily accept (and at least feign some enthusiasm about) any part of the schedule, whether it involves tramping through a local art show, suffering an outdoor picnic in a rainstorm, or playing croquet or badminton with the kids. If there is a problem guest in residence, like an active alcoholic or a very demanding and deaf Aunt Hattie, the good guest is the one who pitches in and good-naturedly takes over the problem for brief periods.

The good guest always offers to help his hosts with any chores that need doing. When told to please stay out of the kitchen, the good guest quickly obeys the order. He always brings a useful hostess present and never forgets one for the children.

The good guest leaves the guest room exactly as he or she found it (and that means, in a house without any help, that one offers to put fresh linen back on the beds and brings the soiled linens and towels to the laundry area, whether or not the beds are to be remade).

The final duty of the guest is to write that imaginative, glowing thank-you note (no more than three days after returning home), even if Aunt Hattie drove you up the wall, you suffered heartburn from the food, you have calluses from scraping paint off the boat, and you're riddled with bites because of the holes in the screens in the guest bedroom.

Novel, California history excite imagination

Earthly Possessions
by Anne Tyler
Knopf, $7.95

How difficult yet how tantalizing it is for the person who reads many books a week to try to convey enthusiasm. Yet, this reviewer must. I have not read Tyler's novels before. I now promise to ready everything she has written and will write. Why? Let me count some reasons.

Start with a hackneyed plot: bank holdup, hostage, flight. Counterpose the passive, disoriented housewife, not in life, not of life, traveling to find life. Sound familiar? Chaucer warned that there is "noule new under the sunne." But what the true writer does is to find meaning in the obvious and to transform the ordinary. Tyler particularizes, gives fresh details, makes us see.

Charlotte Emory is the protagonist narrator, caught in the bank, caught before in her life with a grossly fat (or was she?) mother and father who did not quite believe she was their daughter (or did they?).

There, in the Maryland Safety Savings Bank, she is taken hostage by the "victim of impulse," Jake Simmons, and their marvelous escapade into mutual knowledge begins. The only violence occurs with their preconceptions and ours. Otherwise, we are back with our old familiars, the grotesques who people our dreams if we refuse to recognize them in our waking hours.

Believing that she is not their true daughter, Charlotte begins to discover who that real self is, who that real mother and father might have been, despite her fantasy-childhood recall. Were they wrong in their understanding? Is she wrong?

What Charlotte learns in this comic pilgrimage through the South is that all of life is filled with a distance from reality. And what she discovers along with their Twinkies, soft drinks and rescue of an unwed mother is that she and Jake are committed to life, he to Minday, she to husband Saul.

But the comic touches sparkle as our first-person narrator laments her walking shoes, a sexless Sunday, or learns to cherish the customers who drape themselves as they see themselves or wish to be seen for her photographs. Read the book and rejoice for an easy writer who takes the familiar and makes it wondrously strange and yet comfortably knowable.

Three Gems of California History:

California History Books (P.O Box 921, Fresno 93714) brings us three treasures of California's past, each volume in facsimile form, and each extremely hard to obtain, until happily, California History Books reissued them. Foremost is John Steven McGraoarty's celebrated History of Southern California, which first saw the light in 1914, and has become a classic. McGroarty's book is available again with all its original and rare illustrations, at $19.95, a price not out of sight for such a rarity.

McGroarty, who cut a considerable figure in his day, was an indefatigable and careful delver into California's past. He was an author of many a work on the state, in a time when many pioneer settlers and not a few ex-gold diggers (not the kind made famous in a later era) were still around, their vivid, and sometimes over-vivid memories waiting to be tapped.

He was the author of the famous Mission Play. Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Benardino, San Diego, Imperial and Ventura Counties all fall within the purview of his sharp eye for the colorful events that molded the Southland.

THROUGH the pages of Garfield M. Quimby's History of the Potrero Rancho and Its Neighbors ($12.50) walk characters as colorful as any that have appeared in the best fiction of the West, but Quimby's characters are for real. The region known as the Potrero Rancho nestles in the foothills near Banning. It was originally a land grant of some 50,000 acres, from Governor Pio Pico to the Pedrorena family in 1846. Today it is a testing site for Lockheed. Quimby captures all the color of events that played a large role in the history of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties.

Then there's a facsimile reproduction of Volume I of The Journal of American History ($9.95). That periodical was born in 1902; each issue was actually a book. Volume I contains such articles as "The Miracle of the First Steamboat," "A Wedding Suit in 1756;" "The Philosophy of Death in Early America," personal letters of pioneer Americans; the adventures of a prisoner on a privateer; pieces on an early boycott in America, the first American soldiers, struggles of the first American composers against public hostility. The volume is filled with rare illustrations.

Downtown Los Angeles in 1890 showing the popular American Victorian architectural style. From Stephen Longstreet's engaging All Star Cast: An Anecdotal History of the City of Los Angeles (Crowell, $13.95), one of 50 photos plus 45 line drawings by Longstreet himself.

Drawstrings a fall fashion must

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The fashion lexicon for fall is full of such code words as "voluminous," "soft" and "easy." They describe the general drift of the new clothes. A specific way this effect is achieved is through blousing.

There's nothing very esoteric about it. Windbreakers have expressed the look for a long time. They're usually cut full enough to go easily over shirts and sweaters and they have a knitted cuff at the waistline to hold them close to the body and prevent the wind from blowing through.

The current bloused look isn't tremendously concerned with such practical notions, though they do enter in. Often there is a drawstring at the end that can be adjusted at the waist or below it, depending on where it feels most comfortable. Elastic at the waistband serves the same function.

What is significant is that blousing — Francophiles tend to call it "the blouson" — has swept all aspects of fashion to the point where it is one of the major characteristics of the new season.

There are bloused sweaters, dresses, jackets, coats and even bloused blouses. Some designers, asked by store buyers for more blousons, have simply tucked the loose tops of two-piece dresses into the waistbands of the skirts that accompany them. Voila! Instant blouson.

THE TOTALLY relaxed shape turns up in clothes as casual as the windbreaker and as formal as the pale satins that are designed for the evening. It also gives a fresh look to the sweaters, which have been a key part of the fashion picture for several seasons.

The newest sweaters bend under at the bottom, aided by the ubiquitous drawstring or elastic. These, too, run from sporty to dressy. Add a pair of satin pants to one of the latter and most after-dark social situations are taken care of with style.

Blousing has contributed to the transformation of the shirt into the blouse for fall, aided by such delicate details as fine tucks or pleats at the shoulder and ruffles at the neckline. Instead of fitting snugly, blouses tend to billow.

The bulk of the new styles blouse gently, but some go to extremes of fullness. Then they tend to be called "bubbles" — another word that will be coming into fashion this fall.

FEDERAL GRANT will enable Los Angeles to expand facilities at Watts Towers and look forward to development of the area as a major cultural arts complex.

Watts Tower, Center to grow

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

First steps toward developing the Watts Towers area as a major cultural arts complex will be taken with the purchase of property between the Towers of Simon Rodia and the adjacent Watts Towers Art Center. The acquisition is made possible by a new $250,000 federal grant from the Office of Housing and Urban Development.

The Towers and Art Center will be joined by a badly needed 45-space parking lot, an area which also will have a structure with public restrooms, a security office, an arts supply room and a custodial area.

Los Angeles Municipal Arts Department, headed by Kenneth Ross, will administer the project. No construction starting date has been announced.

The Watts Towers and the Art Center became Los Angeles city property in August, 1975, after an agreement with the non-profit Committee for Simon Rodia's Towers in Watts to preserve and maintain the Towers and to carry on a workable community art program at the center.

Located at 1765 E. 107th St., the Towers are said to be the largest single work of art ever created by one man.

NOEL QUINN, instructor at Otis Art Institute, made these selections for Long Beach Art Association's Juried Membership Show:

Morgan Johnson, first; Judith Ann Barnes, second; Dorothy deAraujo, third; Kathleen Neal, Elinor Billings and Louise Brockway Anderson, honorable mentions.

The show will hang in the Long Beach Gallery, 155 Queens Way Landing, through June. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. Parking will be validated.

WORKS BY contemporary American and European artists as well as those by such masters as Chagall, Miro, Dali, Picasso and Calder will be offered at Temple Israel's fourth annual art auction Saturday in the temple's David Feuer Auditorium, 3538 E. Third St. Oils, lithographs, etchings, serigraphs and mixed media will be custom-framed, say co-hosts Sylvia and Ronald Hartman.

The exhibition opens at 7 p.m.; the auction will begin at 8 o'clock. Free catalogues will be available and champagne, dessert and coffee will be served. Donation is $2.50 a person.

AT CALIFORNIA State Museum of Science and Industry, 700 State Drive in Exposition Park, Los Angeles, some of Hollywood's greatest and most popular films of the 1930s will be shown on Saturdays through Aug. 20. Programs will begin at noon in the museum's Kinsey Auditorium. This Saturday's main film will be "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" by David O. Selznick. It will be accompanied by the Laurel and Hardy picture, "Any Old Port."

A Laurel and Hardy film will be shown with the main feature each week as will an episode of the serial, "Don Winslow of the Coast Guard." There is no admission charge; ample parking is available.

JUNE 24 THROUGH 26, the 25th Los Angeles All City Outdoor Art Festival will be held in Barnsdall Park, 4800 Hollywood Blvd. The event will be open from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day; free mini-bus transportation will be provided from the entrance to the park. There is no admission charge.

More than 1,000 works of art by Los Angeles area residents,' demonstrations booths where craftsmen will display their skills and a variety of performing groups will be part of the festivities.

Paintings, prints, drawings, sculpture and photographs will be exhibited in the Municipal Art Gallery and in the park. Award winning works, as judged by artists Suzanne Jackson and Rudi Martinez, will be specially placed. Most works will be for sale.

Demonstrations will range from jewelry making and stone sculpture to stitchery and stained glass. Entertainment, provided by the Los Angeles Bureau of Music, will be presented on an outdoor stage.

ANIMATED FILMS by Faith and John Hubley may be seen at Otis Art Institute Gallery, 2401 Wilshire Blvd., from June 16 through July 27. Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

The films are to show some of the contributions of the Hubleys to animation and to reveal their personal style in film and original art work. Both films and a freestanding display system of original art and graphics are to be exhibited. There will be animation drawings, storyboards, colorful animation cels, silkscreen images and commentary by the Hubleys on their backgrounds, techniques, departures from tradition and most recent projects.

Also at Otis Monday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. will be a sale of quality art.

PCA awaits budget news

At its June meeting Wednesday in the Main Library, the Public Corporation of the Arts ratified the appointment of Chuck Davis, John Watts and Jay Leff to a special committee which will meet with city officials to discuss the role and direction of the organization's future.

At its May meeting, the PCA board voted to terminate the positions of director of development, administrative assistant and office secretary effective June 30. It also voted to establish a search committee to seek an executive director, a position previously approved by the 1977-78 budget request.

With the elimination of her position, Leslie Olmsted, who has served as director of development since August, 1976, will no longer be connected with the PCA. She began four weeks vacation Wednesday. Only a secretary, Carol Anderson, who was employed in February, will remain in the PCA office. Under direction of the board of directors, she will maintain the PCA office at 130 Pine Ave., Suite 208.

After vacationing in Oregon, Ms. Olmsted will go to New York and probably later will come to Los Angeles.

"AS A RESULT of budget cuts, the PCA had to revise its operational base," said Davis. "The board of directors compliments Ms. Olmsted on her assistance in the first steps of organization locally and regionally."

In effect, the PCA is in limbo until the city decides on the basic philosophy under which the organization is to operate and allots operating funds.

The quarterly PCA calendar of events for June, July and August has been mailed and no immediate projects are scheduled.

"We expect word soon from the City Council, the mayor and city manager," said Davis who was re-elected president at the May meeting. Other officers are John Watts, vice president; Robert Benson, treasurer; and Sheri Beebe, secretary.

Cellists to play recitals at USC

Twenty-three works for cello, spanning three centuries, will be presented Monday through Friday by resident artists of the "Gregor Piatigorsky Seminar for Cellists" at USC.

Monday, Nathaniel Rosen will perform Brahms' "Sonata in F major," Schumann's "Adagio and Allegro," Dallapiccola's solo "Ciaconna, Intermezzo and Adagio" and "Introduction, Theme and Variations" by Schubert-Piatigorsky. Pianist Doris Stevenson will assist.

Laurence Lesser, also with Ms. Stevenson, Tuesday will play sonatas by Chopin and Carter as well as Piatigorsky's solo "Prelude" and Crumb's "Solo Sonata."

Wednesday, Lorne Munroe, accompanied by pianist Brooks Smith, will perform Mendelssohn's "Sonata in D major," Bach's "Sonata in D major" and "Arioso," Boccherini's "Sonata in A major," Faure's "Elegy" and Weber's "Adagio and Rondo" as transcribed by Piatigorsky.

GABOR REJTO, with pianist Alice Rejto, will present a recital Thursday. It will feature Valentini's "Sonata in E major," Beethoven's "Sonata in A major," Bartok's "Roumanian Dances," Lazarof's "Duo 1973," Barber's "Sonata" and Bloch's "Nigun" as transcribed by Gabor Rejto.

Stephen Kates, with Brooks Smith, will close the series Friday. He will play Tchaikovsky's "Rococo Variations," Rachmaninoff's "Sonata in G minor" and the "Suite Italienne" by Stravinsky-Piatigorsky.

All recitals will begin at 7 p.m. in the new USC Bing Theater, located near the intersection of Hoover Street and 34th Street on the USC Campus. After each program, a light supper will be served in the lobby of the adjacent Annenberg School of Communications.

Series tickets, offering five concerts for the price of four, still are available for $16.

Dancers on stage

'Le Corsaire' can be seen Saturday at 8:30 p.m. when The Dance Theater of Harlem presents a varied program in UCLA's Royce Hall. The company will dance a completely different bill Friday night.

'Anything Goes' now at Showcase Theater

Casting has been completed for the opening production of the new Showcase Theater at 211 N. Pacific Ave., San Pedro. Cole Porter's musical comedy, "Anything Goes" will initiate the new facility Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. beginning this week and continuing through July 30.

The title tune, "Anything Goes," was one of Ethel Merman's recording successes as was "Blow, Gabriel, Blow," "You're the Top," "It's Delovely," "Take Me Back to Manhattan" and "Friendship."

Lynn Warech of Los Angeles has been cast as Reno Sweeney, the role played by Miss Merman on Broadway. Al Monfalcone of San Pedro has been selected for the role of Billy Crocker; Bill Brown of Long Beach plays Moonface Martin, Public Enemy No. 13; Kerri Schwartz of Gardena portrays Bonnie; Susan Swayer of Gardena is Hope Harcourt; and Dave Schmidt of Long Beach is cast as Sir Evelyn Oakleigh.

Sharon Giglio choreographed the work; Rich Heckman is musical director. The production is under direction of Gene Warech of Los Angeles.

Also to be seen in major and minor roles are Clark Mellen of San Pedro, Kim Tarrant of Hawthorne, Robert Rivera of Carson, Lisa Lamburth and David Tasker of Long Beach and Karen Edwards of Hollywood.

Showcase had its home in Hawthorne for 12 years until a Cadillac ran through the theater and put it out of business. John Kaiser, president, and board members decided to reopen in San Pedro with the intention of producing full-scale musicals. Seating capacity is limited to 126. Advance tickets may be ordered by mail or phone.

Bowl to spark on the Fourth

Hollywood Bowl's Family Fireworks Picnic Concert will begin July 4 at 7:30 p.m. with Sidney Harth conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic in bright and breezy favorites for holiday merrymakers. Big Bird, a Sesame Street character, will be special guest star, romping with the orchestra.

The essential part of the evening, of course, will be the brilliant fireworks which will light the sky over the Bowl.

Billing the program as the Bowl's Bicentennial-Plus-One Fourth of July Concert, the conductor has programmed numbers by Ferde Grofe, Morton Gould, John Philip Sousa, Aaron Copland and other composers.

BOX SEATS are $4 and $5. Other reserved seats are $2 and $3; children under 12 will be admitted for half price.

Kids can fiddle, toot, plunk, boom

An excursion to Hollywood Bowl, an introduction to the electronic sounds of synthesizer music and ample opportunity to fiddle around with musical instruments will be part of a new program, Music Appreciation FYP (For Young People), to be offered this summer by the Long Beach Recreation Department.

Youngsters aged 4 through 10 can enjoy eight weeks of music from jazz to symphony under the tutelage of Ellen Pettit.

Participants will be divided into two groups. Those aged 4 to 6 will attend Mondays from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; 7 through 10-year-olds will have sessions from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Both classes will meet on successive Mondays beginning June 27 at Wardlow Park, 3457 Stanbridge Ave.

A BUS PROVIDED by the Long Beach Symphony Juniors will take the children on a brown bag outing to Hollywood Bowl where, while eating lunch, they can watch and hear the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra tune up and rehearse. The date for this trip is to be announced.

The youngsters also will tour the music department of the new Long Beach Main Library where they can listen to music through headsets.

In addition, the chance to toot, whistle, plunk and boom on band and orchestra instruments will be brought to the park via a Music Mobile packed with horns, strings and percussions.

Pre-registration is required of all participants and is now open at the Recreation Department, 155 Queens Way Landing. Registration forms are included in flyers available in all city branch libraries. Fee for the eight-week course is $9.

Return of 'The Wiz'

Last year the new musical stage version of 'The Wonderful Wizard of Oz' played a completely sold-out summer season at the Music Center. Los Angeles Civic Light Opera will bring it back June 17 to run at the Ahmanson Theater through Sept. 10. Renee Harris as Dorothy heads the cast.

Symphony to install

Long Beach Symphony Association will install 1977-78 officers of the association and Symphony Guild Tuesday. The installation dinner will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave. It will be preceded by no-host cocktails at 6:30 p.m. Cost of the prime rib buffet is $8.50.

All Long Beach Symphony supporters and friends are invited; reservations should be made in advance at the symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

Mrs. Malcolm Todd will be installed for her second term as Symphony Association president. Serving with her will be Ernie Wilbanks, Alberta Carlson, Mrs. Nevall McCoy and Helen Kennedy. Ms. Carlson also will be installed as president of the Symphony Guild. Other guild officers are Mrs. David Sievers, Mrs. Mark Day Miner and Mrs. Leroy Hyde.

Theater event

"Broadway Melody of 1977," a one-hour musical show featuring hit songs from Broadway successes, will be presented by Long Beach Actor's Theater of the Recreation Department Tuesday at 3 p.m. in Senior Citizens Recreation Center, 350 E. Ocean Blvd. All seniors attending will be admitted free.

Advice to the Tax Lorn

Congress heeds taxpayer complaints

jacob smith

Taxpayers complained, Congress responded, and the President has signed the Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977. For 1976, you now have the option of claiming the sick pay exclusion, or the retirement income credit (credit for the elderly), or both, using the rules in effect for 1975, or the new rules adopted in 1976.

And it doesn't matter if you've already filed for 1976. You have the option of leaving everything the way you have it, or filing an amended return on Form 1040X — whichever way is better for you. I believe you can use 1975 Form 2440 and Schedule R to attach to 1976 1040 or 1040X, if the new 2440 for 1976 is not available.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Three years ago, the depreciation of $125 per year ran out on my small rental property originally listed as having a basis for depreciation of $3,500. The value of this property has increased greatly. Therefore, can I now have it appraised and thus continue the deduction of the $125 yearly depreciation? Local IRS people have informed me that there is a limit of four years in which to file a 1040 form that was forgotten five or six years ago — on the yellow form 1040X. Is this true or is it possible to send in the form after the four-year grace period has elapsed? — L.M.C.

Your basis for depreciation cannot be changed merely by having the property appraised. It may be helpful to find out today's value in case you wish to sell. The new owner will be allowed to depreciate the property all over again, and, I am sure at much more than $125 per year.

If you failed to send in your Form 1040 (for example, year 1971) you can send it in now. If you owe any tax, it must be paid, plus a 25 per cent penalty and five years interest at the very least. Now, if you have a refund coming, you must file Form 1040X after filing Form 1040. You will receive the refund limited to the amount stated in Regulations 301.6511(b)-1(b)i. That says that IRS can refund only the amount you paid during the past three years subject to exceptions which don't affect you. So, unless you paid some of that 1971 tax within the past three years, which does not appear to be, you will get no refund. Most of our tax laws are fairly rare and yet they are rarely fair.

DEAR MR. SMITH: A stock was bought by my husband and me as joint tenants, in May, 1969 for $4,139. My husband passed away in June, 1975. I sold the stock in September, 1976 for $1,783. I called the IRS and received two different answers. One IRS person said my loss was $1,243. The other said it was $130. Which is correct? — N.G.

The answer depends on who provided the funds to buy the stock in 1969. If you did, then your cost is still $4,139 and your loss is $2,356 ($4,149 less $1,783).

If you don't know whose funds were used, the IRS assumes it was paid for by the first to die. In that case your tax basis (cost) is reduced to the value on the day your husband died. And if that value was $1,913, that would account for the answer of $130 loss. In community property states, the better assumption is that each spouse paid 50 per cent. In that case your loss is $1,243 (above losses of $2,356 and $130 = $2,486 at 50 per cent $1,243). Therefore, unless you know that you provided all the funds, you should report a loss of $1,243.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Last year I purchased a 99-year leasehold on an apartment for $7,000. The lease now has 96 years to go. The amount owed is $14,765, or 246 monthly payments of $110 per month, plus an additional monthly maintenance, fire insurance on building, property taxes, and so forth through the term of the lease.

I am subletting this apartment. Can I deduct in addition to the monthly payment and the monthly maintenance fee, a deduction for depreciation or amortization of my investment? A local tax consultant said "yes," but could quote no authority. The local IRS says "no!" — J.B.

Assuming that you are personally using the apartment, your deductions would be similar to those allowed any lessor (interest, taxes, maintenance, repairs, insurance, depreciation etc.) and, in addition, the monthly rental — which you did not specifically mention in your letter.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped, envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

Lobs warning to Plains folk

A tennis court in Plains, Ga.!

Don't you understand? Friends, either you are closing your eyes to a situation you do not wish to acknowledge or you are not aware of the caliber of disaster indicated by the presence of a tennis court in your community.

Well, ya got trouble my friends — trouble with a capital T that rhymes with D that stands for DEUCE!

You're probably thinking I'm over-reacting to the tennis court built in Plains, Ga., last month to accommodate its first big World Tennis tournament, but that's what they said when someone broke out a deck of cards in Las Vegas and said, "It's something to do until the symphony hall is finished."

erma bombeck

I used to live in a sleepy little hollow that had never heard of tennis. For sport, we used to go into town every Tuesday and watch them change trusses in the drugstore window. Then one day, a city slicker came out and eyed a patch of ground behind the hardware store.

He said, "Mothers of Centerville . . . do your children come in whining every afternoon, 'There's nothing to do?' Are you so out-of-shape you need a seat belt for each knee? Is your husband dying of terminal paleness? Do you want to believe that the family that plays together gets their own TV series? Well, Centerville needs a tennis court and you're gonna get it today."

THE REST is history. Centerville got its tennis court and was never the same again. Brother turned against brother. ("You creep! If it was on the line don't you think I'd have said so?")

Mother turned against daughter. ("Get serious. Are you considering dating a boy who isn't even seeded? What is everyone going to think?")

Neighbor turned against neighbor. ("Look, Fred, you and Velma are our very best friends, but you foot-fault one more time and we're going to call it.")

Husband turned against wife. ("I am not coming to bed until you say my second serve in the first game of the third set was IN!")

Families turned against families. ("I don't care if she IS my sister. I can't invite a B player to an A dinner party.")

THE TOWN was literally ripped apart. Grass didn't get cut, the livestock didn't get fed, the library was as quiet as a tomb, and the clerics sat around and prayed for rain — in between sets.

The tranquility of the peaceful little community was shattered by shouts of "A little help there, Buddy. Look, turkey, I returned all of your wild balls, now the least you can do is . . . " and "You know what we have here? We have a sleaze tennis player who signs up for the court using three different names to be can hog it all Saturday morning. There's ways of dealing . . . "

I hope the good people of Plains, Ga., heed the telltale signs of corruption before it is too late. Are tourists passing by the Carter homestead and asking, "Did Bud Collins really broadcast from here?" Is Billy Carter wearing a sweat band? If so, the first time someone cracks a peanut in their teeth at set point . . . the whole town could blow!

Thoughts on remarriage

Dear Dr. Menninger:

In your column recently, you set out to tell a woman how her daughter could make a better choice of a second husband. Your advice was good, up to a point.

You did not mention the possibility that she might benefit from having both parties undergo personality evaluation and counseling with a recognized marriage and family counselor; one who is a member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors.

We do such pre-marital evaluations; we feel they are valid and valuable. Many of our clients have so found them, enabling a second marriage to start with fewer obstacles and misunderstandings.

Sincerely, Frank K. McDowell, Missouri, Member, AAMFC.

CERTAINLY, someone who is concerned about a second marriage may wish to consider the option of an evaluation. However, I am not sure how well a couple "in love" may cotton to such a prospect.

The American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors is one of the national organizations which does set standards of experience and training for membership status. Members include a wide range of practitioners — clergy, social workers, psychologists, etc.

The organization encourages excellence, but one cannot be absolutely sure that every member will be equally qualified to help with personality evaluation as suggested by Mr. McDowell. Of course, this is no less true for other counseling professions, where some well-credentialled practitioners are extremely capable, and others are quite limited.

For those people who might wish to explore this avenue, you can get a list of AAMFC members in your area by writing the American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors, 225 Yale Avenue, Claremont, Calif. 91711.

ON THE GENERAL subject of remarriage, a new book has just been published: "The Second Time Around — Remarriage in America" (Viking Press, $7.95). The author, Leslie Aldridge Westoff, speaks from the voice of experience, having been married three times.

She prepared her book after receiving a remarkable response to an article on the subject she wrote for the New York Times magazine. She notes that "old-fashioned, once-in-a-lifetime, till-death-do-us-part marriage may be going on the rocks these days, but remarriage has been booming ... Every year, four out of five people who split up will remarry." And one out of four marriages is now usually a second, third or even fourth.

From visiting with a good number of remarried persons and their children, she has collected numerous case examples. She has bolstered these with pertinent statistical data. Chapters discuss "criss-crossed relationships" and the problems surrounding children.

The view of remarriage presented by Westoff is generally positive. "The second time you are more practical. Now I know marriage isn't going to be perfect." "The quality of life is far more crucial than materialistic concerns."

THE MAJORITY of couples she questioned felt the rewards of remarriage outweighed the problems, no matter how complex or unexpected. And one area of particular improvement was sex. "Most people seem to feel that sex during the second marriage is much better ... a devastatingly delightful experience, an incomparably thrilling emotion, a revitalization of all the senses that make life so pleasurable."

She sums it up by observing that remarriage is the major alternative to remaining divorced or giving up married life. "For an ever growing number of people, remarriage will probably mean a second chance to find the good life."

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of the Independent, Press-Telegram. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Medicine and You

Death results from internal drowning

A 29-year-old woman killed herself by literally flooding her body with water, a doctor reports.

The victim consumed up to eight gallons a day.

Dr. Ronald Wright, Miami, Fla., assistant medical examiner of Dade County, says the woman died of water intoxication. She had an extensive psychiatric history, he said in a report in Clinical Psychiatry News, a medical newspaper.

The death is considered a suicide by the medical examiner's office. It was said to have been caused by the woman's willful consumption of water. She had told acquaintances she believed it was necessary to drink water to rid her body of cancer.

The editor of Clinical Psychiatry News says there's no question the woman died as a result of her own actions. She did, however, tell people she was trying to wash out cancer, so this could be interpreted she was trying to ward off death. Question: Could the suicide ruling given an insurance company the right to invoke a suicide clause in a policy?

Unable to eat

Anorexia nervosa (prolonged inability to eat) is a common disorder, especially among girls 16 years old or older, researchers say.

One in about every 100 girls age 16 or older were found to have severe anorexia nervosa, a study of nine schools showed.

Details are in the British Journal of Psychiatry.

Actors at risk

Cancer-causing substances known as nitrosamines have been found in 28 commercially available cosmetic preparations, a researcher reports.

The cosmetics include a wide variety of face creams, hand lotions and shampoos.

Dr. David H. Fine of Thermo Electron Research Center in Waltham, Mass., reported the findings to the American Chemical Society.

As of now, it's not possible, he says, to assess the potential hazard to man. Reason: Nitrosamine's cancer-causing capabilities have been studied only via eating or drinking and not via absorption through the skin.

If there does prove to be a link between external application of the contaminated cosmetics, actresses and other women who frequently use large amounts of cosmetics might be a special risk, he says.

A report appears in Medical Tribune, a newspaper for doctors.

Jogs controversy

The jogging phenomenon continues to be controversial in medical circles.

Says Dr. Jere Mitchell, professor of internal medicine and physiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, Dallas:

"I don't think you can promise someone who goes out and runs every day that he is going to live any longer."

In other words:

—There is no conclusive scientific evidence that exercise prevents heart disease.

—There is no conclusive scientific evidence that exercise increases longevity.

Even so, he recommends brisk walking, bicycling, swimming and jogging for cardiovascular fitness. He says anyone starting an exercise program should start out slowly and, if over 35, should see a physician and have an exercise stress test.

Under wear out in open

Lace up summer's prettiest look — the revealing, appealing corselet and eyelet or print-bordered skirt. Then, tie on the matching kerchief and voila! you have the luxurious peasant look everybody is in love with now. Eddy George designed the original of Printed Pattern M493 for cotton eyelet. We love it also in a quaint, flower-sprigged print with a contrasting border.

Printed Pattern M493 is available in misses' sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) corselet and kerchief require 1 yard 45-inch fabric; skirt, 2 yards 45-inch border fabric.

Please send $1.50 for Printed Pattern M493 to Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Department, P.O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 35 cents for each pattern for first class mail and special handling.) Print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

All the clothes you want most now are in our 1977 Prominent Designer Book. See them, sew them — jumpsuits, tunics, day-dinner dresses, tops, pants, skirts, total wardrobes by America's top creators. Use the 50 cent free coupon to apply to any pattern of your choice. Send 75 cents for Book 32.

FRED GROTH
New porterhouse and seafood entrees

THE PHONE RINGS. People call this deptartment and ask: "What's the name of that Long Beach restaurant that looks so plush but has inexpensive dinners?"

I'm happy to tell them it's The Tenderloin, 4363 Atlantic Ave., just south of San Antonio Drive. The Tenderloin is so fashionable, with smart linen tablecloths, that it appears to be a place that charges $9 or $10 for each dinner. Miraculously, it charges much, much less. Its most popular dinners are $3.95. People can dress as casually or informally as they wish.

The phone rings at The Tenderloin and people ask: "Is it true that you're open Mondays now?" The answer is yes.

The Tenderloin's phone rings again: "Is it true that you've returned to serving buffet luncheons?" Again the answer is yes. Another ring: "Do you take reservations for dinner?" Certainly. (The number is 595-4306.)

What all this means is that Fred Groth and his wife, Barbara, The Tenderloin's owners, have breathed new life into this always popular restaurant. They're always on the job, greeting their customers and friends. They're always trying to think of new ways to please their patrons to make sure they'll return again and again.

Customers often chat with Barbara or Fred at the reservations desk and congratulate them for serving such quality foods in such a beautiful place at such low prices. The people know that a $3.95 dinner at The Tenderloin won't be the same as a $10 dinner at a super-expensive place. But they're continually impressed with The Tenderloin's values. Those $3.95 dinners would cost a lot more elsewhere.

The Tenderloin has two outstanding chefs who know quality and who work hard because they love the place. They are Matt Boyd and Tom Young. Among their new entrees — featured every night — are the nine-ounce porterhouse steak, $3.95, and the captain's seafood plate of deep-fried shrimp, scallops, cod and oysters, $4.25. Always immensely popular is the $3.95 prime rib au jus dinner. It's not a huge slice, but it's the best aged beef, savory and wonderful. All dinners come with soup or salad, potatoes or rice; vegetable du jour and hot garlic toast.

The Tenderloin serves its luncheons buffet-style because Fred and Barbara discovered that's what the customers want. The luncheons are Mondays through Fridays, 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., featuring the prime rib au jus sandwich, $1.95, and daily specials for $1.95 that include entree, salad, potato and vegetable. The entrees range from pork or chicken chow mein to beef tips in sauce, meatloaf or beef roulade.

PEOPLE BELIEVE what they want to believe. An example: Many long-time residents of Long Beach still believe that you have to ride in an old rattle-bang elevator to visit the Skyroom restaurant and cocktail lounge.

They haven't bothered to find out that visitors to the Skyroom now ride in modern, automatic elevators which were installed at great expense. The Skyroom is a view restaurant high atop the Breakers Hotel, 210 E. Ocean Blvd. Its patrons include many visitors from other cities and states who rate the Skyroom's views equal or better than those of celebrated harbor-view restaurants elsewhere in the world.

With its unusually large windows in the separate dining room as well as the lounge, the Skyroom has by far the best sky location of any harbor restaurant in the greater Long Beach area extending from Palos Verdes on the west and to Orange County on the east.

The Skyroom has become so successful and popular under the operation of host Roy Ferg that it is now open seven nights for dinner and has live entertainment Tuesdays through Saturdays starting at 8. Dinner is from 5 to 10 p.m.

Roy also receives many compliments for the quality of his food and the generous selections from his attractive salad bar. Guests help themselves to fresh soups and many salads, all of which are included in the dinner prices. The dinners also include fresh hot bread with butter; baked potato, French fries or rice.

Among the entrees, $5.50 to $8.95, are Polynesian chicken topped with sweet-sour sauce, golden brown fried chicken, stuffed filet of sole topped with delectable hollandaise sauce, baked mahi mahi (dolphin), breast of chicken cordon bleu with ham, cheese and hollandaise; trout almondine (almonds), teriyaki steak glazed with a special tropical sauce, roast prime rib, thick-cut with natural juices of the meat; chopped tenderloin steak with mushroom sauce, choice New York and filet mignon steaks, deep-sea scallops, shrimp and the captain's combination of shrimp, scallops and filet of sole. Two styles of halibut are featured — grilled steaks or halibut au gratin with cheese en casserole.

Guests who wish just the selections from the soup-salad bar can do so for $3. Those who wish extras with their entrees can choose from fresh mushrooms sauteed in wine or deep-fried onion rings. The Skyroom's number for dinner reservations is 436-6110.

Valet parking is available at the hotel's entrance on Ocean Boulevard.

Lahaina makes living easy

By Mary Neiswender
Staff Writer

LAHAINA, Maui — To avoid push and shove, heart attacks and tension, more and more Americans are coming to this slow-paced, one-time Hawaiian whaler's haven to live.

Here they can grow fat gracefully under a muu muu and smile as the rest of the world rushes by.

Minnesota-born Orienne Lane is one.

A beautiful grandmother with a smile like the Lahaina sunshine, she left her job as director of rehabilitation and service for the American Cancer Society in Seattle in 1975 to come to Hawaii. It took the death of her brother, at age 58, she says, to make her decide to leave the hustle of the mainland and live a life of leisure in Lahaina.

"My brother was always working for the time he could retire, so he could do everything he wanted to do," she explains as she sits in a small boardwalk jewelry store on the main street of this oldtime whaling port. "So I decided to do what I wanted to do while I was here to enjoy it."

SHE QUIT her well-paying job, left her four grown children in Washington State, packed up 55 boxes of belongings and came to Lahaina.

Although leaving the kids was the hard part, she says, it wasn't long before her two sons, Will and Larry McInnis followed. The boys opened a small jewlery shop on Lahaina's main street where their mother casually — almost reluctantly — sells their handmade jewelry while they drive cabs to make ends meet.

But, they all admit, it's no big hustle for money. There's always enough. Residents in this casual clime don't need much.

"I knew I was going to have to go to work when I got here, but this is the best job I've ever had," she says as she lounges on a chair next to a sleeping kitten. "I don't even want to go back (to Seattle) for a vacation. My daughters and their children visit, and I'm never lonesome.

"When you're here, all your friends call you and you see them more than when you were on the mainland.

"You never know," she laughs, "who is going to walk into the shop and usually — if it's a stranger — you know some one who knows them, or vice versa."

ALTHOUGH the 3000-mile step from the Pacific Nortwest to the South Pacific was a big one for this happy grandmother, it's a small one for vacationers and made even easier with Western Air Lines daily flights to the Islands from Los Angeles Internatonal Airport. With champaigne lunches, stereo music and movies, passengers rarely have time to finish the in-flight magazine before landing at Honolulu's Aloha International Airport.

travel

And it's another easy trip — either by air or by fast Seaflite hydrofoil — to Maui.

Charles Wilkes, commander of the U.S. Exploring Expedition, wrote in 1841 that at Lahaina "bathing and frolicking in the surf are more practiced than at any other place in these islands."

The good commander is still right.

AMONG A cluster of luxury resorts, golf courses and tennis courts dotting the strand, one of the most beautiful and complete complexes (from an assortment of swimming pools to a laundromat) is the Royal Lahaina, a flagship hotel of Amfac's Island Holidays chain.

From it — via convenient trams, shuttle busses and even an old-time narrow-gauge railroad — tourists are transported to white sand beaches which stretch from Kapalua to Kaanapali, just north of Lahaina to Kihei and Wailea on the southwest shore of the island.

Islanders make it easy for tourists to play and spend money.

In addition to Lahaina Town — where Ms. Lane and the rest of the shopkeepers relax — there is Whaler's Village, a fashionable assortment of slick, top rate shops selling everything from authentic skrimshaw to puuka shells and tapa cloth.

Although the skrimshaw — the art of painstakingly scratching out pictures on whale tusks which was begun by whalers to while away their time — is now being done with electric needles in a fraction of the time it took the whalers to do it, little else has been speeded up.

The ocean waves move slowly towards shore.

The sun seems to hang in the sky longer than anywhere else on earth.

There's time to laugh and time to talk and time to live.

Lake country in England for summer

stan delaplane

Windemere, England

In the Splendid Seventies, the grandest mansion in England's Lake Country was Belsfield, home of H.W. Schneider, Esq. His money came from shipping — and later armaments.

Those were days of peace and prosperity. (Building notes show his skilled workmen were paid 24 pence a day. And there were no income taxes to plague an industrial giant.)

Each morning, Mr. Schneider came down Belsfield's ornate stairs. I never saw his picture. But I see him as a portly, nononsense man with a dignified moustache.

He crossed the great barbered lawn that reaches a hundred yards down to Lake Windemere.

Preceding him was a corps of butlers each carrying a covered silver tray. There he boarded his 75-foot motor vessel. Breakfasted lavishly in the paneled cabin on plovers' eggs, Scottish gammon and grilled kidneys.

On the other side of the lake, he mounted his private train. Rode 25 miles to the great Vickers shipbuilding yards. In the afternoon, he came home the same way.

Schneider lived well and died rich and respected. Belsfield — (its ceilings ornamented by imported Italians) — was sold for a hotel.

"WE ARE fully booked for the season," says a London hotel man. (A friend of mine so I know he's not jiving me.)

("Good Americans when they die go to Paris," was a clever saying once.)

"This year London's the first choice," said the hotel man. "Paris? Too expensive. Rome? Too much Italian temperament. A strike a day."

The dollar-to-pound ratio is enticing. "A sweater from a West End boutique was $24 a year ago. Goes now for $16."

The London summer season is always crowded. Even with advance booking in a restaurant: "Your table's not quite ready, sir. Why don't you go to the bar and we'll call you."

At the rooftop of the Hilton — martinis are $2.50 a pop — the bartender was so rushed he had no time to throw out the old ice.

Just dumped more gin on top. Hence the noble martini drowned sadly in water.

I head for the countryside in England's summers.

Viking heritage a charm of Oslo

choral pepper

OSLO, Norway — The Norwegian capital may not be beautiful like Stockholm nor frivolous like Copenhagen, but it is the most beguiling city in Scandinavia.

The thing that makes Oslo so beguiling is the cultural heritage of its sturdy people. For example, while the 19th century Norwegian playright Ibsen was living in Italy, he refused to sail with his neighbors.

"When there are stormy seas," he complained, "the Neapolitans lie flat in their boats and pray to the Madonna instead of reefing in their sails like good Norwegians." The pragmatic Norwegians have survived a lot of stormy seas.

Founded in 1050 by Viking King Harald Hardrade, Oslo's stormy history included alliances with both Denmark and Sweden. During some of those periods, it even lost its name. It was known as Christiania until 1905 when Norway finally became wholly independent and restored its original name to the capital.

IN SPITE of the city's long history, museums devoted to Viking art are the only prominent witnesses to the past. Oslo today is strikingly modern. It has produced some of the world's strongest art forms and has provided showcases for them that are envied by artists throughout the world.

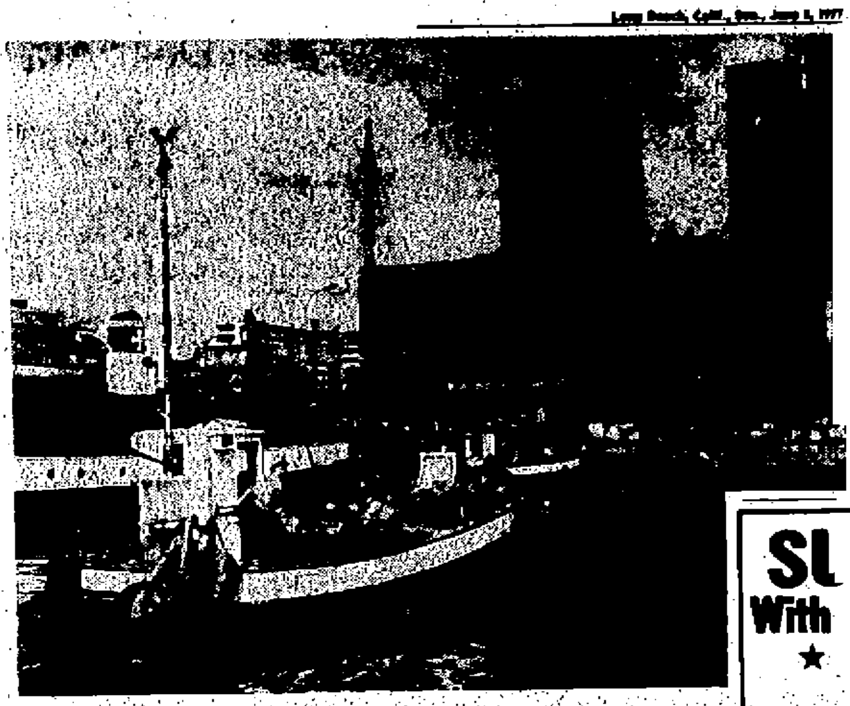
Most impressive is the Vigeland sculpture in Frognor Park. This is Gustav Vigeland's most gigantic work. In 1921 the artist offered his complete work to the city of Oslo provided a studio would be built for him. It was, and is now a museum on the fringe of the park that houses his enormous collection from 1905 up to 1943, when he died.

Of major interest, however, are the 150 sculptural groups in the 80-acre park adjacent to the studio museum. This park is a unique contribution to the art world.

ALTHOUGH a monolith of granite with 121 figures climbing spirally toward the top is considered Vigeland's masterpiece, a fountain representing the tree of life is even more enigmatic. Around a huge water basin supported by six male figures are 29 flat-topped trees with life-sized humans incorporated into the patterns of their branches. Some figures meld into the tree form as harmoniously as music. Others fight hopelessly for escape from branches as confining as a prison.

Of Oslo's plethora of museums, the Viking Ship House holds the most graphic exhibits of life in the early days of civilization. Few of us realize that from the eighth to the 11th centuries, the seafaring Vikings were more influential than any other ethnic group in Western Europe. Not only did they initiate trade routes in Europe, they penetrated China and North America.

IN THE museum is displayed a famous bucket with Buddha figures supporting each end of the handle. One of the grave artifacts buried with the excavated ships on display, it testifies to the extent of Viking trade routes.



These grave goods tell more than anything else about the Viking's bold seamsnship and homelife on land. The three ships displayed at the museum had been drawn ashore around the last half of the ninth century to be used as burial ships for ancient rulers. It was the custom then, as it was in most primitive cultures, to bury personal possessions along with the dead in order to assure their comfort in a future life.

Bedding, furniture, textiles, spinning equipment, iron lamps and wooden treasures rich with imaginative carvings all were included. Today the great manor houses of these rulers have disappeared without a trace, but their ceremonial furnishings give us a glimpse of what royal Viking life was like.

AS ADVANCED as Norwegian architecture has become today, it was only recently that a truly quality hotel opened in Oslo. This is the new Scandinavia, operated for SAS by Western International Hotels. Everything in it is Scandinavian from the down puffs on the beds to the sherry herring at the buffet lunch in the Brasserie off the lobby.

Nightlife in Oslo is muted compared to other Scandinavian capitals, unless you know where to go.

Baja resort boasts beach bridle trail

By Marsha Kay Self,
Ridder News Service

ROSARITA BEACH, Mexico — Fifteen minutes from Tijuana on the new toll highway (41 cents) or a little longer on the old road, the Rosarita Beach Hotel is a tribute to the past.

Built in 1928, the graceful hacienda-style resort looks out over barren stretches of beach and blue ocean.

Famous Hollywood guests have included Orson Wells, Rita Hayworth, Lana Turner and Mickey Rooney.

Although the hotel is starting to show signs of age — wall plaster is peeling and windows are marred with graffiti — there are plans to renovate.

Meanwhile, the hotel provides a pleasant vacation spot for tourists who would like to remember yesterday while enjoying the comforts of today.

The Mexican architecture is decorated lavishly with tiles and massive, colorful murals, painted by Matias Santoyo. Even the bathrooms off the lobby are a study in old-fashioned charm, with high ceilings, numerous arches and fine blue tiles from floor to ceiling.

EXPOSED wooden beams in the sleeping rooms are accented with intricate, colorful designs.

The beach right outside the door goes on as far as one can see.

Here, each morning, a young man called "Roberto" stands with his eight horses for rent to the tourists.

Horses, completely tacked in Mexican gear rent for $2 an hour. Roberto, who boards his brood at a nearby ranch, is at the beach before 9 a.m. and leaves after dark.

The dining room overlooks the ocean and includes something for every taste. (Try the thick, rich lobster soup. It's great.)

If you'd like to check out the town's curio shops, be prepared for a hike. The shops are about a mile down the dusty, rocky roadside.

Hugo Torres, the hotel's general manager, says the famous hotel was the founder of the town. "As the hotel started to enlarge more and more, people came to settle and work here. From a Rancheria in the early Thirties, we have become a growing town of 14,000."

Workshop

Looking for a way to keep the kids busy this summer? Well, today we have something for our very youngest do-it-yourself fans. Do you realize that right in your own house or apartment you have the makings of delightful playthings for children? All it takes is a little imagination, an old milk carton, newspaper, or other typical household discards.

If you're like me, you watched Shari Lewis and Lambchop grow up on television. But she doesn't believe that children should just watch the tube. So we sat down together and came up with a really fun-filled, 112 page, hardcover book of stories and crafts woven together for children, ages 5 through 12 years! They can create Indian villages (complete with egg warriors, paper cup teepees and trees), shadow puppets...a total of more than 60 projects.

Dear Abby

Men she dates are all affair-minded

abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old woman who has had enough bad experiences with men to fill a book. I've always had a good figure and a pretty face, and I never had any trouble getting dates. The trouble is I want to get married, but none of the guys I've gone with has wanted to marry me. They all want affairs, but not marriage.

I have had two abortions and have promised myself that I will not go to bed with another man unless be marries me first.

Sex never gave me much pleasure. I just gave in to please the guy.

I'm going with a man now who keeps trying to get me into bed, but I'm holding out. He promised that if he gets me pregnant he will marry me.

Now I'm wondering if maybe that isn't the way to get him to marry me. I'd really like to marry him.

I'm so mixed up I don't know what to do. Can you help me?—WANTS MARRIAGE

DEAR WANTS: With regard to the man in your life: His promise to marry you if he gets you pregnant is about as worthless as he is.

Stick to your decision. You're beginning to get it together. Don't permit yourself to be used.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been having an affair right in front of my face for more than two years. His "mistress" is a bit out of the ordinary. It's a set of golf clubs.

I married a golf nut. When he's not working or eating, he has an imaginary golf club in his hands, which he continually swings back and forth. His practice area ranges from my parents' home to our bedroom.

He has left the house in a rainstorm to go to the driving range to practice!

Other than his all-consuming obsession with golf he is probably the most perfect husband a woman could imagine.—JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: I wonder if you know how lucky you are. If you aren't already a golfer, I urge you to develop an interest in the sport. Take lessons from a pro, keep your head down and keep your eye on your husband.

DEAR ABBY: Did you know that some people actually can hardly wait to get the newspaper to read the divorce column.

I think I will gag if I hear once more, "Oh, did you see in the newspaper that so and so is divorcing her husband?"

A piece of news like that seems to make some busybody's day.

Abby, is there any good reason for publishing the names of those who have received divorce decrees? Personally, I think it's an invasion of one's privacy. — GAGGING

DEAR GAGGING: Laws in every state require the registration of births, deaths, divorces and marriages. This is for both the public's information and protection. In areas where this "public record" is not too extensive, newspapers publish it as a service to their readers. A public record, mandated by law, can hardly be considered an "invasion of privacy." But if you think it is, why not challenge the law?

The Formula

Porcelain takes to a good scrubbing

Sinks and bathtubs are usually made of cast, formed, or in some cases fabricated metal. Then, with the exception of nonrusting metals such as stainless steel, are coated with an impervious hard glass-like finish such as porcelain.

Porcelain enamel is a vitreous material applied to the metal by either spraying or dipping. After this (several coats can be applied), the piece is fired at a temperature of about 1500 degrees F., which causes it to flow and bond to the metal. While bonded porcelain is extremely dense, it does have a degree of porosity. And because bacteria are micro-organisms they can lodge on the surface. For this reason, as well as for cosmetic effect, regular cleaning is essential. Here's an inflation-beater formula that will do a good job.

You'll need one cup of TRISODIUM PHOSPHATE (TSP), (handle this ingredient with caution, and use gloves); one cup POWDERED SOAP and two cups CALCIUM CARBONATE (chalk). Dry mix these ingredients thoroughly and transfer to open top jar. To use, pick up this material on a damp cloth or sponge and rub on surface to be cleaned. Rinse with clear water. As with any type of cleaning agent, be sure to wear gloves.

Redistricting battled

But ABC compromises found

By Kris Sherman
Staff Writer

Angry parents and frustrated school officials have reached some tentative compromises on proposed attendance boundary changes in the ABC Unified School District, but several sensitive issues remain in the plan to be presented to the school board Monday night.

The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the gymnasium at Cerritos High School, 12500 E. 183rd St.

Schools Supt. Eugene Tucker has said that the plan to redraw attendance boundary lines for most of the district's elementary and junior high schools is necessary to achieve racial balance on some campuses and avoid overcrowding at others.

He added that if the plan is not immediately adopted, then the district would lose nearly $1 million in federal Emergency School Aid Act funds and be forced to put two, and possibly three, schools on double sessions next fall.

Tucker said the plan would initially affect only about 1,300 of the district's 24,000 kindergarten through 12th-grade students but that it's designed to remain in effect for about five years.

Following a stormy public hearing on the proposed plan last Tuesday, school district staff members studied the comments of angry parents and recommended some alternatives to the previous proposals.

About 700 noisy, placard-waving parents and school employes attended the hearing, and most expressed their staunch opposition to parts of the plan.

In general, the parents said they believed they were being stripped of their choice of a neighborhood school for their children. They argued that the new boundary lines would "split some neighborhoods and deprive children of the chance to go to school with their playmates," and said they were angry about some portions of the plan that would send students from middle-income families into low-income communities.

The parents also said they were concerned about the safety of children crossing major streets on their way to school; said they believed minority children would lose the benefits of special education programs by transfer to white, middle-class schools, and charged that forcing children to change schools would cause them "irreparable psychological damage."

The alternatives worked out by the staff — and aimed at defusing many of the parents' complaints — will be presented to the board Monday, but board members could alter the plan again before it is adopted.

Despite the staff's attempts to make some parents happy by arranging various trade-offs, there are indications that the board will draw the ire of parents whose children must change schools.

One such parent, Kathy Vargas of East Lakewood, said Saturday that she's afraid the transfer of her five children from Melbourne Elementary School to Aloha Elementary School will cause their reading and math skills to suffer.

"Our school is already integrated," she said, "and many of the children are bilingual. Mel-

Whale Ho!

A sand-sculpted whale takes shape Saturday on the beach at Cabrillo Marine Museum near San Pedro where the beginning of a week-long annual Whale Fiesta was celebrated by about 1,000 persons who helped build models of a 110-foot blue whale and a 48-foot gray whale. Educational programs on whales are scheduled at the museum from 8 to 9:30 p.m. through Friday, sponsored by the Los Angeles City Recreation and Park Department and the American Cetacean Society. A bonfire and a film on the California gray whale followed the sand carving Saturday.

Tuna Club recalls celebrities who reeled in 'the big ones'

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

Although Santa Catalina is known as the island of romance, an all-male stronghold has managed to survive there for nearly 80 years.

The Tuna Club of Avalon, the first sport fishing club in the United States, was started in 1898, and now its membership consists of about 200 "gentlemen anglers over the age of 21 years," according to its by-laws.

Some of the leading personalities of this century have been guests of the club. British leader Winston Churchill once was a guest. Gen. George Patton was an honorary member. Movie mogul Cecil B. DeMille was an active member.

Even though celebrities no longer frequent the club as they once did, many prominent businessmen, including about 40 from Long Beach, are among its members.

For instance, Los Angeles County Sheriff Pete Pitchess is listed as a current honorary member along with King Olav of Norway. Among the associate members are H.E. "Bud" Ridings Jr., a member of the Long Beach board of harbor commissioners; Bernard J. Ridder Jr., publisher of the Orange County Evening News; and Frank Vessels Jr. of Los Alamitos race course. Forrest N. Shumway; president of Signal Co. Inc. is among the active members.

GEORGE BRANZELL

The club was started in 1898 by Dr. Charles Frederick Holder, co-founder of the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena. His idea was to promote the sport of fishing with a rod and reel. Before then, fish were caught off Catalina with hand lines.

Its current Avalon waterfront home, a rambling two-story white woodframe structure, was built after the first clubhouse was destroyed by fire in 1915. Inside, the wood-paneled walls are lined with trophies, preserved fish, pictures of past members, fishing paraphernalia and even a walrus head.

"It hasn't changed a bit. The only concession is we put a TV in," said assistant secretary and club manager George Branzell.

20% cut in funds

Police grants 'drying up'

By Robert Gore
Staff Writer

Hard times are coming for some of the state's law enforcement agencies which have long been the recipients of large grants from unquestioning federal and state bureaucrats, says the state's top grant official.

Not only will police departments get less money, but the funds that once flowed freely for exotic armaments are being cut off and the federal money they now get must be spent on neighborhood crime-related projects, he said.

U.S. money available to local police departments, district attorney's offices, courts, probation departments and other agencies has been trimmed by 20 per cent and will be reduced even further, according to Douglas Cunningham, director of the California Council on Criminal Justice Planning.

As head of the CCCJP, Cunningham monitors all grant funds ($600 million) being distributed annually to departments throughout the state.

In a telephone interview from his Sacramento office, Cunningham discussed the grantsmanship game — who controls the money, who gets it and who does the watchdogging.

In 1975 Cunningham, strongly supported by Gov. Brown, announced that all grant funds were being frozen while his office made sure the money was going to worthwhile efforts.

A howl of protest went up from offended law enforcement administrators at the unheard-of action.

"I've made no formal polling since that time, but the police are happy now that some of the programs were examined," Cunningham said. "They were skeptical of many of the programs themselves."

As recently as 1976 state agencies were splitting $750 million. Of the $600 million scheduled for this year, police departments will get about half and the remainder will go to such programs as court aid and juvenile delinquency prevention.

Grant proposals must show Cunningham's staff that a clearcut problem exists and that there is a possible solution.

"Hard numbers — that's what police work is all about now," he said.

"The amount of money involved is going down," he added, explaining that an increasingly larger slice of the pie will be spent on nonpolice organizations.

The CCCJP is formulating a new set of priorities on how it would prefer police departments spend grant funds, Cunningham said.

Combatting terrorists, fighting the criminal activities of prison-based gangs and others are on the new list, he said.

TWENTY-THREE Skiddoo! Everything's up to date in Long Beach, where "People Talk" has come into possession of the October 1929 issue of Captain Billy's Whiz Bang.

—Back in the Roaring 20s Whiz Bang left 425,000 [illegible] horizontal in the aisles and their funny bones in a permanent state of tickle. It was a real [illegible] and pretty racy stuff for its time. W.A. Fawcett, the magazine's publisher and chief [illegible], laughed all the way to the bank.

If vaudeville were still in business, I could parlay the October 1929 issue of Whiz Bang into a split week in Sheboygan, on the Orpheum circuit. Many aspiring comics did just that in those days, using Whiz Bang gags that were old when Smith & Dale were young.

If I tried any of those Whiz Bang routines today, I'd probably get a split week in a rubber room — and have my pockets picked by Milton Berle.

These are the jokes, folks:

— A flapper is always ready to read an article on how to prolong life; an old maid prefers one on why.

— This month's best Scotch story is about the Scot who was putting toilet water on his face when the seat fell and hit him on the head.

— A bachelor is a fellow who makes mistakes without marrying them.

— An old maid is just one of the girls who said "No" once too often.

— The great diabetic song hit entitled: "My Granulated Papa Can Sure Raise Cane."

— Lots of flappers nowadays look like "It and Rum" victims.

Newspapers of the time afforded Captain Billy the opportunity for humorous heads, and he took advantage of such as these:

— Pomeroy (Ohio) Democrat: A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Petrie, Friday. A trained nurse is suspected.

— Malta (Iowa) Gazette: USED CLOTHING — Mrs. Thomas has cast off clothing of all kinds. Call at 237 Whittaker St. Evenings till 9 o'clock.

— El Paso (Texas) Herald: After her aria, "Mamma Morta," the applause continued until she acknowledged it with several bows. Her voice is so pure of tone and so exquisitely true to pitch that it would be a joy to hear her sing a song without scenery or costume.

And so it went with Captain Billy's Whiz Bang, friend of the traveling salesman and the farmer's daughter, toastmaster's delight, pride of the Odd Fellows smokers, chaser of speakeasy shots.

Captain Billy has long since gone to that great joke file in the sky. But don't despair, the Earl Wilson column in the Independent, Press-Telegram keeps Whiz Bang alive.

Ann French of Long Beach gave me more than a "People Talk" column when she delivered the Whiz Bang to my perpetual custody. She also opened up a new career for me, for after I memorize Captain Bill's material I intend to make myself available for lodge smokers, banquets, bar mitzvahs, Las Vegas Nights and supermarket openings.

Could be I'll even wind up on the Gong Show, if Henny Youngman doesn't beat me to it.

Now let's treat with another form of show business, the Ha'Penny Players, sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department. The players, who are certainly no joke, are cranking up for a summer production of "Androcles and the Lion," to be staged this summer at Jordan High School Auditorium. That's where you come in, if you want to, have talent and are 16 years of age or older.

June 13 and 14 the Ha'Penny players will hold auditions for singers, dancers and actors. The time is 7:30 p.m. and the place is the Recreation Department's Wightman Hall, 155 Queen's Way Landing.

Singers are asked to bring their own audition music in the key best suited for them. If you don't have a key, have one made for a quarter.

Dave Barton and Matt Bond are the architects of "Androcles and the Lion," an original musical work that goes down in August and later is to tour the United States.

Incidentally, the players need donations of sheets, table cloths, draperies and yard goods for costumes and props. Call 432-5831, Ext. 245, if you can help.

Close to stealing

The County of Los Angeles, which regularly seems to be taking local taxpayers' money under false pretenses considering what they get in return, is now trying something that comes pretty close to stealing.

Without permission of Long Beach Unified School District, the county is borrowing district funds and does not plan to pay any interest on the loan.

Dr. Hugh David Burcham, president of the Long Beach Board of Education, said the board was "appalled" by the action and will take all necessary legal steps to "oppose the diversion of funds from educational purposes to county purposes."

FOR SOME YEARS, Los Angeles County has required that all funds received by LBUSD be deposited in a cash pool controlled by the county treasurer, who reinvests the pooled funds. Interest earned by the funds is divided among agencies contributing to the pool in proportion to their share of the total funds.

The county has been a heavy borrower from this pool, averaging an estimated $4 million annually over the past two years. Up until this year, it has reimbursed the pool for any loss of earnings on the money it has taken.

Now, the county says it will no longer reimburse LBUSD and the other participating agencies for interest lost when it borrows money from the funds entrusted to its care for investment.

Not only that, the county says it will try to recover reimbursement it has paid for lost interest earnings in prior years.

No wonder the Long Beach Board of Education is "appalled."

THE COUNTY IS trying to claim that a vague provision of the state constitution which allows one public agency to lend its funds to another permits it to get interest-free loans at the expense of local taxpayers. It is a specious argument.

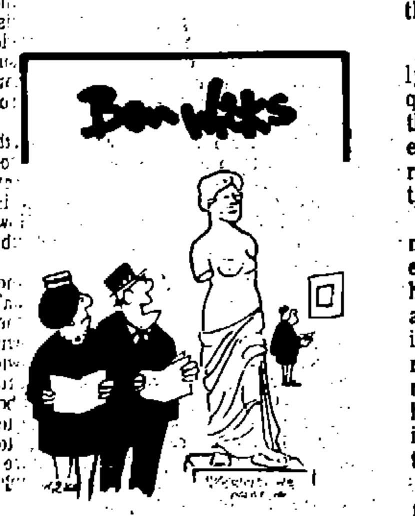
The constitutional provision cited was intended to enable a public agency to avoid having to borrow from private lenders at high interest rates. It never was intended that one government agency should be able to get a free loan at the expense of another government agency.

The County of Los Angeles already is getting a larger share of property taxes than it probably deserves. If it gets away with this shenanigan, local taxpayers will really be getting ripped off.

Defensible borders

Ten years ago today, shortly before 8 a.m., planes of the Israeli Air Force launched a surprise attack against Egypt. Six days later, the war was over — and Israel controlled the Egyptian Sinai, the Syrian Golan Heights and the Jordanian West Bank.

The Israeli government defended its actions by saying Egypt had moved a large number of troops into the Sinai and was preparing to attack. The Arabs claimed, however, that the Egyptian buildup was a reaction to Israeli threats against Syria.



'Now that's what I call arms limitation!'

Peace proposals offered by the United States and the United Nations were rejected by the Israelis, who felt they at last had "secure borders," and would not surrender any occupied territory until satisfied they would not be attacked again.

The Yom Kippur War of 1973 raised some doubts about the "security" of the post-1967 borders, however. Israel said the war would have been disastrous if it had not held the occupied areas, but the Arabs countered that there would not have been an attack if the territories had been returned.

MANY MIDDLE EAST analysts believe Israel must relinquish the occupied areas before there will be durable peace. However, the Likud victory in the recent elections makes such action less likely.

It is understandable that a nation which has faced threats of extermination throughout its brief history is reluctant to relinquish any territory which it believes lets its enemies come closer, or gain military advantage. And yet Israel's intransigence on this point has caused concern even among its strongest supporters, such as the United States.

Some way must be found to guarantee Israel's sovereignty before it can be expected to reduce its defenses.

Carter conservative?

He told voters he would be

NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter is turning out to be the most conservative Democratic President since Grover Cleveland.

Behind all the headlines about a foreign policy based on human rights, Andrew Young's gadfly attacks on entrenched racism and James Schlesinger's comprehensive energy program, the stark fact is that the Carter economic policies have turned out to be not much different from Gerald Ford's.

This is not just because the President has issued Ford-style threats to veto congressional bills that would expand spending for farm price supports, water projects, and educational aid to communities with large numbers of federal employes; Carter seems to be on firm ground in these relatively narrow conflicts.

IT IS RATHER the general direction of his administration that is so remarkable for a Democrat — winning, for example, the praise of Ford's top economic adviser, Alan Greenspan, and the hostility of organized labor.

Carter and other administration officials have stated explicitly that their highest economic priority is to achieve a balanced federal budget by 1981, despite the fact that their basic means of achieving that goal — holding down expenditures — will help keep unemployment at an unacceptable level throughout the period.

By their actions, they have left no doubt that they place winning and keeping the "confidence" of the business community at the top of their recovery measures — a feat which no Democrat since Cleveland has been able to bring off, and which may be greatly overrated, anyway, as a means of increasing business investment.

A welfare reform is proposed which is not to be allowed to cost a dollar more than the present program — even if that restriction brings into question Carter's campaign pledge to relieve cities and states of their crushing welfare burdens.

A Social Security reform is put forward that would rely most heavily on higher payroll taxes and diversions from general revenues — although in 1976 Carter said frequently that the best cure for what ails the Social Security trust fund is to put people back to work, thus increasing contributions, while holding down prices, which would make benefits go further.

Tom Wicker

New York Times News Service

The Carter emergency economic stimulus plan, developed quickly and with much fanfare, was as quickly jettisoned; and on the other hand the Carter anti-inflation program, when finally unveiled, promised all the impact of a WIN button.

In Congress the suspicion is afoot that Carter even means to reappoint Arthur Burns as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, which would be in keeping with the economic record of the Carter administration, if not that of the Carter campaign last year.

The real point is not, however, whether Carter is acting now precisely as he said he would when he was running for office. No voter can reasonably expect that experience and circumstance may not dictate a considerable difference between promise and performance; and no President should be too rigid or too fearful to change his mind or his policy when necessary.

It was only infrequently and not too convincingly, moreover, that Carter in his campaign donned the economic mantle of F.D.R. or the social work of L.B.J.

He said far more often and more passionately that he intended to cut waste, run things efficiently and balance the budget. If he now seems even more zealously dedicated to those propositions than some of us might have expected, no one can fairly say he wasn't warned.

The more important point is that Carter's economic conservatism is not likely to advance the general welfare any better than Ford's did, or Grover Cleveland's.

ESSENTIALLY, HE is willing to let unemployment remain high — above six per cent — for most of his term, in order to keep inflation from rising unacceptably and to enable him to balance the budget by 1981, as if that were some magic number or anything other than an arbitrary target probably influenced by re-election politics.

The real need — in Jimmy Carter's term as in Gerald Ford's — is for a strong attack on unemployment AND a strong attack on inflation, carried out simultaneously. Neither can be soundly dealt with by using either to fight the other; and a sadly lengthening record shows that such a policy only leaves the nation with too much of both.

As for those budget deficits that Carter regards with proper horror, every percentage point of unemployment costs the government about $16 billion in lost taxes and compensation benefits.

That's more nearly why the budget won't balance than a spendthrift congress.

Override of death penalty veto could boomerang on Republicans

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — California Republicans have been bearing for so long about the party's "death wish" that they've begun to believe it really has one.

And maybe it does.

Nothing else could account for otherwise intelligent people taking what might have been a Republican political advantage and simply handing it to the Democrats.

Gov. Brown's veto of the death penalty bill might have been a political advantage in next year's elections. After all, 67 per cent of the state's voters approved the death penalty in principle when they supported Prop. 17 in 1972. Each of those voters might be unhappy with a governor who places his individual wisdom over their collective wisdom.

They probably are unhappy, if, as Sen. John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton, says, the death penalty is "the most important unresolved issue in California."

But the suspicion is there is an issue of far greater importance.

That is the issue of public confidence in government, or, rather, the lack of public confidence in government.

Jerry Brown wins on that issue. John Briggs loses, and so do other Republicans who say they will withhold their vote on a veto override because they want a death penalty initiative to be on the ballot if Brown seeks re-election next year.

"We," Democrats will say, "acted out of conviction. We were willing to lay our political careers on the line for that conviction."

They will undoubtedly point out that Evelle J. Younger, the state Attorney General who wants to be Brown's Republican opponent next year, said immediately after the veto was announced that "...the governor's action has delayed enactment of a death penalty law, and by so doing has taken away from the people protection against violent criminals which such a law would give us."

John Briggs and other death penalty advocates have argued that capital punishment is a deterrent, that it does provide protection. But, say Briggs and a few other Republican legislators, keeping that protection from Californians for the next 18 months is worthwhile if it means gaining a political advantage over Jerry Brown next year.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

If, in fact, fear of the death penalty does deter potential killers, Democrats are certain to say, then Republicans who withheld their support on a veto override vote are willing to allow those potential killers to go undeterred, to become actual killers.

Which means, of course, there will be actual victims.

What might have been a political advantage for all Republicans becomes instead a campaign weapon for Democrats.

There was no agreement that Brown's veto will hurt him very much at all, to begin with. His opposition to the death penalty has been on the record for many years.

He is known to have urged his father to spare the life of Caryl Chessman in 1960. Former governor Pat Brown allowed Chessman to be executed, nevertheless.

Briggs, who announced his gubernatorial candidacy May 16, points out that while he was personally witnessing the last execution in California, in 1967, Jerry Brown was among those outside the gates of San Quentin demonstrating in protest.

So Jerry Brown's position on capital punishment was well known when he ran for the governorship in 1974. Yet, Californians, who two years earlier had supported Prop. 17 two to one, voted Brown into office.

In January of this year he said he would veto any death penalty bill sent to his desk, and on May 27 he did just that.

There may be some Jerry Brown supporters who would vote for someone else because of the veto, but it is doubtful that the one issue, of itself, will be enough to swing the election.

There might even be some voters, mildly disenchanted with Jerry Brown, or apathetic about politics in general, or even opposed to many of the things he has done, who might think a vote for him would be a vote for the principle of principle.

But for a politician who says he thinks Californians would gain a protection from having a death penalty law on the books — it would become law 12 days after the override process is completed — and yet join with Democrats opposed in principle to state-sanctioned killings so an initiative could appear on the same 1978 ballot as Jerry Brown's re-election effort, that is something else again.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 5, the 156th day of 1977. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, the World War II Battle of France began.

On this date:

In 1872, a Republican National Convention in Philadelphia nominated General Ulysses S. Grant for President.

In 1917, more than 9 million American men registered for the World War I draft.

In 1947, Secretary of State George Marshall, speaking at Harvard University, outlined a program which became known as the Marshall Plan to help Europe's economic recovery.

In 1968, Senator Robert Kennedy was shot and fatally wounded in a Los Angeles hotel.

One year ago: The Teton Dam in Idaho's upper Snake River Valley burst, forcing about 30,000 people from their homes. Six persons were reported dead and 57 missing.

Thought for today: Men are never attached to you by favors. — Napoleon Bonaparte, 1769-1821.

Environmentalists lose in conflicts with energy

WASHINGTON — Have the environmentalists lost their clout here?

Well, when the House considered an air pollution bill a week ago, the environmentalists saw their amendments defeated.

And on the question of protection of porpoises from tuna fishermen, the House approved only one compromise environmentalist amendment.

Gil Bailey

View from our National Bureau

And the House is solidly in back of all those water projects President Carter would like to see abandoned.

So the environmentalist record in this congress isn't very strong.

Yet, there is a residual strength in the environmentalist movement. It is well organized and it can muster some votes, often just a few votes less than is needed to carry the issue.

On one key air pollution amendment the environmentalists lost by 13 votes — defections from the California delegation provided the margin of defeat for a measure supported by the state government.

One of the problems facing the environmentalists is an "absolute" position. For example, some environmentalists were a little miffed with Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., when he acceded to a compromise to one of his environmental amendments. However, McCloskey won that fight. The purists lost theirs.

THE MAJOR environmental fights this year are going to be over energy, and the environmentalists may well want to consider some compromises, if they wish to win any points.

If the reports are true that the Carter administration has decided to back a coal slurry pipeline to move western coal, the environmentalists are going to be between a rock and a hard place.

Some of the water developed for western irrigation projects, now being attacked by the Carter administration and the environmentalists, may well be used for that coal slurry line.

In addition, development of coal resources and the burning of coal are both environmentally damaging.

But when it comes to a choice between energy and the environment, it is pretty clear that energy is going to win. Environmentalists need to recognize that fact and to plan their strategies accordingly.

There are some places in which the environmentalist point of view can coincide with energy needs.

Conservation is still the only cheap and immediately available method to ease the energy crisis.

No snubbing of Community Players, clippings show

The house lights dim. The curtain rises. Donald P. Danielsen of Long Beach enters from stage right to ask:

"Why is it that the Long Beach Community Playhouse (on East Anaheim Street) has so much trouble getting a release printed in the Independent, Press-Telegram?

"As a member of the (playhouse) board of directors for 11 years and president for two years, I became very aware of this. The playhouse is a nonprofit operation, nearly 50 years in existence, never received any public money in subsidy, a real asset to the city."

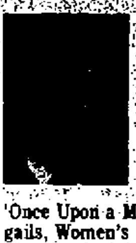
THE OMBUDSMAN'S soliloquy in response:

"Let Donald P. Danielsen count the house whilst I count the news clippings contained in an envelope from the I, P-T library marked 'Long Beach Community Players.'

"The count, as of last Tuesday, shows five clippings thus far for the year 1977. They indicate the I, P-T is doing right by the Community Playhouse.

"On Jan. 14, our Ralph Hinman Jr. reviewed a frivolous, summer weight comedy entitled 'Spinoff' in these words: 'Overflow audiences already are attracted to the show, and it's safe to predict this happily commercial situation should continue through a run ending Feb. 12.'

"On Feb. 19, Hinman was enthusiastic about 'Another Part of the Forest.' Then, on March 17, Life/Style carried a story on the playhouse's benefit performance of



F. C. Anderson

'Once Upon a Mattress,' sponsored by Abigails, Women's Guild of Long Beach Community Playhouse. This was followed, on March 29, by an advance story on the playhouse production 'Not Now, Darling.'

"Finally, we come up to date with a laudatory I, P-T review of 'A Thousand Clowns.'

"It's obvious that the Community Playhouse isn't being starved for attention in the I, P-T, at least to my unjaundiced eye.

"I also checked our files for the years 1976, 1975 and 1974. The total: 35 news clippings relating to the Long Beach Community Playhouse. If that's starvation, all theatrical companies should eat so well."

So ends the Ombudsman's brief hour on the stage. We'll let Donald P. Danielsen review the performance and hope he doesn't charge me with satire. As George S. Kaufman used to say: "Satire is what closes on Saturday night."

Before we close the door on news releases, let us give thought to one I received Tuesday from the U.S. General Services Administration, Region 9, 525 Market St., San Francisco, California 94105, (415) 556-0877. I found it most revealing of what passes for news from the federal establishment these days.

The GSA news release was a blank sheet of paper. Naturally, I could not publish it, and I have a ready explanation for Uncle Sam, should he ask

FINALLY, A Long Beach man long active in scouting has accused the Independent, Press-Telegram of "irresponsible journalism" in its handling of testimony given before a House committee investigating the use of children in pornography and prostitution.

The scouter is especially irate over a story which appeared in the Press-Telegram's Evening Final edition of Friday, May 27. The story, credited to "Combined News Services," reported:

"Southland pornographers formed a Boy Scout troop for the express purpose of making pornographic movies, congressional investigators were told today.

"Author Robin Lloyd told the House Select Committee on Education and Labor that smut merchants use other ingenious ploys to lure young girls and boys into the porno movie business..."

Prior to the committee's Los Angeles hearings it had heard testimony by three Chicago Tribune reporters that "new victims (of child pornography) are recruited in summer camps and Boy Scout troops, and picked up right off the streets."

Granted, that's not good publicity for scouting, and I can understand the anger of the Long Beach scouter. But let's keep the matter in perspective. The testimony cannot be construed as a general indictment of scouting, which has a long and honorable record of service to youth and the world community. What the testimony does establish is that no institution, no matter how well respected, is immune to manipulation and misuse.

The pornographers have traded on scouting's good name, and they have been caught at it, by a press not eager to destroy scouting but to protect it from the depraved who would do it harm.

Any youth group can be a target of opportunity for pornographers. Innocence is a pliable material, as easily worked as putty.

SCOUTING WON'T be traduced by a press doing its job in reporting the facts. It can only be hurt by a head-in-the-sand attitude, by pretending it somehow is beyond the reach of social cancers such as pornography and the prostitutors of youth.

Scouting will survive the testimony given to the House committee. It will endure, a stronger, wiser and more alert institution than before.

Given a choice of saving face or saving kids, I know where my priorities are. When he's thought it over, perhaps the irate local scouter will agree.

Clean up your act!

Last week we made the error of leaving our new, 1977 automobile out of our garage until the "late" hour of 10 p.m. This would, normally, be a commonly acceptable act.

However, we are residents of Island Village and, unfortuntely, immediately in front of the Los Alamitos Generating Plant. Upon looking at the car the next morning, we found it covered with green spots which had come from the plant. It has now left stains which will never come out, even after polishing.

It was noted by the residents of Island Village that the Independent, Press-Telegram reported that this exhaust material was to be stopped after March. Obviously, it hasn't. In addition to permanently staining our automobile, what has it done to our property and what are we breathing? When are they going to clean up their act?

"Bully" for Teddy

Whoever reviewed James Whitmore's portrayal of Theodore Roosevelt came up with an explanation of the title, "Bully," which really piqued my interest.

Apparently the writer got the notion that Teddy himself was the "bully," because of the way he charged up San Juan Hill. Would you tell me where he or she found the basis for such an idea? In their own little head, I betcha.

Anyone who's ever read anything about Teddy Roosevelt knows that "Bully!" was his trademark expression whenever he was asked about his health or about some recent experience of his. "Bully!" was his way of saying "Excellent!" and this meaning of the word may be found in most dictionaries.

Far from being thought a bully because of his conduct at San Juan Hill, Roosevelt won acclaim as a charismatic leader and, ultimately, as President.

Life for a life

Concerning Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's letter on the death penalty, I wonder if they would feel the way they do now if one of their loved ones was murdered. I doubt it.

I have been close to one who was almost murdered. A very good doctor saved his life. In fact, I have a friend whose son was shot in cold blood. All the murderer got was five years probation.

As to their remarks about my letter, I did not say anything about hanging or executing pickpockets.

In calling for the death penalty, I am talking about premediated murder as in the case of the women from Santa Barbara who several years ago hired men to kill her pregnant daughter-in-law. The guilty got their just rewards as they were responsible for two deaths.

Smog vs. gasoline

On May 24, your paper printed an article about the smog rules for cars being too strict in California.

In the article, William O. Bourke, executive vice president of Ford Motor Co., said, "California cars presently suffer an 11-percent fuel economy loss compared with the same cars in the other 49 states."

What we have here are two serious problems. The first is air pollution. California has set up emission standards to control pollution, but in doing so is cutting our fuel economy by 11 per cent.

Then, our President says that he will put a tax on gasoline for over-consumption.

Being a resident and an automobile owner, I feel we must sacrifice one or the other. Either cut the fuel economy loss or make the emission standards lower. By doing one of these things, we will be solving one of our problems, that being saving gasoline

Tapping the sea

What would happen if the drought lasted another two, three, or even five years?

While the odds of the drought lasting that long are high, there is still a chance it may happen. So what can we do about it? Sure, mandatory rationing helps to control water usage, but it does nothing to replenish our dwindling supplies. This is where my proposal, desalinization, comes in.

Desalinization may be the up-and-coming process needed to supply the ever-growing demand for water in the future. It was in fact used as an experiment in San Diego. From 1962 to 1964, desalinated water was mixed in with the city's fresh water supply. But in 1964, their desalinization plant on Point Loma was dismantled and moved to the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. This at least proves it can work.

I realize that many money-minded citizens could bring up the item of cost. And I can see their reasoning behind it. But one can't forget there's a chance the drought may be prolonged for a number of years. Even if the desalinated water were used solely for industrial and agricultural purposes, it would relieve some of the strain on our water supply. The cost of desalinate water in the mid-50s ran to about $1,000 per acre-foot (an acre-foot is approximately 326,000 gallons of water. Estimates from the mid-60s placed the cost at about $70 to $100 per acre-foot, excluding overhead.

This idea may seem outrageous to some, and practical to others. But one thing for certain: at least it's a constructive idea toward solving the water problem. I encourage other imaginative citizens to come up with other ideas to help in solving our present crisis.

Promote the Queen

Who is responsible for the dismal lack of advertising for Long Beach's only tourist attraction, the Queen Mary? The City Council? The city manager? The Chamber of Commerce?

In the entertainment supplement which the Los Angeles Times prints every week, there were three large ads for San Diego's Zoo, Sea World and Wild Animal Park. Also advertised for the Memorial Day holiday trade were Magic Mountain, Disneyland, Knotts Berry Farm, Lion Country Safari and Marineland.

The same was true of the entertainment section of the Independent, Press-Telegram, which promoted every other attraction except our own.

Basically, all the above-mentioned attractions are artificial and make-believe, but the Queen Mary is for real, the biggest ship in the world, longer than three football fields end to end. It carried 15,000 troops at one time during the war and outran even our own destroyers, as well as enemy submarines.

The ship itself is an educational experience for both children and adults, and deserves repeated spots on radio, television, billboards, newspapers and magazines. Let us have some pride and promotion for our one and only tourist attraction, the really fabulous Queen Mary.

Myths of molesters

A rebuttal to the "Moral degeneracy" letter printed Tuesday, May 31:

Myth 1: "It is a known fact that a majority of child molesters are homosexuals, bisexuals or other sexual deviates."

• Studies have clearly shown that at least three-fourths of all child molesters are either relatives, family friends or neighbors. The homosexual child molester is uncommon and scorned by the vast majority of homosexuals.

Incidently, how "deviant" can something like homosexual behavior be if it has been tried, at least once, by over one-third of all the males in this country? By the way, much more uncommon than the homosexual are those parents who have given any kind of informed, meaningful sex education to their children.

Myth 2: A sexually molested child is "scarred for life."

• It is an unfortunate experience for a youngster to be seduced by a heterosexual or homosexual, but the effects are seldom permanent. Boys who have had this experience are no more likely to become homosexual than are boys who have not been seduced, and the evidence is that they later marry and lead quite normal lives.

Although the child molester is among the world's most despised men, physical violence to the child is rare (less than five per cent), and in only about one case in six is there any kind of coercion, including threats. Any lingering effects the child has from the experience are most likely caused by the parents' hysterical reaction to the incident rather than the incident itself.

Thank you, Doug

I want to thank Doug Ives for his timely suggestions and recommendations as the six-day Long Beach Match Play Golf Championship progressed. His wealth of knowledge about tournament play as well as golf play made the action proceed more smoothly.

Ives' friendly interest in each player and excellent and objective reporting helped considerably to maintain the respect that the scratch players have for the annual city tournament.

I don't believe any of the last four players in this elimination tournament could have described the blow-by-blow play of the last match or two as well as Ives did from his excellent notes of the play.

Thanks again from the newly experienced chairman of the tournament.

Beach parking fees

Have you ever, while driving along the shore, stopped for a few minutes to walk down to the beach, wet your "tootsies," and unwind? This, too, is almost "gone with the wind."

I have been reading about the proposed city budget and the increases proposed in fees, etc. I get mildly upset, but I can write off most of it as a sign of the times. However, I am absolutely appalled by beach parking fees of $1 and $2, or any kind of beach fees. I wonder if our city officials have become so old and mercenary that they have lost sight of their youth and the needs of a present-day youth.

I am not directly affected by this; I am not a local beach user. But, from my experiences when my daughters were teenagers, I know that one of the primary pastimes of Long Beach teen-agers is to go to the beach. Contrary to popular belief the majority of young people do not have too much spending money. Going to the beach was one thing they could do for relaxation and fun when they didn't have any money.

Everyone is so upset by youth's disrespect, vandalism, crime, alcohol and drug use, but do we give them any alternatives? They are more overwhelmed than we by today's inflation, unemployment, rules and regulations, red-tape bureaucracy and impersonalism. Why take away their opportunites to unwind and relax?

And what about pay tennis? Tennis, too, was a good pastime for youth.

Please give them free beach use.

Raise senior golf fees

The city manager's plan to raise the golf course rates has some merit. For those of us who play golf on a regular basis, I must express some concern. The city is going in the hole to the tune of $300,000 each year in golf course operations.

The senior citizen rates are for the time being to remain the same. A raise of the senior citizen rates would eliminate this annual loss. The answer is simple: all rates must be the same. Seniors are no better than the rest of us that suffer the raise.

I have played golf with hundreds of seniors, none of whom were "poor." The talk is always about stocks, bonds, mutuals and rental properties. Even they, who belong to Virginia and other private clubs enjoy the laugh about our low senior rates. Erase the loss, speed up the play. One rate for everyone.

The Brown brothers

Joe Segura, staff writer, wrote a good report of the dedication of the new Poly High School baseball field. However, he pulled the boo-boo of the year by leaving out two names of former Poly players who reached the professional leagues: Ollie Brown, now playing with Philadelphia, and his brother, Oscar.

Long Beach can proudly boast of this famous brother team, which includes Willie Brown of Poly and USC fame, now a coach with John McKay at Tampa.

Oppression by words

The English language is filled with words that degrade the speaker and listener. Negative, descriptive words have been used in our culture to oppress over half of our population. Women must endure a spoken oppression that has been justified too long in our culture.

Words such as broad, chick and many other sexually connoted words detract from the image of a woman. These words are used to define a rationality that men are somehow better than their opposite sex. They say to women: You need to be kept in your place and I will verbally remind you of that place, which is subjugation to me.

Women do not need to be kept anywhere and especially when a constructive interrelationship between men and women requires an equal basis. We are all people; we all have minds, bodies and thoughts which interact with this environment contributing a perception that builds the quality of life.

Word oppression is a verbal indication that a man believes in slavery, that he feels he is the master and she is the slave. Oppression and slavery have two prongs. One faces outward at the people and friends of the verbal oppressor. The other turns inward at the mental security of the person. The outer prong cuts into the listener who must bear the man degrade another in order to make himself feel superior. The inner prong keeps the man insecure, fearing the necessary close introspection with himself.

This inner doubt about his own worth keeps him from relating to women as people, therefore, eliminating a direct communication with women which is essential to an honest relationship. How can there be honesty in a dominant/submissive relationship?

Changing the words we speak is the first step to truly assessing internal thoughts. Degrading words oppress the mind. In order for one to release his own oppression, he needs to question his own insecurities and desires to dominate another. Woman is a term used to describe a person who has gone from adolescence to adult. The spoken transition from boy to man is universally accepted in our culture. Time has come for all men to realize adult females are to be called woman.

bourne has several special programs for these children, and I don't think they should be stuck in a school where they have to contend with white, middle-class values and white, middle-class teachers who expect them to measure up to those values.

"These low-income children need the benefit of the special programs that have been set up for them and the teachers who are familiar with their special problems."

Melbourne and Aloha schools are both in Lakewood. Melbourne has a minority enrollment of about 41 per cent while only about 27 per cent of Aloha's students are minority.

School officials have assured parents that the special programs for minority children will follow those children to their new schools, but Mrs. Vargas contends that it "will take at least two years to set up those programs properly."

"I don't want my children to lose ground while those programs are being arranged," she said.

Despite Mrs. Vargas' concerns, school officials said they expect their main problems to arise in the changes involving Stowers and Gonsalves schools, Aloha and Furgeson schools and Palms School. All are elementary schools.

According to the staff report, the district's most serious ethnic balance problem lies at Furgeson School in Hawaiian Gardens. The 625-student school currently has a minority enrollment of 72.32 per cent.

Under guidelines issued by the U.S. Office for Civil Rights, a school is considered racially isolated if its minority enrollment is 50 per cent or more.

ABC has five such elementary schools — Furgeson (Hawaiian Gardens); Bloomfield (Hawaiian Gardens); Elliott (Artesia); Juarez (Artesia), and Niemes (Artesia).

The proposal to achieve racial balance at Furgeson — a proposal that was altered following the public hearing — now involves transferring 199 students to Hawaiian School, also in Hawaiian Gardens, and receiving 120 students from Aloha School in East Lakewood.

According to the staff report, a "full range of bilingual-multicultural programs will be offered at Hawaiian School next year" for the benefit of students transferring from Furgeson School.

Students to be transferred from Aloha School to Furgeson include those living within an area from the south side of 215th Street to Carson Street, west of the San Gabriel River Freeway to the district boundary and east of the freeway to Elaine Avenue.

Students in the area from Gradwell Street to Carson — a neighborhood well represented during the public hearing and adamantly opposed to the pending transfer to Furgeson — would remain at Aloha.

Another move — one which the staff says is a key to racial balancing and elimination of overcrowding — would send 151 students living east of Bloomfield Avenue from Palms School in Lakewood to Melbourne School, also in Lakewood. Palms is expected to pick up about 105 students from a section of the new housing tract in the Regional Park area.

An alternative to that proposal — one not recommended by the staff — would send the Regional Park-area students to Melbourne in place of the Palms students. The students from the new housing tract, however, would have to travel about 1½ miles to school.

The Stowers-Gonsalves proposal, as recommended by the staff following the public hearing, would transfer 48 students living south of Artesia Boulevard and east of Shoemaker from Kennedy to Stowers; would include a new housing area east of Carmenita Junior High School in the Stowers attendance area, and would not require any students now attending Gonsalves to change schools.

The report noted, however, that the proposal violates one of the guidelines suggested by the district Committee on Pupil Housing — that students not cross one school attendance line to get to another school.

Tucker said copies of the complicated and often confusing proposals involving the various district schools are available at the district offices, 16700 Norwalk Blvd., Cerritos, and at each of the schools.

The ABC district, which covers Artesia, Cerritos, Hawaiian Gardens, East Lakewood and parts of Long Beach, Norwalk, La Mirada and Santa Fe Springs, currently has a minority enrollment of about 40 per cent.

The communities served by the district are relatively well integrated, and Aloha School has the smallest minority enrollment (27.32 per cent) of the district's 21 elementary schools.

Tucker said it's imperative for the district to achieve racial balance at those schools over 50 per cent minority enrollment but added that doing that is only part of the district's problem.

The phenomenal growth of Cerritos, coupled with a decline in growth in more established communities such as East Lakewood, has put enrollment pressure on some schools while attendance declines have been recorded at others.

tables, Branzell said members now play cards for small stakes. It wasn't always that way.

"There were probably more oil leases sold around these tables than anywhere else," Branzell said of the club membership in the past.

The exterior was used as the setting for the Albacore Club in the movie Chinatown, a story of corruption in Southern California in the 1930s.

Upstairs are 14 rooms for guests. They are simply, almost spartanly, furnished and have remained virtually unchanged since the club was built.

One reason women are not allowed as members, Branzell said, is that there are only common shower facilities for men upstairs.

He said women are not allowed inside after 5 p.m. There is an adjacent ladies' annex that is open from 7 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.

No women have attempted to become members, according to club vice president Richard M. Baker, a Pasadena insurance man and a member for nearly 40 years.

Baker said that before the club was incorporated in 1901 "ladies and gentlemen" did participate together.

Besides the sexual prerequisite, to be an active member an angler must catch a game fish on a regulation line.

"Being a member of the club doesn't guarantee you'll catch a fish," said Chester F. Yunker, a Long Beach oilman and member since 1948. In fact it took him eight years to catch his first marlin.

Yunker recalls that Winston Churchill had almost immediate luck: he caught a fish within 30 minutes of going out on a boat.

Branzell stresses that all the members are fishermen. The admission fee for a man between 21 and 30 is $250 and for those over 30 it's $500. Annual dues for California residents under 30 are $150 and $300 for those over 30.

One honorary member apparently never made it to the club despite his stated desire to fly fishing.

The honorary member, then Vice President Richard Nixon, wrote the club on June 27, 1967, "You may be sure that I am eagerly looking forward to a chance to be able to 'do battle with the big one' at some time in the future."

Baker said that even though there are no longer as many "big ones" in the waters around Catalina, the Tuna Club is "basically the same good old club."

Police losing U.S., state funds

Another priority area is citizen involvement.

"Police departments are the most credible of public agencies. They are four to five years ahead of other public institutions in developing community relations," Cunningham said.

"Police departments are uniquely able to develop citizen input," he said. The CCCJP is casting a favorable eye on community advisory boards, such as the one now being considered by a Long Beach City Council committee.

"In a time of municipal money shortage, police have gotten very adept at developing alternate methods of financing. There is a general trend to professionalization in police management," Cunningham continued. He named several LBPD commanders, including Acting Chief Carl Calkins, as good examples.

"In defense of the grantgivers," he said, "we have become pretty skilled at separating the good proposals from those that are not particularly impressive."

Applications have been drastically shortened and the department will hear its fate a lot faster than in the past, he noted. The amount of grant money being spent on the administration of grants, rather than the grant itself, has been cut.

"People who thought planning was action got a little offended," he said.

Cunningham told an anecdote that illustrated the move away from police using grants for exotic weaponry to using the money for more basic purposes.

Gov. Brown, according to Cunningham, was discussing how to cut the crime rate with a famous Harvard professor.

"There's only one thing we can do," said the professor. "Deploy local police to reinforce those natural neighborhood defense systems."

"That's right," he told the governor, "bring back the nosy neighbors."

City may withhold Edison payment

Anaheim's director of city utilities charged Saturday that Southern California Edison Co. "is trying to force the city out of the distribution business" and said the city may withhold a $3.6 million payment to Edison.

Director Gordon P. Hoyt said he may withhold the $3.6 million payment due for power supplied by Edison for distribution by the city to its 75,000 commercial and residential customers. Hoyt said he wants the company to "give assurances" that the city's legal rights will not be infringed.

Edison currently is petitioning the Federal Power Commission in Washington for rate increases and Anaheim is protesting. It is "a price squeeze," Hoyt said.

The decision to possibly withhold the $3.6 million payment to Edison was made on basis of advice from the city's legal counsel.

What's your problem?

Housing values keeping pace with cost-of-living inflation

By DON CAMPBELL

"A slow sort of country," said the Queen. "Now, here, you see, it takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that."

Which, as Alice found in "Through the Looking Glass," is a pretty good definition of inflation.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

The results of the last election concern me because it appears we are headed for tremendous inflation in the years to come. I retired in 1962, two years before retirement was mandatory. At that time we had an estate which we felt was indeed more than ample. We had good investments in good stocks and bonds.

We spent our winter months in Arizona and five months in Indiana. Two years ago we sold our home and became residents of Phoenix, Ariz. For the first time ever, we are renting in a better than average apartment complex. The rent has increased from $270 to $305 including all utilities, except the telephone. Our income from investments and Social Security is $11,000.

Our ages are 78 and 74 and we are very active, play golf, bowl and exercise every day and enjoy good health. We are considering buying a home here in Phoenix in the $25,000 range. Our monthly payments — including taxes, insurance and interest — would be less than half what we pay for rent. The utilities would be extra and might average $30 per month. With inflation prospects so great, we thought we should have the benefit of the increase in the property value. What do you think? — R. L. H., Phoenix.

A. I couldn't agree more with your logic. Like the value of anything and everything in life, real estate can fluctuate; but the bare-bone truth of the matter is that since World War II the appreciation in the value of the average home has been in a fairly steady uptrend that, at least, has kept pace with the cost of living — despite several pretty blood-chilling drops in the economy.

Don't let your age deter you — go ahead with your plan. The only point on which I might argue is your estimate of your utility bills. I think you're pretty far on the low side.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

How did the "no qualify" policy come about in homebuying? Just what does it mean? Anyone can buy a home regardless of income. That's what it sounds like. Mrs. A. J. L., San Diego.

A. You've got me — I haven't heard the phrase "no qualify" as a new policy in home buying.

What you may have heard of, and have it confused with, is legislation that has come about in the past few years making it illegal to disqualify would-be home buyers for some things that were commonplace in the past.

You can't, for instance, disqualify a buyer today because she happens to be a single woman living alone — a one-time no-no as far as lenders were concerned.

You also can't ignore the wife's contribution to the family income, as you once could, simply because she happens to be of the childbearing age.

Believe me. Income is still very much "in."

Dear Mr. Campbell:

I am a 66-year-old widow. I have a home with a mortgage of $7,500 on it and 11 more years to go before it becomes paid off. My mortgage payments are $74 monthly, plus taxes.

I have $5,000 in the bank plus a two-year term certificate of $7,000 that will mature this month. Would it be wise for me to take the money from the certificates and savings and pay off my mortgage, thus saving about $2,000 or $3,000 in interest over the years?

I realize I lose a tax shelter, but my taxable annual income now amounts to only $2,400, plus the interest on these two savings accounts. I could well use the monthly mortgage payment of $74 for my household expenses. Mrs. C. McG., Randolph, Mass.

A. I can appreciate your position and well understand how tempting it is to get this mortgage "monkey" off your back. But, tempting or not, it still isn't a good idea.

The fact that you'll lose the tax deductibility is only one part of the picture — an extremely minor point in your case, as you fully understand. The more important aspect of it is that it isn't wise to put all of your emergency money into something as illiquid as a house. What if you had a fast need for a couple of thousand dollars? Also, in a period of continuing inflation, why spend 1976 dollars when, over the next 11 years, they are going to become increasingly cheaper?

Irvine assigns Northwood AD

The North Irvine Assessment District, the largest assessment district ever formed in California, has been implemented by the city of Irvine to serve the new 4,300-plus home Village of Northwood in Irvine.

Assessment districts originate through the California State Improvement Act of 1913, which provides for public works and improvements, through the use of assessment districts, to obtain street rights-of-way, resurface roads, install sewer systems and other similar projects that serve the interests of the general public.

THE NORTH IRVINE Assessment District (NIAD) in both size and in dollars is the largest ever formed. The 17 building firms that will construct various types of new housing on the 1,400 acres of prime land that comprise The Village of Northwood, will be assessed an estimated $20 million for public improvements to the entire acreage, of which about $12 million will be in new construction.

None of the $20 million cost of the various improvements to be made will be assessed directly to the homebuyers in the new community.

The Irvine Ranch Water District is responsible for the installation of fresh water lines and the reclaiming systems.

Between the two districts, all public improvements to The Village of Northwood are funded and implemented, according to Chuck Winslow, community coordinator for the North Irvine Association, the group formed by the 17 building and development firms.

NORTHWOOD is bounded the Santa Ana Freeway, Culver Road, Irvine Boulevard and Jeffrey Road, extending eastward to the foothills.

Information on the master-planned community is from the North Irvine Association, Box 17534, Irvine, CA 92712 or calling (714) 559-1675.

Silver Lakes setting buying, build marks

SILVER LAKES RESORT—Homesite sales and building activity at this high desert resort community continue at a high level, with sales running about $1-million a month and single-family homes going up at the rate of 10 each month since the first of the year.

January through mid-May homesite sales volume exceeded $4.2-million, bringing the total sales figure to $21.4-million since sales began in May, 1975.

Gene Vogt, director of sales, said that more than two-thirds of the community's 2,900 improved homesites are sold and he expects to be "out of inventory" by fall.

Current inventory includes lakeside, golf course and equestrian homesites. Prices range from $5,999 to $18,000, with minimum 10 per cent down payment.

COMPLETE HOMES now total 194, with an estimated market value of nearly $10-million. Twenty-two more are currently under construction and plans have been approved for an additional 46. An average of four plans per week are being submitted for approval by the environmental control committee.

Prices no issue as housing boom roars throughout nation

By John Cunniff
AP Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While warnings abound about prices and interest rates that are said to be disastrously high, a housing boom seems to be in the making.

To some extent the pace of activity that already exists seems to defy the forecasts of some analysts, and perhaps demonstrates again that necessity somehow overcomes all obstacles, including price.

BY THE END of this year the median price paid for a single-family home is expected to be $50,000, based on field reports from the National Association of Realtors. Interest rates remain rather high, between 8.5 and 9 per cent.

Nevertheless, some housing economists are now raising their estimates for starts this year, with some even suggesting there might be more than two million, compared with 1.537 million in 1976.

If that level is reached, it will be the first time since 1973, when 2,045,000 starts were registered, that the 2 million-figure has been exceeded.

Projections by the realtors and by the U.S. League of Savings Association, the biggest mortgage lenders, fall just short of that mark.

The realtors expect 1.8 million starts, the league 1.9 million.

These projections remain unchanged despite a plunge in the figures for January, when icy and stormy weather prevented much activity over the eastern one-half or two-thirds of the country.

While the projected strength itself is noteworthy, some of the breakdown is even more surprising. Kenneth Thygerson and Dennis Jacobe, economists with the league, expect single-family units to surpass 1975s record of 1.3 million.

IN VIEW of the warnings about high prices and mortgage rates, this expectation is especially interesting. Single-family units, as opposed to multi-family rental housing, indicate willingness by individuals to spend.

Again, despite encouragement by some analysts to build houses smaller in order to minimize cost increases, official government figures indicate that houses built in recent years have been somewhat larger than before.

From 1971 to 1975, the average new house grew in size by 8.1 per cent to 1,660 square feet. This, despite a jump in construction costs of 44 per cent to $21.10 a square foot, a figure that has risen since then.

Among the reasons said to be making the heightened activity possible are the availability of money and the low down payments required.

THE MEDIAN down payment for all new homes sold in 1975 was just 10.2 per cent, with more than one out of every four buyers putting down less than 5 per cent. Four per cent of sales were for cash.

Helping to lower these medians was the fact that 13 per cent were Veterans Administration and 11 per cent Federal Housing Administration loans that require little or no down payment.

Nevertheless, for conventional mortgages the down payments averaged only 16 per cent, with only one out of every five putting down the 25 per cent or more required by many thrift institutions during the past few years.

The long-term outlook for housing also is good, at least in the view of the relators. For the remainder of this decade, they say, the demographic factors underlying the market will be exceptionally strong.

BUT THYGERSON and Jacobe warn that the "boom," a term they use, might evaporate if the country returns to double-digit inflation which, they say, could reappear as early as the first quarter of next year.

The weakness in the outlook, they say, is the "inevitable energy crunch" that could restrict the supply of goods and services, and consequently force up prices.

Realty group fights disease

Long Beach, Los Alamitos, M. Park Enterprises, Inc., has joined Electronic Realty Associates across America for the "Fight Against Muscular Dystrophy," Michael Park, President, has announced.

M. Park Enterprises is a member broker of Electronic Realty Associates, Inc. (ERA), a nationwide home marketing service.

M. Park is participating in a national effort by ERA brokers to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, dedicated to finding the cause and prevention of the crippling disease.

"WE ARE delighted to do our part for such a worthy cause," said Park. "This is our way of giving something to our community by helping raise money to fight this dreaded crippler."

ERA, a network of more than 1,000 member brokers and 20,000 sales associates over 2,000 offices, reports more than $5 billion in real estate sales annually.

The company offers three exclusive consumer aids—Home Buyers Protection Plan, Home Sellers Protection and photo-by-wire listings via the "Moving Machine."

M. Park Enterprises, Inc., will raise money by participating in the Jerry Lewis Listing, Sale and Open Home Program.

ERA brokers will raise funds through Sept. 1, 1977. Their contributions will be announced on the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon, Sept. 4-5.

MISSION HILLS Country Club, 840-acre residential and recreational community near Palm Springs continues to expand.

Mission Hills' future even more exciting

Mission Hills Country Club, a 1,200 unit master-planned community located in the Palm Springs area, has experienced prolific growth in the last few years. What is to come is even more exciting, according to Robert J. Lampe, general manager.

SITUATED IN an area of inherent beauty, Mission Hills Country Club is considered by many to be one of the finer, more elegant country clubs in the nation.

Its sprawling 840 acres in the world-famous Palm Springs desert resort, currently contains one of the most popular recreation facilities on the West Coast along with quality, low-density homes, built for an active and gracious lifestyle.

Though current phases of both golf course villas and tennis townhomes have been sold, construction has begun on a new increment of 30 tennis units. These will be followed almost immediately by an additional phase of golf course villas.

Aside from the growth of new homes, additional recreational facilities are scheduled as well. Included in the master plan is another championship, 18-hole golf course which is slated for completion sometime next year. Several more tennis courts, lakes and an Olympic size swimming pool are also scheduled for the future development of the community.

CURRENT residents have many recreational/social amenities. At the heart of the community is the main clubhouse—an 18,000 square foot building.

A fully stocked pro golf shop is also located here.

Tennis at Mission Hills is just as popular as golf which is evidenced by the $1 million tennis complex of 13 courts and a separate tennis clubhouse.

An 180 degree exterior view overlooking a sunken stadium court capable of accommodating over 7,000 spectators, is one feature of the 8,080 square foot clubhouse. It too has a fully-equipped pro shop, locker rooms, view terrace, and in addition, two air conditioned squash courts.

HOMES at Mission Hills are of two types, sprawling golf course villas and spacious tennis townhomes both topped with roofs of red tile, befitting the southern California desert area.

All are fully air conditioned and contain forced air heat, soaring cathedral ceilings, all electric kitchen built-ins, luxurious carpeting, sound insulation and wood-burning fireplaces. Many of the homes have wet bars, ceramic tile entries, laundry rooms and golf cart parking.

Common area maintenance, supported by the homeowners association, includes upkeep of grounds and home exteriors.

Located just a short distance from downtown Palm Springs, the Colgate Palmolive Company development may be reached by taking High 111 to Date Palm Drive. Go north to Avenue 38 and east to Mission Hills.

FROM I-10, take the Date Palm Drive off-ramp south. Turn east on Avenue 38 to Da Vall and Mission Hills.

Directions to the sales office, which is open daily, will be given by the security guard.

Vintage Homes with wine!

Grand opening of Vintage Homes, in San Diego Country Estates, a development of 20 three-to-five-bedroom country homes on half-acre equestrian sites, continues today with a colorful Wine Festival highlighting the celebration.

Bill Friery, president of San Diego Country Estates Realty Co., said the price range of $58,000 to $90,500 gives families the opportunity to purchase spacious single-family detached homes in a scenic resort setting.

Four decorated models will be open for inspection from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with Rick Martel of KOGO Radio and strolling troubadors on hand to entertain from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wine tasting will be offered, too!

The 3,200-acre resort community is located 39 miles northeast of San Diego. It is reached via Highway 67 and via Interstate 5 and Highway 78 from the north.

LakePark homes set for viewing June 12

The grand opening of LakePark homes in Laguna Niguel is scheduled for Sunday, June 12, according to Joseph W. Smith, director of sales and marketing for Avco Community Developers. The five models will be open from 10 a.m. — 6 p.m.

LAKEPARK, overlooking the Aliso Valley and the 154-acre Laguna Niguel Regional Park with its 40-acre lake, is ACD's newest residential project. The first two phases, totalling 105 homes, are sold out. Completion of Phase III will show 299 homes in the project.

The Newport Beach firm of Yelser/Garland was interior designer. The five floor plans offer a choice of two and three-bedroom-plus-den and four-bedroom homes containing 1,250 to 1,950 square feet.

Prices range from $73,000 to $120,000.

The design is complemented by the community's distinctive landscaping plan. Living areas, entries, master bedrooms and kitchens are designed to look out on garden areas.

Custom quality features offered in one or more models include wood-burning fireplaces, custom-designed greenhouse windows, wet bars, French doors, carpeting throughout all living areas and private exterior patios.

SALES OFFICE is open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. To reach the office from the San Diego Freeway, take Crown Valley Parkway to La Paz, turn right on La Paz to Yosemite Road.

She has undercover Broadway role

LILY TOMLIN: "THE STAR IS ILL"

NEW YORK — "It's funny under the covers," said Monty Hall's pretty 27-year-old daughter, Joanna Gleason.

"One night," Joanna explained, "I got a foot in my face. I don't know whose foot it was. It could have been mine. Another night something tickled me and I got the giggles. You see, there are four of us in that roll-out bed, and it all has to be carefully choreographed so nobody gets a black eye. And you have to watch out for elbows."

Joanna was describing the wife-swapping scene in the comedy "I Love My Wife." It turns out, of course, that it's all very innocent, and the four parties, while in their underwear, are properly covered. But, to give the illusion of something pretty naughty going on, they keep the covers hiding all the bodies most of the time.

"It gives the impression," Joanna said, "that there are lots of wild beasts moving around under there, but we are all following a traffic plan that the director, Gene Saks, and choreographer, Onna White, have carefully worked out. We have to have a sheet monitor to make sure the covers haven't slipped off of us, and that's me. It keeps me pretty busy."

MONTY HALL, the "Let's Make a Deal" man of TV for 13 seasons, thoroughly approves of his daughter's performance, inasmuch as she is generally clad in more than she would wear on a beach.

"Dad," Joanna said, "is very straight. He's very sophisticated — but maybe he's a little old-fashioned.

"Opening night, before we got the reviews, he sent me a wire that said, Win or lose, you're in the big time.' And, of course, when he came to see the show a few nights later, he just hugged me a lot.

"At first all he knew about the show was that it was about two couples that go to bed together. And when that's all you know, well . . .

"One reviewer called me 'the reluctant swinger.' I'm the one that the three others haven't sprung it on. My husband" — played by James Naughton — "is a press agent. He's such a slick talker, he thinks he can persuade me on Christmas Eve. I slam out of the house after throwing all the dinner out — and then I slam back in. They're surprised to see me in my underwear, saying, 'Well, all right, if that's the way you want it!'"

And that's when the fun under the covers starts.

TOWARD THE END, Joanna eats about a third of a banana pie that is carefully put together by the stage crew each performance. "I'm a goat; I can eat anything. And that," she said, "is very bad pie."

Joanna was born in Toronto, where her father was doing radio; then they moved to New Rochelle, then to Hollywood. She became an actress and frequently was on tour: "I watched 'Let's Make a Deal' when I could, just to see my dad. It was the only way I could see him.

"From my dad and mother I saw how people can have a happy home life. My father never brought his problems home.

"I did one small part in a movie, 'Future World.' I had friends who sent to see it and they couldn't find me."

Joanna is married to Paul G. Gleason, director of the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Company. She used the name Joanna Hall until she got her first role on Broadway this year.

"I decided it would be a kind of a different Valentine to my husband," she said, "to change my name to Joanna Gleason."

WEEKEND WINDUP . . .

Elliott Gould said he's working on a song-and-dance act; he's had Las Vegas offers . . . John Derek's pretty wife, Bo, who has a small role in the film "Orca," was spotted by Dino de Laurentiis and raised to featured billing . . . Farrah Fawcett's new secretary is Morey Amsterdam's daughter, Cathy (says Celebrity magazine).

LILY TOMLIN sometimes surprises audiences at her Biltmore Theater show by walking through the intermission crowd and saying, "The star is ill and had to go home." . . . Veteran singer Fran Warren's coming out of retirement; she worked recently with the Woody Herman band . . . Second generation: the sons of James Whitmore, Stella Stevens and Harvey Lembeck are in the film "The Boys of Company C."

Bob Fitch, featured in "Annie," has six children — as many kids as are in the show . . . "Exorcist II: The Heretic" will open in 702 theaters June 17 . . . "The Deep" hasn't been released yet, and already one of the stars, Nick Nolte, has told Columbia he won't do a "Deep II."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Herb Sherry says he had no trouble deciding on a new diet: "My doctor told me to cut out rich foods, and my accountant told me to cut out expensive foods."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: In dieting, it's the seconds that count. — Ruth Oat.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Sad but true — money and hair seem important only when you no longer have them."

EARL'S PEARLS: Carolyn B. Johnes, author of "Don't Call Me Fido, or, What Shall We Name the Dog?", got these suggestions: for a Park Ave. socialite's dog, Virginia Woof; for a film star's pet, Brigitte Bardog.

"I'll tell you how expensive a European vacation is," says Bob Orben. "When I was there I saw an Arab oil man wiring home for more money." That's Earl, brother.

Elvis Presley: the once and past king

By Jack Lloyd
Knight News Service

So now he's a Fat Cat, bulging at the middle, applying coloring chemicals to the hair and otherwise losing the fight with mortality.

But there was a time when he was called the Hillbilly Cat.

And it is this image, faded and flabby though it might be, that is filling auditoriums throughout the country for performances by Elvis Presley, who exploded out of Memphis in 1954 with the most slashingly dynamic pop sound ever recorded.

They named it rock 'n' roll.

And Elvis was its king.

This is more of an honorary title now than a reality. For all practical purposes, Elvis abdicated his throne years ago. But the Elvis mystique remains.

In a business that is notorious for the fickle ways of those who support it, eager to abandon yesterday's hero at the first hint of something new, Presley's fans have remained loyal. Most of them have, of course, grown with him into middle age. Many of them no doubt ponder the fire of youth that burned inside when this Hillbilly Cat surfaced and then look at their grown children, the heirs to that fire.

So if Elvis has grown puffy and those once-controversial gyrations are now little more than a choreographed self-parody of the old rebellious spontaneity, his fans can empathize with the slowing-down process and adore their king for the effort rather than the results.

You did fine, Elvis. Just fine. You gave those children of the '50s something no other generation of teen-agers ever had before — their very own music, something that would rattle the sensitivity of their elders, something that would horrify Mom and Dad into a new high of concern over where the younger generation was heading.

Straight to hell, according to the social critics of the day.

Ah, but it was mostly fun and games, really.

And if Elvis ever was a threat to the moral fiber of his followers, his rapid evolution from the Hillbilly Cat to a one-man show business dynasty had to settle the waters of unrest. Elvis, after all, took to the status of millionaire with instant charm and grace.

And the crude, exhilarating gusto of his early music promptly disappeared accordingly.

For Elvis — raised on a down-home blend of country, gospel and blues — the magic began on a day in July 1954, in the makeshift recording facility called Sun Studios, operated by a Memphis music man named Sam Phillips. Phillips had not known quite what to do with Elvis, but he had detected a note of promise in the lad and hooked him up with electric guitarist Scotty Moore and bass player Bill Black.

As Scotty Moore would later remember, the three of them were sitting around the studio when suddenly Elvis began savagely slapping the strings of his acoustic guitar, jumping around and singing an old Arthur "Big Boy" Cruddup song, "That's All Right, Mama."

Moore joined in on electric guitar, hitting a volley of slashing licks, and Black began punching out a string of slapping bass lines.

Sam Phillips was in an adjoining room, according to Moore, and hollered out, "What the devil are you doing?"

"We don't know," was the reply.

"Well, find out real quick and don't lose it," Phillips said.

"That's All Right, Mama" was recorded that day and quickly became Elvis' first hit record, although it was a regional hit, confined to the Memphis market. The Hillbilly Cat, sporting this unique

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You now plunge into more than you can handle well, attempt shortcuts that only complicates matters, spend the rest of the year reconciling discrepancies that build up. Try to center more effort on narrower fronts of action. Relationships are tested; immensely strengthened by shared adverse conditions. Today's natives let community and local situations push them into too many conformist habits. In their maturity they develop special intuitive talents.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The situation, working materials aren't quite the same as in the past. Watch what you do, crosscheck details. A traditional approach still has its merits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pick targets, push experimental production as far as local conditions permit. Social action slows down, lacks interest when people you expect fail to show.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Suddenly everybody wants to hurry, cut corners, get to the core of all problems. Communications are distorted; keep your message short, to the point.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Settle for reasonable terms, avoid prolonged haggling. Disregard rumors, pass none along. There's more than meets the eye in even commonplace maneuvers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Much depends on the mood you express; not so much what you say as what you choose to do. Beware minor temptations. Sensible thrift works out amazingly well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Have the courage to say "no" and stick with it. Where you want something explained, go directly to the source, prevent distortion by in-between parties.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): So many new factors turn up you have a right to hesitate. Be easy on yourself. Give others liberty to differ and learn the hard way without your help.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Long-continued drift away from agreements brings on confrontation. Your candid opinion is valid, but unwelcome. Wait until asked, avoid making enemies.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): People are sensitive, while you have an uncanny knack for putting your foot in it. Allow enough time for contingencies that upset schedules.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Buy only necessary supplies, as present influences change rapidly, outdate things before they're used. Don't demand perfection from friends or strangers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conflict is inevitable, if for no better reason than the harsh "fun" of an argument. Friendly talk wanders into odd topics you're poorly informed on.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nobody does the ordinary nor gets too far out of line. Garden, knit, work on hobbies, anything to keep your hands busy while you figure out mixed signals.

Fantasy Records: a fantastic success record

By Jim Wilise
Associated Press

BERKELEY — Ten years ago, Fantasy Records was in humble quarters in an Oakland garage, a poor relative of America's burgeoning record industry.

Now comfortably ensconced in a sparkling, two-story corporate headquarters, Fantasy is a multimillion-dollar success story that has giants in the record and film business shaking their heads in awe.

Three events of significance occurred in the decade between Fantasy's salad days and its current stay in Fat City:

In 1967, the new owner of the company decided to take another chance on a rock group formed by a mailroom clerk — on the condition he no longer call it the Blue Velvets. The clerk, John Fogerty, came up with the name Creedence Clearwater Revival, a group that went on to provide Fantasy with well over $100 million in record sales.

Undaunted by one economically disastrous sojourn into the film business, Fantasy Board Chairman Sal J. Zaentz joined with actor Michael Douglas and tried again. The result was "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which won five Academy Awards and chalked up the seventh largest gross of all time.

Fantasy executives discovered that putting old musical wine in new bottles was a low-cost way to expand the company's catalog and make profits in the process. In 1972, they began an industry trend by marketing "Twofers" — double-record reissues of classic jazz that proved immensely propular with a new generation of listeners.

"It's a business of intangibles — that's why traditional big business is so mystified by the record industry," muses Ralph Kaffel, president of Fantasy-Prestige-Milestone, the company's full name. "Sometimes you're right; sometimes you're wrong."

Under the guidance of Zaentz, Kaffel and Orrin Keepnews, a jazz producer and historian, Fantasy hasn't been wrong very often. The privately held company doesn't disclose its revenues, but industry observers say it has a high ratio of profit-makers among its releases, a key measure of success.

"The industry feeling is that Fantasy is very well managed, solid, a line distributors like to have," said Marty Ostrow, executive vice president of Cashbox magazine. Among the chief executives, there is some 85 years of accumulated expertise in the record business, and nearly 500 jazz records among the company's 900 titles lend weight to Fantasy's self-description as "the world's mightiest jazz catalog."

Many a jazz-oriented company has been long on musical quality, but short on business acumen, which makes Fantasy's prosperity notable in an age when jazz was widely rumored to be dead. Not bad for a company whose most widely known product for a time was oddly tinted plastic.

The company was founded in 1949 by Max and Sol Weiss, whose primary interest was the chemistry of plastics, not music. As a sideline while they worked on perfecting plastic custom moldings, the Weiss brothers started a small record pressing plant in San Francisco used by a variety of small, independent labels.

One of those labels was Koronet Records, which had issued the first singles by an obscure cocktail pianist, Dave Brubeck. Koronet folded, and the Weisses, heartened by a flow of orders for Brubeck's records, took the operation over.

The Weisses had a somewhat whimsical approach to their new venture, which they named Fantasy after a popular science fiction magazine. They issued records of red, green and blue translucent plastic, now collectors' items, and they constantly predicted failure for their infant company.

Nevertheless, the brothers took chances on unknowns, some of whom became jazz giants. Gerry Mulligan's "My Funny Valentines" was one of the few hit jazz singles of the 1950s, and a last-minute addition to an album by local pianist Vince Guaraldi turned into another hit 10 years later — "Cast Your Fate to the Winds."

They also signed folksinger Odetta, blues men Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee and even a shockingly hip young comedian named Lenny Bruce. Fantasy remained a small enterprise, but despite the Weisses' forecasts of doom it remained profitable.

"It was like a family then," recalls vibraphonist Cal Tjader, a former drummer with Brubeck and still a mainstay of the Fantasy stable. "It's a big operation now, without the intimacy of those first years, but I guess that was inevitable."

The real success of a company started with a $1,000 initial investment dates to 1967, when Zaentz, with Fantasy since 1955, was able to gather backers and buy out his employers for a reported $325,000. A few months later, the first of seven Creedence Clearwater Revival albums was issued.

The first album grossed more than $1 million. Before the group disbanded in 1972 it had six gold albums, each representing at least half a million copies sold.

Fantasy did not sit on its newfound wealth. In 1972, it financed "Payday," a critically well-received but unprofitable film produced by the late jazz writer Ralph J. Gleason. Undismayed, Zaentz backed "Cuckoo's Nest," and in 1975 Fantasy Films became a cinema force as well.

The company's third feature, the family film "Warriors," is nearing completion, and Zaentz recently announced plans for the most ambitious project yet — two feature-length adaptions of J. R. Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings" by animator Ralph Bakshi.

Secure in its bright new building, with its three recording studios, film cutting rooms and screening room, Fantasy maintains its independence from the conglomerates of the entertainment world and its allegiance to its jazz roots.

Jazz artists now recording for the Fantasy lables include Stanley Turrentine, McCoy Tyner, Sonny Rollins, Ron Carter and Kenny Burrell. The company's biggest seller is The Blackbyrds, a group of young musicians tutored by jazz trumpeter Donald Byrd.

But the records that have received the most attention within the industry are the "Twofers" series, the 140 titles that compose a roster of jazz greats. Represented are Miles Davis, Cannonball Adderly, Duke Ellington, Thelonious Monk, Wes Montgomery, John Coltrane and dozens more.

The financial instability of other jazz labels has been a boon to Fantasy, which acquired rights to their libraries and now reissues the recordings in new packages with updated liner notes. The major treasure troves came from the catalogs of Prestige, Milestone and Riverside, the latter founded by Fantasy executive Keepnews.

The low overhead involved in reissuing an album makes each "Twofer" profitable, even though one rarely sells more than 12,000 copies, according to Keepnews. The company has enough old recordings on the shelf to keep the "Twofers" coming for years, he says, and he dismisses the suggestion that their success is a sign of disenchantment with what's being recorded now.

"The popularity of the reissues is a reflection of a growing market for current jazz," he says. "What we're doing is making older jazz available to a younger audience. The resissue program gives us a catalog, which gives us flexibility in recording and developing new artists."

Whether there's another Creedence Clearwater practicing in [illegible] B remains to be seen. For all their success, Fantasy's executives deny they have any special insight into what makes a winner.

"We have a lot of artists that we believe in, but no one knows what makes it sell," says Zaentz. "In this business, nobody's an expert."

Elvis

blend of black and white music forms, was born.

Almost a year later a slick veteran carny man named Col. Tom Parker took over Elvis' management, and the polishing process began. Elvis went into the RCA studios in Nashville and, surrounded by the best equipment and engineering personnel, recorded "Heartbreak Hotel."

The rest is, as they say, history.

RCA attempted, of course, to capture the flavor of those Sun sessions — about a dozen tracks before Parker took over — but the sophisticated recording know-how made it an impossible task. And the Sun recordings still rank among the most classic examples of hard-driving primitive rock ever captured.

No matter. Elvis' records continued to be hot items for several years to come. Parker steered his boy into movies, where another financial killing was waiting.

ELVIS PRESLEY

"When I found Elvis, he had a million dollars' worth of talent," Parker said in one of his philosophical moments. "Now he has a million dollars."

At least.

But most critics concede that the talent has suffered. The raw energy drifted from Elvis' vocal approach years ago, and since then he has been merely going through the motions.

But for that brief moment he was the king, and he set a standard that was to influence the evolution of pop music for decades.

Soviet actress in Moscow for reunion with her mother

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet actress Victoria Fyodorova returned to Moscow Saturday carrying a bouquet of flowers for a reunion with her mother and friends, two years after leaving to live in the United States.

Her mother, Zoya, carried flowers too as she greeted Victoria and her American husband, Frederick Pouy, and the couple's year-old son, Christopher.

Pouy is a commercial airline pilot who married Victoria when she went to the United States in 1975 to meet the American father she had never seen.

Hotel sues estate of Freddy Prinze

The hotel where Freddy Prinze committed suicide has filed a claim against the comedian's estate, seeking payment for unpaid rent and telephone bills and damage caused when he shot himself.

Prinze, 21, shot himself last Jan. 28 at the Comstock Hotel in Beverly Hills, where he had been staying for several months.

"Give him a Dallas Cowboys pen," said Gil Brandt.

Tony Hill laughed. "This must be the 12th or 13th pen I've given away tonight, and no one has asked for a single one of them."

Since the Cowboys have never been known for their philanthropy, this had to be a special occasion.

It was. Brandt, Dallas vice president for player personnel, was in Long Beach to sign Hill to three one-year contracts totaling more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Hill, a wide receiver with dazzling speed and silky moves, may have been the steal of the National Football League draft.

"In all honesty, we had Tony ranked 14th in the country," said Brandt, "and we got him on the third round of the draft, the 62nd player selected."

BRANDT OBVIOUSLY was pleased. So were Tony Hill's parents, Leroy and Bernice, who had given their son tender, loving care for more than 20 years.

"When you draft a player, you look at more than his athletic ability," said Brandt. "You also consider his family background and his intelligence."

He waved a hand toward the dining area, where family and friends and Tony Hill's former coaches from Franklin Junior High, Poly High and Stanford had gathered in the Hills' beautiful and tastefully decorated home for the signing.

"I don't have to tell you about Tony's background," he said. "When you talk to his parents, it doesn't take long to recognize that he comes from solid, intelligent people."

TONY HILL had decided long ago that his father would represent him in bargaining if he were drafted by a National Football League team.

"He was the sole factor for my success in athletics. When he was in the Navy and came home on leave, I used to get him up at 6 or 7 in the morning to play catch with me or throw a football around. He never once refused me.

"When I was playing at Stanford, he hardly ever missed a game. I think the only one he missed last year was at West Point. But he made all the rest. When a father does that, you know he's in your corner.

"I didn't have to look for an agent. I figured I was the commodity and no one knew me better than my father. I felt confident he could do the best job for me."

Tony wasn't attempting to shield his delight with his Dallas contract and the surprise party his parents had arranged for him. "I'm real pleased with the way things are going."

HE'S ALSO happy with the way things have gone for him at Stanford, from which he will graduate on June 12 with a degree in political science.

"Only a select few get an opportunity to attend Stanford," he said. "It's not easy. I know of some non-athletes who have been there five or six years and still haven't graduated.

"It's difficult participating in football and trying to make it through school. But it boils down to setting your priorities. You have to establish goals and make good use of your time. The school forces you to do that."

Tony credited his mother with developing his academic abilities.

"She took care of the grades. She wouldn't let me participate in athletics if they weren't good. I don't know of anyone who's had more help and motivation from his parents than I've had."

LEROY HILL recalled a conversation he had with his son after a ninth-grade championship football game.

Blazing Sun Devils cool off coach

Following their NCAA track and field championship Saturday, Arizona State Sun Devils gave coach Baldy Castillo traditional dunking in steeplechase water jump. WAC rival Texas-El Paso was runnerup for second year in row.

ASU speed devils take NCAA title; USC third

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (Special)—Sprinter Herman Frazier and unheralded high jumper Kyle Arney led Arizona State over the long-distance and field men of Texas-El Paso and Washington State Saturday to give the Sun Devils the NCAA track and field championship.

Frazier won the 400-meter dash and anchored the 400 and 1600 relay teams, which finished second. Arney, whose previous best high jump was 7-4, captured the event at 7-6 and missed three attempts at a world record height of 7-7½—one-quarter of an inch above Dwight Stones' year-old standard.

Arizona State won by the surprisingly large margin of 64 to 50 for second place UTEP, runnerup for the second successive season. Southern Cal, the defending champion was third (48) followed by Washington State (46) and UCLA (35).

USC's Tom Andrews was voted athlete of the meet after winning the 400-hurdles in 49.48 and running legs on the Trojans victorious baton chases (39.56 and 3:04.50).

The sprint relay produced a gutty effort from USC anchorman Clancy Edwards, who overtook Frazier at the tape despite a heavily taped right thigh that later forced him to pull up in 200 finale.

In the 1,600 relay, Arizona State, the third team to finish, moved up a notch when Villanova was disqualified for a bumping incident. UCLA took fifth at 3:07.24 with Long Beach State sixth in 3:08.53.

Despite their two-point showing, five of the seven 49ers competing at the Illinois meet earned all-America ranking.

As expected, Texas-El Paso got off to an early lead with the completion of the long distance and field events. Svein Walvik won the discus (198-11), Kenyan James Munyala claimed his third successive 3,000-meter steeplechase crown (8:29.51) and countryman Wilson Waigwa ran a disciplined 1,500 in 3:39.29—more than two seconds slower than the meet record.

He remained in last place, close to the pack, for half the race. Then with 300 meters remainining, he charged in front and opened a wide gap over runnerup Steve Scott of UC Irvine (3:41.33).

Frazier's 400 victory cut Texas-El Paso's lead to 44-38, then freshman Tony Darden finished second in the 200 to pick up eight points and put the Sun Devils on top. William Snoddy of Oklahoma ran 20.48 to Darden's 20.52.

With just two events left, the high jump and the 1,600-meter relay, the Sun Devils found themselves in a tie with Washington State and UTEP—all with 46 points.

WSU had moved up on a one-two finish in the 5,000 meters by Kenyans Joshua Kimeto and Samson Kimombwa, who won the 10,000 meters Friday, a second by steeplechaser Henry Rono and a fourth in the triple jump by NCAA indoor champion Ian Campbell.

UTEP gained ground on Arnold Grimes' fifth in the triple jump. Ron Livers of San Jose State won in a meet-record 55-3¾. UCLA's Willie Banks was runnerup at 55-3½.

Meanwhile, in the high jump, UTEP's Greg Joy, a Canadian silver medalist in the 1976 Olympics, had gone out at 7-3 to take fourth and Franklin Jacobs of Fairleigh-Dickinson grabbed second at 7-5.

Ryan has an off night, bows 9-6

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

After three off days, the Angel bats were healthy Saturday night but Nolan Ryan's pitching and Jerry Remy's fielding looked sick.

The Angel hitters, who had been carried the past few weeks by excellent pitching, were rapping out 10 hits and scoring six times, their third highest output while Ryan was pitching this year.

Ryan, however, was victimized by his own mistakes and two Remy errors as Detroit won a 9-6 decision.

Ryan, who had not pitched since last Sunday because of the long layoff, was plagued with control problems once again, walking eight, and giving up nine hits in his 7 innings.

The most crucial walk and hit came in the eighth, with the score tied 6-6.

After Ron LeFlore was safe on Remy's second error of the night and Tito Fuentes became Ryan's 11th strikeout victim — the 91st time he has struck out 10 or more batters in a game — Rusty Staub was issued an intentional pass.

Then Steve Corcoran, who had struck out twice since being inserted in the game when Ryan hit Steve Kemp with a pitch in the second inning, hit a 1-2 pitch into the right field stands for the winning runs.

Remy's other error was also costly. After Tom Veryzer walked to open the sixth and LeFlore singled, Fuentes hit a potential double play ball to Bobby Grich, who flipped to Remy for the force at second. Remy, however, threw the ball away on the relay to first baseman Ron Jackson and Veryzer scored.

The whole night confirmed Angel manager Norm Sherry's worst fears.

"Our pitchers are having to wait a long time between their assignments and that is not good," Sherry said before the game. "You like to get them in a set rotation and keep them pitching with four or five days rest."

Ryan, who had given up a total of 13 hits in his last three starts, was going with six days rest and had not been with the team during the last week as he returned to home to Alvin, Texas, to help his family move to California.

Frank Tanana, who pitches tonight, will be making his first start in six days and Gary Ross, who goes on Monday, will have had nine days off before he gets to throw.

"I just hope our bats are going

Dodgers feast on 'rabbit ball' at Padres' expense

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

There has much said and written about the 1977 version of the baseball being used by the major leagues, and the chatter surfaced again Saturday night after the Dodgers battered three more home runs in a 9-4 rout of the San Diego Padres before 37,014 fans.

In one town writers refer to the new ball as "the Rawlings Rocket."

In another town, when a pitcher was asked if there was a "rabbit" in the ball, he replied, "I don't know, but the other day I left two baseballs alone for an hour and when I came back I had 24."

Rabbit or not, hitters love the new ball and, understandably, pitchers despise it.

The arguing will continue but the statistics do not lie.

The three homers by the Dodgers Saturday night—Ron Cey (No. 14), Steve Yeager (5) and Reggie Smith (13)—were their 60th, 61st and 62nd of the season, coming in their 51st game.

Last year the Dodgers did not clout their 62nd home run until July 23, in their 93rd game.

"If the baseball people wanted more offense," pitcher Tommy John said recently, "they've sure got it."

The Dodgers, who couldn't muster so much as a fly ball at the proper time in Friday night's 11-inning, 1-0, loss to the Pads, gener-

Reggie powers Yanks past White Sox, 8-6

Combined News Services

Reggie Jackson's two doubles Saturday night keyed a seven-run second inning that carried the New York Yankees to an 8-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox before a crowd of 35,789, largest of the season at Comiskey Park.

Don Gullett, making his first start since May 20, picked up his fourth triumph against two losses. But he needed relief help from Dick Tidrow and Sparky Lyle.

Gullett yielded five hits in six innings, but three of them were homers, including Richie Zisk's 15th of the season, which landed on top of the leftfield roof in the second inning. It was only the 18th homer hit on or over the double-decked roof in the 68-year history of Comiskey Park.

In other games, Baltimore edged Kansas City, 5-4, before the Royals tripped the Orioles, 14-13; Boston whipped Minnesota, 5-2; Toronto stopped Oakland, 4-2; Milwaukee nipped Texas, 3-2, and Cleveland stung Seattle, 7-5.

Rick Dempsey slugged a rare three-run homer and righthander Dennis Martinez survived a late Kansas City rally as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Royals in the first game of the doubleheader.

Dempsey's homer, a sixth-inning shot into the leftfield bullpen off Kansas City's Jim Colborn was his first of the year and only the fourth of a major league career spanning eight seasons.

Joe Zdeb's sacrifice fly drove in Al Cowens with the deciding run in the 10th inning of the nightcap. The Orioles had scored twice in the ninth to knot matters, 13-13.

AMERICAN

Fred Lynn singled twice to drive in two runs and made a sensational catch in centerfield as Boston stopped Minnesota.

Lynn brought home the first run of the game in the third inning when he lined a two-out single to right to score Denny Doyle, who had doubled.

Carl Yastrzemski tripled and scored on a two-out single by Bernie Carbo in the fourth to put Boston ahead 2-0.

Lynn put Boston ahead 4-1 in the seventh when he singled to score Doyle, who had singled, and stolen second.

A bases-loaded single by Otto Velez in the eighth inning scored two runs and a third came home on an error to pace Toronto over Oakland.

Velez' game-winning single came off reliever Bob Lacey. The Blue Jays loaded the bases off Oakland starter and loser Dock Ellis on singles by Doug Ault and Dave McKay and a walk to John Scott.

Joe Coleman replaced Ellis and got Bob Bailor to hit into a force play at the plate. Lacey then replaced Coleman and fanned Roy Howell, but Velez hit a line drive to rightfield to score two runs, and Bailor also scored when the ball got by Jim Tyrone for an error.

Sixto Lezcano led off the top of the 10th with his 10th home run of the year to lift the Milwaukee Brewers over Texas.

Frank Duffy, a .172 hitter at game time, socked an eighth-inning homer to life the Indians past the Mariners. The victory was the 10th in 13 games for Cleveland while Seattle has dropped four in a row.

ANGELS FALL TO DETROIT—

to be booming after the break," said Sherry. "The off days didn't concern me as far as hitting is concerned.

"If your team is on a tear and you have to take that long a period off it is a different situation. We haven't really been swinging our bats too well."

Bobby Bonds continued to swing his bat with power in the losing effort, as he blasted his 12th home run of the season — a two-run shot in the third — over the leftfield wall to tie the score at 4.

Gil Flores, Joe Rudi and Ron Jackson had two singles apiece but it was not enough to offset the blast by Corcoran, a Covina native, who won all-America honors at Los Angels State.

Also proving deadly to the Angels was the relief pitching of John Hiller. After Dave Roberts was racked for six runs and seven hits in three innings plus and Steve Grilli struggled through 2⅓ innings, Hiller was called to the mound.

He responded by limiting the Angels to a walk and single over the final 3⅓ innings for his third win in eight decisions.

The effort by Hiller had a special meaning for the lefthander, who had limited the Angels to five hits in losing a 2-1 complete game to Ryan at Detroit May 24.

The loss left the Angels tied with Oakland and Texas for third place, six games back of Minnesota.

ANGEL ANGLES — Frank Tanana, coming off a month of May in which he pitched six complete games and was named the American League player of the month, will start for the Angels tonight. His opponent will be rookie Fernando Arroyo...The Tigers are hopeful rookie Steve Kemp, an all-America at USC, will be back in the lineup tonight. He was hit on the right forearm by a Ryan pitch in the second inning Saturday and had to be replaced. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Orange and x-rays were negative...A reminder, the game tonight starts at 7:30 instead of the traditional 1:30 Sunday starting time...They are knocking the ball around on the Angel farm. At Salt Lake, first baseman Butch Alberts has 10 round-trippers and shortstop Rance Mulliniks has nine...At El Paso, third baseman Carney Lansford just ended a 21-game hitting streak, Gil Kubski leads the Texas League with a .430 average and Ken Landreaux has 11 home runs...Salinas has the best record in baseball (38-9), while pitcher Chuck Porter is 9-1 and Bill Ewing and Bob Clark both have 11 home runs...And in Quad Cities, Scott Moffitt just had a 21-game hitting streak broken.

DODGERS HUMBLE PADS, 9-4—

ated plenty of pop Saturday evening as they once more improved their advantage in the National League West to 10 games and Rick Rhoden became the league's first eight-game winner.

They cuffed five San Diego pitchers for a dozen hits, three of them by rookie outfielder Glenn Burke, recalled just the day before from Albuquerque.

On the surface, the one thing the Dodgers don't appear to need is another outfielder, what with Smith, Dusty Baker and Rick Monday starting everyday and Lee Lacy, John Hale and Manny Mota already available.

"I can understand it if I don't play," said the 24-year-old Burke who missed the start of spring training because of hepatitis, yet was hitting .389 when recalled on Friday. "Anyway, just being here beats the heck out of Albuquerque."

Burke was just easing into his spot on the bench Saturday night when Monday signaled that his back still wasn't quite right and wished to come out of the game.

He did, in the first inning, when Burke batted for him. That should make his day right there—"Glenn Burke batting for Rick Monday"—but he didn't stop there. He was on base the next four times, on three singles and a walk. He also stole a base and drove home two runs.

"I just told myself to go out there and do what Rick Monday is capable of doing," said the smiling Burke, a native of Oakland. "But heck, Monday is capable of doing what I did everyday."

It was Burke's single, which followed Steve Garvey's two-out triple in the third, that broke a 2-2 tie.

The Dodgers added to the lead with solo homers in the sixth and seventh innings by Yeager and Smith. Then they blew the game apart with a four-run eighth, the result of a two-out throwing error by San Diego third baseman Doug Rader. The Dodgers jumped at the opportunity, batting around for the 11th time this season.

Rhoden pitched into the seventh inning, scattering six hits, one of them Gene Tenace's sixth homer—and the 11th homer served up by Rhoden this season.

DODGER DOPE: Ron Cey was struck on the left elbow by a pitch in the eighth inning but should be ready to play today...Rick Monday tried out his ailing back but had to leave in the first inning. He'll likely rest again today...Introduction of the Oldtimers will be begin at 12:20 p.m., followed by the official retiring of Walter Alston's No. 24 uniform, with the Dodgers-Padres game at 2...Former Cy Young Award winners Don Drysdale and Don Newcombe are the opposing pitchers in the Oldtimers Game...Doug Rau (5-0) opposes the 'Pads' Tom Griffin (4-3) in the "nightcap".

L.A. City high schools suspended

All 49 high schools in the L.A. City school district have been suspended from sports competition by the California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) for permitting girls on boys' teams, state athletic commissioner William Russell said Saturday.

Russell said the schools have violated state rules barring girls on boys' teams in sports where the school has a separate girls' team.

The suspension will take effect Sept. 1, Russell said, and will last for one year or until the district complies with the team composition rules.

The suspension prohibits the schools from practicing with or competing against other CIF schools in any sport.

Harris captures JC decathlon title

Tom Harris from the College of the Canyons won the state junior college decathlon championship at Hancock College Saturday in a record-shattering performance.

Harris collected 7,432 points to break the old mark held by Sam Albanese of Hartnell of 7,215 in 1972.

Long Beach City College freshman John Young finished 12th with 6,300 points, and won an invitation to the junior AAU championships in Knoxville, Tenn., in two weeks. Young's performance established a school record, breaking Rick Moore's 1972 mark of 6,158.

The top five:

Harris 7,432, Tom Turner (Fullerton) 6,771, Todd Kaberline (Mt. San Antonio) 6,381, Greg Veatch (Chabot) 6,40[illegible], Steve Gray (W. Valley) 6,3[illegible].

Move over Lasorda, Namath

Steve David wants to talk soccer

RICH ROBERTS

"I thought I wouldn't like Los Angeles because I always hear about earthquakes and like that. But when I came here it was a different story. I really enjoy it."

Steve David

There's nothing like being a superstar.

"When I go home," Steve David says, "well, they don't have a parade, but a lot of people come to the airport. I see all my friends. They put it in the paper that I'm back home."

The Aztecs wish David were half as popular in Los Angeles. Steve wouldn't mind, either.

"If you go to Trinidad," he says, "and you say, 'I want to see Steve David,' you can find me. Everyone know."

The Aztecs, leading the Southern Division, would just like everyone to know they'll be playing the Dallas Tornado in a North American Soccer League match at the Coliseum today, 2 p.m. Between Tommy Lasorda and discussions of Joe Namath, it's difficult to get a word in print edgewise.

"At first I couldn't understand why soccer's always in the back page, stuck in a little corner," David says. "At home when you play a game, it's a big headline and you get a whole page. But after they explained it to me, I try to understand."

BUT STUDENTS of sport also should understand that while Ron Cey no longer leads the bigs in home runs and Namath hasn't led in anything but interceptions lately, Steve David is the leading scorer in the NASL with 10 goals and 2 assists for 22 points.

With George Best now feeding him from midfield, the Aztecs' forward is happier than a kid in a cane field, and there are employers who understand that a happy employee is a productive employee.

David's career is a classic case.

With the Miami Toros in 1975 he scored 23 goals in 23 games, the same goal-a-game pace he is on this season, and was voted the NASL's most valuable player. The next season he scored one goal.

"I had some problems," Steve says before a team practice on the backlot soccer field at Hollywood Park. "I didn't want to play. Even before the season started, I told them I wanted to be traded. But they didn't want to trade me."

STEVE DAVID
Over his homesickness

So David sulked.

"They kept trading all the good players and bringing in bad players," he says, "but they wouldn't let me go. It's difficult to play in conditions like that."

THE TOROS, now the Ft. Lauderdale Strikers, are owned by Elizabeth Robbie, wife of Joe Robbie, who runs the Miami Dolphins. They were so bad (6-18) that the whole team left town.

After his miserable season, David was unloaded to the Aztecs for a measly second-round draft choice, but he didn't exactly cartwheel to L.A.

"I thought I wouldn't like Los Angeles because I always hear about earthquakes and like that," he confesses. "But when I came here it was a different story. I really enjoy it. Great bunch of guys, the coach is good, the front office treats you well."

He's not even homesick for Trinidad, the British island colony about the size of Delaware off the coast of Venezuela.

"After my first year, all this homesick stuff just wear away," says Steve. "Now I can stay away as long as I like."

DAVID, 26, was reared with four sisters and two brothers in the town of Point Fortin. His father is an engineer for Trintoc, an oil company.

"The lifestyle is different in Trinidad," he says. "Family ties are closer. You don't go to restaurants and eat. You cook your food at home. You don't leave your parents' house until you're married."

It wasn't even an easy decision for Steve to play professional soccer.

"I was a policeman," he says. "After leaving high school I had to find work and get some money to continue my education. I liked it so much I didn't want to leave to play pro soccer in '73, but in '74 I decided I should leave."

He concedes that a policeman's lot in Trinidad may be less perilous than in the U.S.

"They've got some dope but not as much as there is here. It's mostly pickpockets and things like that.

"Once I had to chase a guy who got out of prison. I had to chase him down the river through a forest for a few miles. After an hour and 30 minutes we caught him. He was tired."

Only recently has Trinidad's underworld discovered guns.

IT SEEMED LIKE a good time to go play soccer. Chances are David won't go back to police work when his playing days end, although he does plan to return to Trinidad. Professional athletes are VIPs in the West Indies.

"They are special," Steve says. "When I finish playing and go back home I can get a job with the government."

That's why he has to be careful in discussing his relationship with teammate Martin Cohen, his roomie from South Africa. Clearly, Cohen does not practice the apartheid policy of his government.

"We never discuss it," Steve says. "I never noticed what my color was until I came here. I don't want to get mixed up in politics like that. That's the last thing my government would ever expect me to talk about."

He hopes to study architecture, completing his junior college work at El Camino.

"I'm just thinking about playing soccer, getting an education and afterward I'll go home and get a life there," he says.

He does not follow the lifestyle of his other teammate, George Best.

"There are a lot of things to do here," Steve says. "Sometimes I'll go to the races. Sometimes we'll go out to eat. Generally, what I like to do best is sleep."

LBCC's Dave and Paul Fuller throwing their weight around

by Scott Ostler
Staff Writer

Probably the least unusual thing about the Fuller brothers of Long Beach City College is their athletic achievement—putting shots, throwing hammers and hurling discuses unusually long distances.

Those feats are certainly unusual, especially considering their size. Opponents who outweigh little brother Dave by 50 to 80 pounds find it unusual, not to mention demoralizing, to be beaten in a sport that puts a premium on bulk.

However, for the really unusual, consider the Fuller family. Nine semi-nomadic people who love to pack up every few months or so and move to a new town or state. It's sort of a hobby.

Dave and Paul, the family's designated athletes, attended seven high schols in four states, and three—going on four—colleges in three states.

When Dave became a state champion shotputter in Alabama, he told his dad it was no big deal, that there wasn't much competition.

"Where are all the good shotputters?" asked Dad.

"Out in California," said Paul.

"Let's go," said Dad.

Dad (James) is not an itinerant farm worker or unemployed drifter. He is a precision machinist, who never finished high school but has a genius-level IQ. He works on the guidance systems of U.S. space projects, such as the space shuttle.

ON ONE wedding anniversary eight years ago, James spent the day and night working on a mirror that was, the next day, on its way to the moon as an integral part of the "Surveyor" satellite.

Wherever James Fuller decides to move, there is invariably an employer waiting with open arms.

"We love to move," says Dave.

Dave and Paul are big for furniture movers, but rather small for weightmen. Paul, age 22, is 6-feet-1½, 230 pounds. Dave, at 20 the youngest of seven Fuller children, is 6-feet-1½ and a slim 202 pounds.

Dave, who took up weight events seriously in high school, has best marks of 60-11¾ in the shot, 180-3 in the hammer and 170-4 in the discus. Those marks rank him second in the hammer and fourth in the shot in the all-time junior college record book. He holds the national JC record for the 35-pound weight throw.

Paul took up weight events only two years ago, just to be around his brother. At that time a fellow athlete informed Paul he was too clumsy. Now he is graceful enough to throw the hammer 177-2, the discus 166-11 and the shot 52-0.

IT SHOULD be pointed out that most weight men specialize in one or two events, especially in big meets. The Fullers go three events whenever possible.

At the state junior college championships, the Fullers accounted for 22 of LBCC's 26 points as Long Beach tied for sixth.

Dave won the discus by almost six feet (169-1) and Paul was third (161-11). Dave was third in the shot (59-1).

Both brothers qualified the next day to compete in the AAU Nationals June 9-11 at UCLA.

One Fuller brother is never seen without the other.

"I've never seen brothers that close," says Don Mulligan, their coach at LBCC. "They even kind of walk in unison."

A reporter discovered why they keep so close. When one brother stops talking long enough to take a breath, the other picks up the pace.

The Fullers talked at 78 rpm while the reporter took notes at 45 rpm. Within 20 minutes, they had unfolded their life story, philosophy and future plans, and had thrown in a few amusing sidelights.

One of their stories helps explain how such little guys can throw heavy objects so far.

As a senior at Hart High in Newhall, Dave was trying to break the school powerlifting record of 985 pounds (combined weight for three lifts).

"I just went crazy," says Dave excitedly. "I was screaming and yelling. A coach got scared and ran out of the room."

Dave lifted 1,540 pounds.

"It's 80 per cent psyche and 20 per cent muscle," says Paul. "We don't use dope or steroids," says Dave. "We like to do it the natural way. If God wants us to do it (break records), we'll do it."

God and the Fullers—that 's another story. They became devout Christians two years ago. They frequently refer to scripture and to God, and credit him with their athletic success.

THEY NEVER go to church, and are scornful of Christian athletic organizations.

"To us, our athletic ability is a gift from God. Other people think they're making a deal with God to make them better athletes," says Dave with typical non-subtlety.

Mulligan says, "They don't necessarily crusade, but they'll bring it (religion) up. They're sincere about it, but it does get under some people's skin. But most people seem to like the boys."

Mulligan certainly likes the boys. They came to him unexpectedly, like a pair of pearls in a bowl of oyster stew.

After high school, Dave accepted a scholarship to the University of Alabama. But the school just didn't seem right, so he—and the family—left after two weeks.

The Fuller clan headed for the coast. Dave and Paul enrolled at Long Beach State, where Paul decided to go out for track. Again, the chemistry was wrong.

"They've got a great program," says Dave. "We just couldn't fit into it very well."

PAUL SAYS, "We disagreed with the people there about workouts and techniques and couldn't come to a common meeting ground."

They decided to try Long Beach City College. Mulligan had just suffered through a disastrous track season and was especially in need of weightmen.

"It was amazing," he says. "They just walked in. Paul had done nothing (athletically), but I thought, 'Well, I'm getting one good one, anyway.' To have two of the best you've ever had just come walking in. . . it's kind of shocking.

"It's just a pleasure to have guys like these who are so dedicated, and love their event, and aren't looking for anything on the side. In the 26 years I've coached here, I don't think I've had two like that, from the standpoint of dedication, working, competing, loving their event.

"The improvement they've made," Mulligan adds, "is startling."

In the past year, Dave has improved his shot from 52 feet to beyond 60. Paul, who at first couldn't put the shot 35 feet, has tacked on 70 feet in the discus and 50 feet in the hammer in one year.

Mulligan admits his limitations as a specialized weight event coach. But he has provided inspiration and encouragement.

The brothers coach themselves, taking movies of each other and comparing their techniques with those of world-class performers. In a relatively short time, Dave has become one of the top five spin-glide (discus-type) technique putters in the world.

DAD HELPS by applying his knowledge of physics to the mechanics of weight-throwing to come up with suggestions.

The Fullers have been contacted by more than 30 colleges and have been offered scholarships to Utah, Cal, Colorado, Wyoming, Tennessee and others.

They have chosen Oregon State. Reasons: They like the small town, they like the state, they like the people they talked to from the school, who endorsed the Fullers' no-steroid training.

"Our family is going, too, naturally," they say.

Which means that the family can continue its favorite weekend pastime—driving. To beaches, mountains, deserts, anyplace.

"We just drive, just get lost, the whole family," says Dave. "Once, in Alabama, we loaded nine of us into a Chevy Nova, drove 680 miles in one day, turned around and drove back the next day."

At Oregon, the brothers won't have to sneak in the back door academically. Both carry perfect 4.0 grade averages for two years at LBCC.

As for their athletic potential, Mulligan says it is "unlimited. Especially in the hammer and discus. Paul might really go into orbit. They just keep popping (improving) and popping."

"We'd love to go to the Olympics," say Dave and Paul.

They plan to step up their weight training and bulk up, eventually, to the 260-270-pound range. Both have legally bench pressed 415 pounds.

If they reach the Olympics, Howard Cosell will fill us in on how their careers got started. When they were high schoolers in Alabama, a coach spotted Paul playing softball and persuaded him to put the shot in a district meet. He threw the 12-pound shot like a softball, won the district meet, and became a school hero.

Dave, meanwhile, was a skinny kid with a heart murmur.

"Paul told me he was sick of me just sitting around, that I was just lazy."

So the 13-year-old, 126-pound Dave became a discus thrower.

That summer the boys baled hay, fed chickens and raised hogs, and used their savings to buy a motorcycle, a shot and discus.

They've been throwing their weights around ever since.

Paul Fuller checks out Dave's discus form

LOEL SCHRADER—

"I said to him, 'Anthony, if you keep playing like you did today, every school in the country is going to be after you. I'll buy you a new car and send you off to college to have a good time. You can negotiate your own contract.'"

But Tony didn't want to negotiate his own contract.

"Having my father doing the negotiating took a lot of heat off me," he says. "When an agent came around, I just referred him to my father."

Leroy Hill was besieged by agents.

"We had more of them call on us than I could count," he said. "But I found out most of them didn't know any more about it than I did.

"I set out talking to anybody who could give me information on what a player with Tony's ability was worth — what the going price was for a receiver chosen in the top three rounds of the draft.

"Many agents told me the Cowboys were tough, and they were. My phone bill is out of sight from the number of times I talked to them, and I made one trip to Dallas for a meeting with Gil Brandt.

"HE TOLD ME to check around and see if I could find a third-round choice with Tony's ability who was getting a better contract. I talked to a lot of people and came to the conclusion that the Dallas offer was very fair.

Mr. Hill wasn't afraid that he might be slickered in his first attempt to negotiate a contract.

"I thought of the dollars I've had in my lifetime and the fact that I've done pretty well with them.

"Another thing, I knew no one else would have as much interest in my son as I did."

Mr. Hill emphasized that the entire process has been a family affair.

TONY HILL
'A real delight'

"Tony's mom has been the real backbone of the family," he said. "She sees that we do what we have to do. There have been times when Tony has gotten discouraged, and maybe I have, too.

"But she's no quitter. She has that can-do attitude that keeps us all going."

BERNICE HILL was graduated from high school at the age of 13, spent four years in the Navy and attended five colleges.

"I taught school at one time," she said with a laugh, "but some of the students were older than I was."

She recalled when Tony was 4 and she had to seek special permission to enroll him in kindergarten.

"He wouldn't sit still," she said. "We lived near a school and everytime I took my eyes off him, he'd be over there. So I decided he might as well be attending classes."

But she said her son wasn't always academically oriented.

"I was working and I'd come home at night kind of tired. If he didn't have his homework done, I'd make him sit down and do it. I had to sort of sit on him at times.

"He was such an active youngster. But he also was a real delight."

It's been said that love makes the world go 'round.

Maybe it does and maybe it doesn't.

But it certainly has kept the Hill family going.

Top pro skiers vie at Marine

Top professional skiers from the United States and several foreign countries will compete today in the first Long Beach International Water Skiing Championships at Long Beach Marine Stadium from noon to 5 p.m.

Gates open at 8 a.m., and tickets are $5.

This first pro ski tournament ever in Southern California will consist of slalom, ramp jumping and trick skiing competition.

The names on the entry list are well-known in the world of skiing. The list includes:

- Wayne Grimditch (Florida), world jump record holder (180 feet).
- The La Point brothers, Kris and Bob, co-holders of the world slalom record.
- Tony Krupa (Michigan) and Russ Stifler (Florida), the world's top trick skiers.
- The five top female skiers in the U.S.—Pam Folsom, Trudi Speak, Camille Duvall, Thelma Salmas and Deena Brush. Speak has been the Women's national jump, trick and over-all champion.

Total prize money is $15,000, with $1,200 to the winner of each men's event and $600 to each female winner. The top five finishers in each event will pickup a check.

The Long Beach Championships are promoted by Jim Smith, a Westminster ski shop owner whose goal is to make Long Beach the first stop on a regular, organized professional tour. The pro tour currently consists of eight to 10 loosely related meets.

A brief explanation of the events:

Trick skiing— The skier has 20 seconds to perform 20 spins, jumps and turns, scoring points for each trick.

Jumping— Skiers hit the 6-foot-high sloped ramp at over 65 mph and go strictly for distance. The jumper must land on his skis and continue skiing.

Slalom— The boat travels at 35 mph down a straight course. The skier criss-crosses behind the boat, hitting speeds up to 70 mph, while skiing around six slalom balls. After each successful run through the course, the tow rope is shortened, until the skier finally misses a ball or crashes.

Since fast hydros have been banned from the stadium, there will be no attempts at straight speed skiing.

Astro Howe-itzer helps strafe Reds

Combined News Services

Art Howe, a light-hitting infielder who has turned slugger in the last 10 days, walloped a two-run homer in a productive third inning Saturday night as the Houston Astros crushed Cincinnati, 8-1.

Howe's blast came in the midst of a seven-run uprising that more than obliterated a 1-0 Red lead and prevented the world champions from hurtling the .500 mark.

Winning pitcher Joaquin Andujar (6-3), who has beaten Cincinnati four consecutive times since the Reds traded him a year ago, started the rally with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored on Enos Cabell's single.

NATIONAL

A pair of walks loaded the bases before Joe Ferguson delivered a three-run double to banish loser Tom Hume.

Reliever Dale Murray provided little relief as Bob Watson cracked a two-run double. Then Howe, who had ripped the Reds for four doubles in the first two games of the series, hit his fourth homer of the season—all coming since May 23—to finish the uprising.

George Foster drove in the Cincinnati run, doubling home Dan Driessen in the bottom of the second.

Jeff Burroughs connected for a first-inning grand slam to start Atlanta's 7-1 pasting of San Francisco.

Jerry Royster walked and Barry Bonnell and Willie Montanez singled before Burroughs sent a delivery from loser John Curtis over the right field fence for his 13th homer of the season and the seventh fourmaster of his career.

Phil Niekro, the 38-year-old knuckleball specialist who has been having a poor 1977, turned in his best performance of the season with a six-hitter. He walked three and struck out nine in improving to 3-8.

The Chicago Cubs continued to stay atop the National League East, dropping second-place Pittsburgh one and a half games back by prevailing, 4-3.

Winner Mike Krukow allowed Bill Robinson's two-run double in the first inning, but then he and relievers Willie Hernandez and Bruce Sutter stifled the Lumber and Lightning Company sufficiently thereafter.

For sophomore pheonom Sutter, it was save No. 15, a total which leads the majors.

Ellis Valentine singled home Andre Dawson in the 13th inning, accounting for Montreal's come-from-behind, 8-7 triumph over St. Louis.

The Expos scored three times in the eighth to force overtime, with Gary Carter (home run), Dave Cash (single) and Chris Speier (groundout) getting the clutch RBI.

Base hits by veteran catcher Jerry Grote in the fourth and sixth innings scored Dave Kingman with the only runs of the game as New York polished off Philadelphia, 2-0.

The Phillies were restricted to seven hits by winner Nino Espinosa and Skip Lockwood while Steve Carlton (7-3) was the victim of the Mets' fourth win in five outings under new manager Joe Torre.

Assured of a team and individual victory, Arney then took three cracks at the world record, but didn't come close.

"I wasn't thinking of the world's record at the time I was jumping at it," said Arney. "But now it seems sort of impressive... When we got to 7-4 and there were still several people left, I just prayed that I would have the strength to keep jumping."

Frazier, a gold medalist in the Olympic 1,600-meter relay and bronze medal winner in the 400, said of his 400 victory Saturday, "It felt good knowing that that put us in a good position for the team title. It's something we've all been working for. Everybody did his share to pull it out."

ASU got its remaining points on Dannie Jackson's fourth in the long jump and Rick Walker's second in the high hurdles—both held Friday—and on Ralph Haynie's third in the pole vault and Walker's fifth in the 400-hurdles Saturday.

Battling a brutal crosswind, former world record holder Earl Bell of Arkansas State edged Mike Tully of UCLA to capture the pole vault at 17-6. Tully was ahead on fewer misses through 17-0 and each vaulter was down to his final attempt at 17-6.

The former Millikan High star would have won automatically if Bell missed at 17-6, but he didn't and Tully did. In joining world record-holder Dave Roberts as the only men to win three NCAA vault titles, Bell waited for the crosswind to die before clearing 17-6 then missed three tries at 18-0.

The entire first flight—including Long Beach State's Don Baird—failed to negotiate the opening height of 16-0 because of strong headwinds.

Scott Dykehouse of Florida took the javelin with a career best of 258-5. Brigham Young's Richard George, the runnerup last year, was fourth (255-3).

Four meet records were bettered in the 56th annual meet, including those efforts by Livers and Mark Enyeart of Utah State in the 800. Enyeart, an Olympian who failed to reach the Montreal finals, won in 1:45.16. That wiped out the eight-year-old standard of 1:45.9 by Byron Dyce of New York University. Defending champion Tom McLean of Bucknell finished fourth.

Pasadena wins state meet behind Sanford

By Ken Pivernetz
Staff Writer

James Sanford didn't accomplish the impossible, but he did more than enough Saturday to lead Pasadena to the State high school track and field championships at UCLA.

Sanford had a hand in 22 of his team's 26 points by equalling Larance Jones' eight-year meet record in the 440 (46.60), plus anchoring winning 440 (41.61) and mile (3:13.7) relay teams.

His only non-first came in the 220 where he chased David Russell of Patrick Henry (San Diego) home, finishing second.

His excuse? Only 18 minutes rest between the 440 and 220.

A capacity-plus crowd of 14,854 at Drake Stadium viewed the 59th renewal of California's annual gathering of its top prep track talent.

Two records were broken in the boys division while the girls, competing in the meet for the fourth time, went wild with eight new standards and two U.S. marks.

Dennis Smith, the talented football player recruited out of Santa Monica by USC, showed he'll also help the Trojans in track.

Smith cleared 7-2 in the high jump on his third attempt to better world record holder Dwight Stones' State mark by a half-inch.

Smith, ironically, was the only one of five jumpers who did not clear 6-10 on his first attempt. But he and Bill Hice of Oakland then left the rest of the field behind at 7-0.

DOKIE WILLIAMS of El Camino (Oceanside) acounted for the other mark, soaring 51 feet, ½-inch in the triple jump.

Sanford got a run for athlete of the meet honors from Russell who became the first San Diego sprinter in 48 years to score double victories in the sprints.

Russell overpowered both fields, taking the 100 in 9.61 and 220 in 20.97. Sanford, who had run 20.80 in the prelims Friday, never could make up Russell's five-yard advantage he built up on the curve.

Sanford had earlier rallied Pasadena from third to first on the final leg of the 440 relay, passing runnerup Gardena and Edison (Fresno) in the stretch.

Poly, which had Friday's second-fastest qualifying time, almost overextended its first handoff Saturday and could never recover. A strong anchor by Chris Neal got the Jackrabbits sixth place in the nine-team field.

Gardena, which finished second in the team race with 13 points, headed a strong showing by the Marine League.

Phil Johnson of Gardena won the 120 high hurdles in 13.66, overhauling Ken Margerum of Fountain Valley on the next to last flight. Curtis Perry of Banning was third.

Perry later finished second in the 330 lows, then ran a 47.9 third leg on the mile relay to briefly rally his team into first before Sanford anchored in 46.3 for Pasadena. Muir was second in 3:14.9, Banning third in 3:15.1.

RON CORNELL of San Pedro scratched from the 2-mile in favor of the mile where he ran fourth in 4:10.0.

Sophomore Frank Assuma of Eisenhower (Rialto), whose twin brother Chuck had finished ahead of him in the Southern Section meet last week, won the 2-mile in 8:52.9.

Athletes from the Southern Section won nine of the 16 events.

U.S. girls records were set in the 440 relay (46.14) by Crawford of San Diego and by Ann Regan of Camden (San Jose) in the half-mile (2:08.0).

Locke won a tight battle for the girls title with 14 points, nipping North Bakersfield (13) and Centennial (12).

The 1978 State meet will be held in Bakersfield.

McDonald in PGA tour qualify lead

PINEHURST, N.C. (Special)—Bill Pelham of Houston holds a one-shot lead entering today's final round of the Pro Golf Association tour qualifying school.

Pelham shot a 71 Saturday for a 90-hole total of 347. Brady Miller of Orange, Tex., Phil Hancock of Greenville, Ala., and Curtis Strange of Kingsmill, Va., are tied for second with 348s.

Tim Simpson, who fired the day's best round of 65 for 350, trails Wayne Levi by one stroke.

Thirteen Southern Californians, headed by Pat McDonald of Ridgecrest, were among the 86 golfers who made the cut at 367. There were 414 golfers when the six-round tournament started. Only 25 plus ties will earn tour cards.

Beau Baugh of Long Beach, who failed in his three previous tries to qualify, carded 75 for a 365 total. Baugh would have to shoot a sensational round of 65 or 66 to have a chance for his card. Long Beach's Tony Campregher withdrew.

Burbank's Billy Schwenneker missed the cut with an 81 for a 371.

Andretti on Belgian Prix pole

ZOLDER, Belgium (AP) — Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., put his JPS-Lotus on the pole position for today's Belgian Grand Prix with a qualifying time Saturday which pulverized the lap record and the hopes of the opposition.

He was 1.3 seconds under the lap record. More importantly, Andretti was about 1.5 seconds faster than anyone else around the 2.648-mile track, covering the twisting course at 110 mph.

"The secret is the fantastic design and preparation of the car by the Lotus team," Andretti said. "It's a pleasure to drive."

Andretti's other pole position this year, in the Spanish Grand Prix, saw him dominate right to the finishing flag for his second consecutive victory. He also won the Grand Prix West at Long Beach.

Alongside him on the front row of the grid was Britain's John Watson in the Brabham-Alfa Romeo. Third fastest and strategically behind Andretti was the other Lotus, driven by Swede Gunnar Nilsson.

South African Jody Scheckter, current Formula One world championship leader, had his Wolf in the other second-row spot.

Andretti, currently fourth standings but only three points behind second-place Niki Lauda of Austria and 10 behind Scheckter, agreed he was "on top form and feeling very good" for the 70-lap, 185.38-mile race.

Andretti was fastest from the start of qualifying Friday, before rain washed out the rest of the day.

After a dispute about the number of entrants permitted, the organizers finally allowed 32 to try to qualify for the 26 places.

Among those who fought their way in was Brett Lunger, the former Marine from Wilmington, Del., 22nd in his new McLaren M23.

Reigning world champion and McLaren team leader James Hunt of Britain had another unhappy day. His new M26 died minutes after the start of the final session and he had to scramble hastily into the older M23 to qualify ninth. He has yet to win a race this year.

Argentina's Carlos Reutemann saved Ferrari's colors with the seventh-best time for the fourth row of the grid when Lauda ran only 11th.

Win with room to spare

David Russell from Patrick Henry High in San Diego breezes to win in 100-yard dash at Saturday's State meet held at UCLA. Russell was timed in 9.61. He later won the 220 in 20.97.

76ers alive—barely

Blazers look for knockout punch

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers are one game away from writing the final chapter in their Cinderella season. The National Basketball Association championship is within their grasp.

"We finally did what we had to do—we beat them on the road," said Blazers forward Bobby Gross, whose 25 points played a big part in Portland's 110-104 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Friday night. It gave the Blazers a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven NBA playoff finals.

"Now it's in our laps," Gross said, a second-year pro from Long Beach State. "We've got them on our home court. It's up to us to finish them off."

At Memorial Coliseum, before the screaming thousands who have made Blazermania the password in the Pacific Northwest, the Trail Blazers are a mighty tough outfit. They've won their last 17 in a row at home, 44 of 50 over-all.

AFTER losing the first two games of this series at Philadelphia, the Blazers returned home and posted 129-107 and 130-98 romps.

"We're not going out to Portland just to see the rain," promised Sixers coach Gene Shue, whose club has now lost three in a row for the first time this season.

"You've got to be positive, to go out there and play 100 per cent and let the chips fall where they may," added Philadelphia guard Doug Collins. "Those fans will be crazy out there. They'll be sky high. We can't let them get off to a fast start or it will be too much to overcome."

Neither team got off to much of a start Friday night. It was 53-52 Portland early in the third quarter when the Blazers took command. Gross and reserve guard Dave Twardzik led them on a 17-2 burst and, by the end of the third period, it was 85-66.

PHILADELPHIA, sparked by reserve forward Joe Bryant, staged a fourth-quarter comeback to narrow the final score.

So the Blazers, an expansion team which suffered through six losing seasons before putting it together in their first year under coach Jack Ramsay, can become the first team ever to lose the first two games of the NBA finals and then come back to win four in a row—if they can beat the Sixers again today (Channel 2, noon).

"We expect a war on Sunday," said Ramsay, taking the cautious approach. "We will have to play our best. If we do that, we'll win. Anything less won't be enough."

Should Philadelphia win, the championship of the 1976-77 NBA season which began nearly eight months ago and in which the Sixers and Blazers have now played 100 regular-season and playoff games apiece, would be decided in a seventh game of the playoff finals at Philadelphia Wednesday night.

Could Game Seven be necessary?

"I doubt it very seriously," said forward Maurice Lucas, Portland's top scorer in the finals at 20.6 points per game. "We're going to play well. If Philadelphia wants the championship, they're going to have to take it."

Then he added, "But they never bury you 'til the last nail is in the coffin."

"Sunday we've got to do the same thing we've done in the last three games—go out and take it to them," said Gross. "We've got to play good defense, not turn the ball over and be patient in working for our shots. If we do that, we'll win."

BOB GROSS
'It's in our laps'

Especially if they get another big game from center Bill Walton, who has been a dominating presence in the middle, preventing Philadelphia from driving the lane, double-teaming Julius Erving, keying the Blazers' fast break and setting up their offense with his passes from the pivot.

He has scored 91 points and grabbed 91 rebounds in the series, an average of 18.2 per game, and has helped offset a brilliant individual show by Erving, averaging 28.4 points a game.

The Sixers know they have their work cut out for them.

"It's going to be tough," said forward George McGinnis, who first showed signs of busting loose from the slump which has shackled him through the playoffs, then ran into foul trouble Friday night. "But I believe we can do it. I really do. All we have to do is play the way we can."

"We're not going to give up," said playmaker Henry Bibby. "It's uphill for everybody now. Remember, the pressure will be on them to win it at home. You still have to win four to win the series, so we're still alive."

Alive, yes, but just barely.

Gottfried, Vilas in net finals

PARIS (AP) — Brian Gottfried of the United States and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, Davis Cup rivals of a month ago, advanced Saturday to the final of the prestigious French Open Tennis Championships.

Gottfried overcame an injured Phil Dent of Australia, 7-5, 6-3, 7-5. Dent had an injection for a wrist strain before the match, and from midway through the second set was under handicap.

Vila routed Raul Ramirez of Mexico, 6-2, 6-0, 6-3, in one of the most one-sided matches of the two-week tournament at Roland Garros Stadium. It was Vilas's eighth win over the Mexican in eight meetings.

In today's final, for a first prize of $30,000, Gottfried will be trying to avenge a crushing defeat by Vilas which gave Argentina its victory over the United States in the Davis Cup in Buenos Aires.

Weiskopf in 3-way Kemper tie

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, who has won this tournament two times, and Bill Rogers and George Burns, who haven't won at all, moved into a three-way tie for the lead Saturday after three rounds of the $250,000 Kemper Open Golf tournament.

Weiskopf, a non-winner for two years but admittedly "pumped up, excited" about his chances, could have had the lead alone but for a missed five-foot eagle putt on the par-five fifth hole.

He had to settle for a three-under-par 69 and a 207 total, nine-under-par on the winter-damaged, 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

The lanky, talkative Rogers, who said "this is my best position ever," shot a 68, and the hard-luck Burns, who's been in position to win so often—and every time let it get away—barged into contention with a six-under-par 66.

"I've got a new mental attitude," said Burns, who could have won three times this year and fell victim to poor last-round play each time. "I'm tired of getting all churned up about the way I'm playing. I'm gonna play the game the way it is, relax and enjoy and have the good life. I'll take what comes."

One stroke behind the threesome at 208 were former U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Doug Tewell and George Archer, who led or shared the lead through the first two rounds of this chase for a $50,000 first prize.

Tewell had a third round 68, Graham 69, Archer and Rodriguez 71s.

Ed Sneed stormed out of the pack with a 65, the best round of the tournament, and was alone at 209.

"By no right should I have had a 65," said Sneed, a winner at Tallahassee two months ago. "I didn't play anything like that well. It just shows you that short stick can overcome a lot. It was a very lucky score."

He one-putted nine times—including birdies from 50, 30, 25 and 20 feet—and once chipped in to save par.

Carner forges six shot lead

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — JoAnne Carner shot a four-under-par 68 Saturday to take a commanding six-stroke lead with a 210 after three rounds of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

The 38-year-old from Lake Worth, Fla., had three birdies as she moved to an almost insurmountable lead over Pat Bradley, the defending champion from Westford, Mass.

Miss Bradley, with a double bogie on the 16th, wound up with a 73 for a 216. She was one stroke ahead of pony-tailed Jane Blalock of Highland Beach, Fla.

Miss Blalock, who had an eagle on the par-four, 344-yard sixth hole of the Wykagyl Country Club course, posted a 71 to go with her 146 after two rounds.

Kathy McMullen of Holmes Beach, Fla., also had a 71 and was one stroke ahead of Judy Rankin with a 218. Chako Higuchi, Laura Baugh, Sandra Palmer and Sandra Spuzich were bunched at 220.

In Bel Air 'Cap at Hollypark

Pay Tribute, 'Title clash

By George Main
Special to the I, P-T

Pay Tribute, back in the brilliant form that carried him to victory in the 1976 Hollywood Gold Cup, and Ancient Title, richest California-bred in history with earnings of $1,051,416, top a small but select field of six in the $53,800 Bel Air Handicap at Hollywood Park today.

Pay Tribute came back from an 11-month vacation to tin-can it against an allowance field, winning in a breeze while running fast—a mile and one-sixteenth in 1:41⅘. He did that under 114 and today draws 122 pounds two less than high-weighted Ancient Title.

Today's distance is a mile and one-eighth and Marco Castaneda will again do the riding. Marco inherited the ride on Max Gluck's five-year-old stallion for this very same Bel Air a year ago when Laffit Pincay dropped him to ride Foolish Pleasure. Riot In Paris won it with Pay Tribute second and Pleasure third.

Prior to the Bel Air, Pay Tribute ran second behind Ancient Title in the Californian. Then came the Gold Cup. Close up all the way, Pay Tribute was sent into a quick lead entering the stretch and he kept right on going to nail it down by three plus lengths from Avatar and Riot In Paris with Foolish Pleasure fifth and Ancient Title sixth. The payoff was $29.80. It looks more like $2.80 today.

The Gold Cup was Pay Tribute's last race until May 22 this year. Following his Gold Cup win, Pay Tribute began favoring his left foreleg and X-rays disclosed a bone chip in the knee. Surgery corrected the problem and trainer Ron McAnally took all the time he needed getting him ready to run again.

Today's Bel Air is his final tune-up for a try at winning a second Gold Cup which comes due on the 18th.

Ancient Title, meanwhile, is somewhat of a surprise entry. Trainer Keith Stucki originally intended to bring the 7-year-old gelding up to the Gold Cup on works after his third-place finish in the Californian a couple of weeks ago.

But after noting only five horses entered in today's race and 'Title's swift work—a half in 45⅕—Friday a.m., Stucki decided to make the Bel Air his charge's tightener for the Gold Cup.

"I was going to have to give him a good mile work anyway," said Stucki, "and this race will serve the same purpose plus giving us a chance to pick up a pay check." Sandy Hawley, Ancient Title's regular rider, will be aboard.

SATURDAY'S WASH—Ben Ridder's Cascapedia left no doubt as to who the fastest filly in the West is when the four-year-old daughter of Chieftain overpowered five rivals to win the $54,250 Milady Handicap at Hollywood Park. . .Her final time of 1:40⅘ equalled the stakes record set by Desert Law and also duplicated the clocking turned in by Cascapedia when she took the Hawthorne Handicap on turf two weeks ago. . .Cascapedia won the Milady by three lengths but the margin may have been greater had she encountered any opposition through the stretch. . .Runner-up Rocky Trip put up a brief fight at the top of the lane, but quickly succumbed to Cascapedia's late burst, although holding well for second, two lengths in front of early pacesetter Just A Kick. . .Cascapedia's chief rival among the Western distaff corps, Sara Stable's Hail Hilarious, never fired. She wound up last in the six-horse field, being beaten by 11 lengths. . ."No excuse" reported jockey Don Pierce. "She was down on the inside most of the way, but even when I got her out, she gave me no run.". . .The Milady victory boosted Cascapedia's lifetime record to nine wins in 15 starts with earnings in excess of $170,000. . .She's won five of seven this year and must rank as the leading candidate for Eclipse Award honors in the older filly and mare division. . ."What a powerful mare this is," said winning jockey Sandy Hawley, Hollypark's leading rider. "We were in tight down the backstretch for a little bit, but other than that, we had a good trip. She's so easy to ride. Yes, she's among the best fillies I've ever ridden, right up there with (Canadian champion) Laurie's Dancer."

Cascapedia was purchased as a yearling in a two-filly package from Raymond Guest for something in the neighborhood of $60,000. . ."I've been offered $400,000 for her," said Ridder, "but she's not for sale."

BARN BURNERS— Hollypark's Memorial Day week-end dipped from last year's three-day spree both in attendance and mutuel play. The Dodgers playing Cincy Saturday and Sunday afternoon didn't help at all. The crowd of 49,282 on Memorial day this year topped New York where 45,647 were admitted free and treated to free parking and programs. All Hollypark offered was a free T-shirt. Hollypark's crowd bet $6,758,528. The New Yorkers bet but $3,810,585. Off Track Betting handled $2,054,411...Agent Vince DeGregory, one of the top five in the nation, and Darrell McHargue have split. Apparently 78 wins, including two hundred granders, at the past Santa Anita meet meant nothing to McHargue. The day McHargue decided to split he rode two winners at Hollywood Park giving him 18 for the season, just four behind Bill Shoemaker. Shoe has the same agent he started with, Harry Silbert...Trainer Bobby Frankel loves to boast about claiming a horse and moving him up in class. However, seldom, if ever, is anything said about failures. For instance: On May 28, Frankel ran Lark's Regards for an $8,000 tag in the first race and saw him lose narrowly at odds-on. In the second race he ran Good Witness for the same $8,000 and he finished seventh at 8-5. So what? Well, Frankel claimed Lark's Regards for $12,500, had him for a year and then lost him for $8000. Frankel claimed Good Witness in April for $10,000 then ran him in May for $2000 less. Nobody took him...In case you missed it, jockey Jerry Lambert has shaved off his beard and trimmed his hair. "Jerry just decided to rejoin the human race," is the way a fellow rider put it. He's also getting more rides now at Hollypark and he looked like the old Jerry Lambert in winning the $200,000 Turf Invitational with Vigors. When Lambert is at his best he's the equal of any rider in the nation and better than 95 per cent of them...When Jr. Cute Guy won a two-year-old maiden race at Los Alamitos the happiest man in the crowd was Philip E. Peirce, vice-president treasurer of Hollywood Park. Peirce bred the young quarter horse.

U.S. TURF HIGHLIGHTS

HAWTHORNE — Silver Series set a fast pace to win the 13th running of the $140,800 Hawthorne Derby...Cosmic Flash, one of two field horses in the field of 14 three-year-olds, finished second in the 1-1/16 mile race. Affiliate, favored at 2-to-1 by the closing day crowd of 19,111, came from far back to finish third...Silver Series, ridden by Larry Snyder, won by seven lengths in 1:41⅕. It was only 3-5 of a second slower than the track record. Silver Series, who won the Hutcheson Stakes at Gulfstream Park, earned $100,800 and paid $9.80.

BELMONT PARK — Canadian-owned Pacific Princess took the $54,500 Hempstead Handicap for fillies and mares, winning at 13-1 odds as the favored Proud Delta finished fifth...A crowd of 30,319 saw Pacific Princess win the 1-1/8 mile stakes by three-quarters of a length over another 13-1 shot, Mississippi Mud. Fleet Victress took the show 2¾ lengths farther back...Pacific Princess ran the distance in 1:49⅕ and paid $27.40.

HAZEL PARK — Private Thoughts, a homebred favorite, stormed to his second stakes victory in five days by capturing the $57,450 Hazel Park Trial Handicap...The 4-year-old Private Thoughts took the lead on the backstretch and finished 2½ lengths in front of Satan's Hills...Bet down to 6-5, the winner paid $4.40.

GOLDEN GATE FIELDS — Francisco Mena piloted Explosivo past pacesetter Grey Moon Runner and favored Incredibly Lucky at the top of the stretch and went on to a two-length victory in the $27,550 Pacifica Stakes...Explosivo earned $16,300 for his fourth victory of the year in eight races. His time for the mile was 1:35⅘ and he paid $11. Incredibly Lucky finished second and longshot Three Bits edged Grey Moon Runner for third in the field of 11 3-year-olds.

MONMOUTH — Cast The Die took the lead at the turn and pulled away in the stretch to record an upset 4½-length victory over Ivory Wand in the $27,325 Regret Handicap...What A Summer, the 4-5 favorite who zoomed in front with a world record first quarter of 20⅘ seconds, faded to third in the six-furlong sprint...What A Summer's first quarter trimmed one-fifth of a second off the mark set in 1945 by Big Racket...The winner covered the distance in 1:09⅘ and paid $17.80.

KEYSTONE — Medieval Man notched his second consecutive stakes victory when he rallied from last place on the backstretch to win the $27,850 Philmont Handicap...Medieval Man was timed in 1:10⅘ for the six-furlong test for 3-year-olds. He paid $3.80.

BOWIE — Counter Punch, who futilely chased Seattle Slew in the Preakness, rebounded for his second victory since that classic by overpowering five rivals to win the $27,600 Annapolis Handicap by 4½ lengths...The Maryland-bred gelding ran the 1-1/16 miles in 1:43⅘ and paid $5.80.

CALDER — Countess Pruner scored a one-length victory over longshot Delphic Oracle in the $22,400 Azalea Stakes, with 6-5 favorite White Goddess 4½ lengths farther back in the short field of five 3-year-old fillies...The winner paid $6.80.

EPSOM DOWNS — Dunfermline, owned by Queen Elizabeth II, won the Oaks Classic for 3-year-old fillies to give the monarch a silver jubilee present of nearly $85,000 in prize money...Freeze the Secret finished second and Vaguely Deb was third...The favorite, Durtal, ridden by Britain's top jockey, Lester Piggott, threw her rider before the start and was withdrawn from the race...Dunfermline rewarded her backers with odds of 6-1 in the 1½-mile race.

Lanty's Easy Jet prevails

Lantys Easy Jet, who finished fourth to Kingdom Key in the recent Bay Meadows Futurity, evened the score in Saturday's featured Jet Deck Stakes at Los Alamitos Race Course.

Lantys Easy Jet, trained by Blane Schvaneveldt, broke from the outside post to spot the early lead to Kingdom Key. But the classy two-year-old responded gamely with every stride to gradually get the lead and was drawing away at the finish.

The winning rider was Kenneth Hart, who moved into a first-place tie in the jockey standings with Danny Cardoza.

The Jet Deck was a rematch of the 'Meadows Futurity, bringing together the top four finishers in that contest. Kingdom Key, who broke his maiden to win the Rich Northern contests, appeared to be on the way to consecutive victories until he proved unable to withstand the winner's steady charge.

Lantys Easy Jet, whose time of 17.88 seconds equalled the fastest 350-yard effort by a two-year-old this season, had started just three times prior to his Jet Deck win. He won his maiden effort by two lengths in 18.18 seconds.

Big striped bass caught on flyrod

For starters today, let's talk about fly-fishing for striped bass, not in the ocean but in fresh water. The latest catch that no doubt will go into the Field & Stream awards for 1977 was taken by David Cox, Altadena, on the Arizona side of the Colorado River four miles north of Needles.

Cox, using a Delta King streamer fly about five inches long, boated his fish in mid-May, but word of the big catch just leaked out last Friday, and it came from one of the angler's best friends, Robert Hulquist, fishery biologist for the Department of Fish and Game whose normal domain is the Salton Sea.

It seems that Cox and his wife, who is known far and wide by the nickname of Freddie, spend much of their time fishing the Salton Sea and using flies to catch corvina. They have kept records of their catches in the Sea, and the best one taken on a fly weighed 18 pounds. There probably isn't an angler in Long Beach (and that includes this writer) who wouldn't be delighted to take a corvina that large on live bait or any kind of a deep-running lure.

Dave and Freddie strayed off to the Colorado River spot last month and they didn't think so much about the catch, which incidentally weighed 33 pounds, 9 ounces. When Hulquist heard about it, he relayed the information to the Long Beach office of the DFG and that's where I learned about it.

A STRIPER WEIGHING 33-9 would delight any angler, and I don't think that 99 per cent of those fishermen would care how they caught it. I personally would be happy with one weighing four or five pounds. It just so happens that a striper is something that I have never caught. I have fished for them in the San Francisco Delta region, outside the Golden Gate and in Havasu, but it is one species that has eluded me all these many years.

David and Freddie are members of the Saltwater Flyrodders, Pacific No. 1, and they have spent much of their time fishing in the ocean, as well as in the Colorado River and the lakes that make up that river.

Dave's catch (33-9) is larger than the striper that was entered in the 1976 Field and Stream contest. That fish weighed 31-8 and was caught by G. William King, Sacramento, in the San Francisco-Sacramento Delta.

His fish was a midget when compared to the 64-pound, 8-ounce brute caught by Beryle Bliss, Fallon, Nev., from the Umpqua River in Oregon on July 28, 1973. That set a world record for stripers caught on flies and it still stands.

David is a fireman for the County of Los Angeles, and he lets Freddie do most of the talking. There couldn't be a more enthusiastic booster for the Flyrodders than Freddie, who is an officer of Pacific No. 1. She says that flyrodding is the only sporting way to go.

FREDDIE PREDICTS THAT SOME angler will catch "a really big striped bass in the Colorado River just below Davis Dam, and she naturally hopes that it will be somebody who is using a flyrod. She thinks that the best fishing area is in the white water just below Davis Dam, which holds back the water in Mohave Lake.

There is another excellent fishing area just below the Palo Verde Dam near Blythe.

May and June usually are the spawning months for stripers in the Colorado River, and the big males and females swim what really seems like upstream to them even though they are in lakes. Their favorite food is threadfin shad and there is a great abundance of that forage species in all of the lakes.

It must be explained that the fly used in fishing for big stripers is not a dainty little dry fly such as flyfishermen use for small trout. Freddie says that the fly which caught the 33-9 fish was almost as large as a small sparrow. She thinks that a white fly works best in the Colorado, a dark fly in the Sacramento Delta and a multicolored combination in Oregon's Umpqua River.

"We were drifting about 60 feet offshore and casting upstream with a leaded line," she said. "We were letting the line sink and getting a 'belly' in it. The big fish hit suddenly as Dave retrieved the line very slowly, bringing the fly up from the bottom."

Persons interested in possible membership in Saltwater Flyrooders should write Mrs. David Cox, 290 E. Marathon Road, Altadena, Calif. 91001.

OUTDOOR MINIS—The second race of the Pacific Ocean Racing Conference's 1977 season almost ended before it started last weekend for lack of wind. The race was started from the Los Angeles Yacht Club at noon on May 25. Twenty-two blue-water yachts started; only 11 finished, and most of those took two days and two nights. One boat, the last one, finally returned to the finish line at the Marina del Rey Yacht Club at midafternoon Monday...The race was around Santa Cruz and San Nicolas Islands, and at times there was not enough wind to blow a feather a foot...Al Delfino (LAYC), skippering Phantom, was first of the Class A boats to finish but he was only third in corrected time. Bill Power (Newport Harbor YC), in High Roler, was second and Barry Berkus and Roy Cam[illegible] (Long Beach YC), in Sunset Boulevard, were third...Roy Hoffman (Bahia Corinthian YC), skippering Huckleberry Duck, was the last boat to cross the finish line late Monday...The service training facilities of Mercury Marine's western distribution center have been doubled at 2313 S. Susan St., Santa Ana. Dave Goodman, manager of the center said that 10,000 square feet were added to the 20,000 already there. The center is the distribution point for Mercury outboards and MerCruiser stern drives in California, Hawaii, Arizona and most of Nevada. It also is the service center for dealers in all those states.

LBCC honors top women athletes

By Elaine Risinger
Staff Writer

Traditionally, at the conclusion of the fall and spring sports seasons, top Long Beach City College athletes are honored for their achievements. This spring 15 women were selected by fellow team members to receive the Associated Student Body Awards.

Jeanne Teissere, a freshman who set four school records this year, was voted MVP in gymnastics. Jeanne, one of only two junior college gymnasts to compete in the AIAW nationals, holds the top school marks in vault with 9.45; uneven bars, 9.3; beam, 9.0, and all around, 35.6. Her coach, Peggy Stoll, says Jeanne is "the outstanding gymnast ever to compete for LBCC."

Taking honors for most improved was Cassandra Spann, a sophomore who came up from the beginning gymnastics class to be the third scorer in the vault with a 7.55 and in the uneven bars with 7.75.

THREE players, who were chosen for the all-league team, were tapped for softball trophies. They were outfielder Dawn Wiley, who batted .310, stole 21 bases during the season and committed only one error all year; Pitcher Kathy Kellis, who posted a 2.09 earned run average, gave up only .9 walks per game and batted .313; and third baseman Toni Bell, the top Viking hitter with a .375 batting average, 11 RBIs, one home run, one triple and five doubles. "She also played outstanding defense," says coach Donna Prindle.

Anne Middlebrooks and Margaret Frost received the nod in tennis. Both compete in singles and doubles. Anne, chosen most outstanding player, is described by coach Sally Monseor as "a player with tremendous concentration, mental control and good physical skills. She was a real asset to the team."

Margaret, lauded for her improvement during the season, is a freshman from Wilson High School. "She is a real competitor and highly motivated."

Two freshmen, Peggy Lewis and Sue Ann Kelly, were honored by the swim team: Peggy, who attended Poly High School, competed in the 200 IM, relays and as a freestyler. Sue Ann, a former Wilson student, swam the backstroke. Both were praised by coach Marti Gunning for their enthusiasm and hard work.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

VERA JONES and Oscar Just received the dual awards in coed badminton. Although this was Vera's first year in college competition, she played the number one position in mixed, singles and doubles. After a mid-season injury she came back to compete in the SCCCIAC championship in both singles and ladies doubles. Coach Gillis Brown calls Vera "a strong, aggressive player who will be a great asset to the team next year."

"Oscar is one of the most talented players at LBCC in several years," Gillis adds. The freshman learned to play when his family lived in the Philippines, but this was his first year of skilled competition. He won 13 of his 15 league matches and was "outstanding" during the SCCCIAC championship. He will return next year.

Roxanne Martinez and Happy Othelt shared honors in coed volleyball. Both were members of the double A team. "Roxanne was a consistent, effective setter for the team and excelled in diving and saves," says coach Marilyn Tom. "Happy is a great defensive player."

Bowling trophies went to Steve Schroeder and Carolyn West. Steve set three school records during the year—tournament average, 209; Cypress tournament high series, 710, and mixed doubles series, 1256. His high game for the league season was 259. Steve ranks third nationally in college and club competition.

Carolyn, who has been the leading Viking woman's bowler for the second year, set a new tournament average record of 181. Her high game for the league season was 231, and she shared the mixed doubles series of 1256.

SOFTBALL recap: After a slow start, the Viking team ended the season going to the SCCCIAC finals and placing three members on the league team. In addition to the individual efforts and awards noted above, Jean McLean was given the Golden Bat Award. During the season she hit in 16 out of 21 games, had 14 RBIs, three home runs and averaged .325.

Golden Glove honors were shared by second baseman Jane Baker, who committed only two errors, and Cindy Mast, who had 181 putouts at first base — 22 in one errorless game. Kelley McCarty was tabbed for defensive play, and Karen Daeley and Kim Doyle were called given most inspirational awards.

Trio captured after 3-state search

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — Two men and a woman captured two hours after a bank robbery were in Kern County Jail Saturday on charges from several counties after a three-state manhunt.

Tony Estrada, 25; Joe J. Cornejo, 27, and Magdalena Reyes, 19, were charged with bank robbery, attempted murder, kidnaping and auto theft.

The three were arrested Friday night at a Bakersfield apartment a half mile from the American National Bank, which was robbed of an undetermined amount of money by two men who fled in a car with a woman. The car was traced to the apartment, police said.

The other charges were connected to the shooting-kidnaping last Sunday of California Highway Patrolman Richard Augusta in Contra Costa County. The three were also sought for investigation of murder and robberies in Madera and Fresno counties, police said.

A weeklong search for the three Madera County residents had extended into Oregon and Washington earlier in the week.

Madera County deputies said the three are wanted for questioning in two armed robberies May 24 in which two persons were wounded and one killed. They also were sought for questioning in a grocery store holdup and auto theft in Fresno May 28.

Patrolman Augusta was wounded when he stopped a car last Sunday at Brentwood in Contra Costa County to investigate possible drunken driving. The three then fled under gunfire from Augusta's partner, and their car, stolen in the Fresno robbery, was found later a half mile away.

Augusta is in stable condition in Delta Memorial Hospital at Antioch. He was hit in the side by one shot and underwent surgery.

Later last Sunday, in Brentwood, two men and a woman stole a car from Rojelio Lopez, 30, and Efrain Villasenor, 24, and took them about 50 miles to a rural area near Lake Chabot, where they were tied up and robbed of about $100. The victims freed themselves and fled. They later identified the trio of fugitives from mug shots, police said.

19 jailed in roundup of drug-related thefts

SAN BERNARDINO (AP) — Authorities have arrested 19 persons in separate drug-related cases, police said Saturday.

San Bernardino police arrested eight persons Friday for investigation of receiving stolen property in exchange for heroin. Four other persons were arrested in the same case for posession of heroin.

Six of those arrested for receiving stolen property were San Bernardino businessmen, police said. They were charged with receiving goods stolen from local supermarkets and department stores.

In another case, seven persons were arrested by San Bernardino Sheriff's deputies in what they called the third phase of a probe into a major heroin ring in the west end of San Bernardino County.

The seven were booked by sheriff's deputies on charges of conspiracy to sell heroin.

Huge sewage leak in S.F. bay continues

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A leaking underground sewer main continued Saturday to dump from 300,000 to 400,000 gallons of raw sewage per day into the San Francisco Bay.

The sewage leak, ongoing since midweek, was caused by a break in pipes connecting the Shaw road pumping station and the Bel Air road treatment plant, a facility that serves thousands of residences.

John Collins, the superintendent of sanitation, estimated Saturday that repairs could take five months.

Peter D. Smith, Long Beach, was overwhelmed with the response he got with his ad for a color TV.	80	79
Mrs. Lee Smith, Long Beach, "didn't realize that everyone reads the classified" when she advertized her lawnmower for sale.	20	19
Mrs. Joe Schultz was very pleased with the results of her ad for a housekeeper. She found one the first day.	29	28
Larry Miller was "just real pleased" with the response he got on his ad for a Triumph motorcycle.	15	14
Jack Mills, Gardenia, sold his '62 Chevrolet Impala and got his asking price too.	31	30

Learn Nature's Good Luck Secret

How to cash in on your built-in luck by using your personal Biorhythm Analysis to discover your multi-high jackpot days

By Paul Vanderwist

You are going to experience at least 5 multi-high jackpot days in the next two months. Your total will have reached 31 jackpot days by the end of the year.

But chances are, you won't collect a single one of the jackpots you have coming to you. Why? Because although Mother Nature built these jackpots into you, up until now, she has kept the way to collect them a closely guarded secret.

But a scientific discovery has finally cracked "Nature's Good Luck Secret." What is the discovery? Scientists call it Biorhythm.

Biorhythm is currently drawing enormous public attention. As a copywriter, I decided to look into it. My investigation centered around the research being conducted by the Biorhythm Research Institute.

The Institute has developed a two part theory. First, at birth Mother Nature built good luck into each one of us. She intended for us to enjoy success and happiness in our lovelives, finances, and careers. Second, in order to cash in on your built-in luck, you must simply make the right little decisions on your Biorhythm multi-high jackpot days. But, before I tell you about their research, let me quickly explain what Biorhythm multi-high jackpot days are.

Jackie met John Kennedy on a mental and emotional Multi High Jackpot Day.

Alfred Mayle won $10,000 by buying a lottery ticket on a Multi-High Jackpot Day.

WHAT IS BIORHYTHM?

The word Biorhythm is derived from the Greek words 'bio' meaning life and 'rhythmos' meaning regulated beats. There is considerable evidence that we all have three Life Beats (Biorhythm Cycles). 1. A 23 day Physical Cycle, governing energy and sexual stimulation. 2. A 28 day Emotional Cycle, governing love and happiness. 3. A 33 day Mental Cycle, governing money and career. These three Biorhythm Cycles flow throughout our entire life. They alternate between high and recharge cycles. (See photo at upper right.) When at least two Biorhythm cycles are on high, you experience a multi-high jackpot day. When three cycles hit high on exactly the same day, you experience a Triple High Super Jackpot Day. When all three cycles are on recharge, you have a relax day.

CELEBRITY RESEARCH

With this explanation in mind, let me continue to describe the Institute's research.

To prove part two of their theory, that extraordinary luck can be achieved by making the right little decisions on Biorhythm multi-high days, they studied a group of celebrities. All of the celebrities had one thing in common. They were leading ordinary lives when suddenly they were skyrocketed to wealth, success and fame. Here are their findings on just three of the many celebrities they studied.

When the Olympics opened last summer, 14 year old Nadia Comaneci experienced a Triple High Jackpot Day. Nadia went on to capture the first perfect score in Olympic Gymnastic history, seven perfect scores overall, and a total of 3 gold medals. In addition, Nadia's physical Biorhythm Cycle was very high every day of her performance, and peaked the day she won the gold medal on the uneven parallel bars.

Remember the pet rock craze? The man who conceived the idea was a Californian named Gary Dahl. On April 19, 1975, his Biorhythm Chart indicated a mental high jackpot day. It was on this day that Dahl had his pet rock brainstorm. Ultimately, this venture made him a million dollars in less than 90 days.

Jackie Bouvier was an unknown reporter from the Washington Times Herald. On May 8, 1952 her mental and emotional cycles both reached high points. It was on this day that she met and began interviewing John F. Kennedy. They were soon married and later she became the youngest First Lady in the 20th Century. Today, Jackie is probably the most famous woman alive.

The Institutealso studied people who weren't famous but had experienced extremely good luck:

During the week of August 13th, Pat Carnes, a Canton, Ohio housewife had an incredible lucky streak. Ironically her luck began on Friday the 13th when she won her company's check pool for $69. Friday night, Pat won $145 playing Bingo. Saturday, she hit the superfecta at the racetrack for $850. Sunday, she won 5 times at Bingo and was embarrassed to keep raising her hand. Wednesday, she hit both the trifecta and the perfecta for a total of $930. Unknown to Pat, during this week her Biorhythm chart had registered six Multi-High Jackpot days in a row.

> "Once you have your personal Biorhythm Analysis prepared from your birth date you can begin to enjoy luck, love, wealth, success, and happiness."

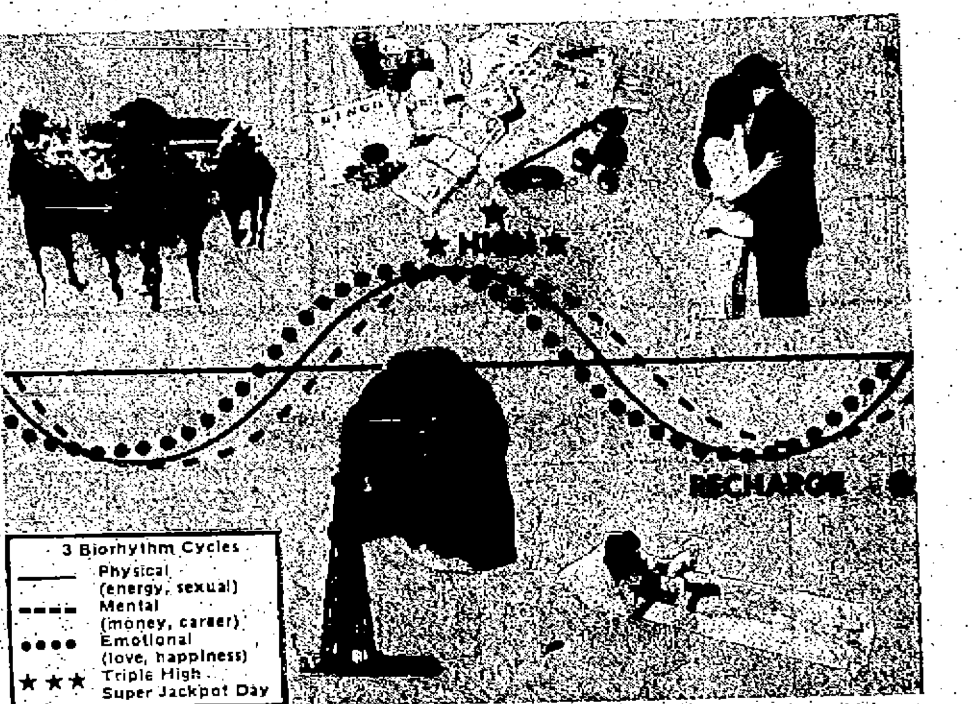
Omar Watts was a 59 year old nightwatchman struggling to support a wife and five children. On October 27, 1974 his Biorhythm Analysis indicated a Triple High Jackpot day. It was on this day that Omar chose to quit his job as a nightwatchman. His purchase of a 50¢ ticket had just won Ohio's first million dollar lottery.

As you can see from the above examples, it was the little decisions made on multi-high days, which led to luck, love, wealth, success and happiness. This proves part two of the Institute's theory.

Now the Institute is conducting a nationwide research project to prove part one of their theory; that everyone, regardless of age or ability, can dramatically improve their luck with the help of their personal Biorhythm Analysis. If you send them your birth date, they will individually prepare your one year – 365 day Biorhythm Analysis. Along with your Analysis, you will receive a research blank which will offer you cash incentives to simply tell the Institute all about the unbelievable luck, love, wealth, success and happiness your Biorhythm Analysis has brought you. Your success story will prove part one of their theory.

HOW IS AN ANALYSIS PREPARED?

A Biorhythm Technician will process your birth information. Your keypunched card will be fed into a giant IBM 370–145 computer. The computer will then complete the complicated calculations to determine the positions of your Biorhythm Cycles every day for the coming year. Your Biorhythm Analysis will not be preprinted. The computer individually prepares each analysis just like a man would. But the computer's tremendous speed enables the Institute to prepare reports for the public at low costs.



HIGH
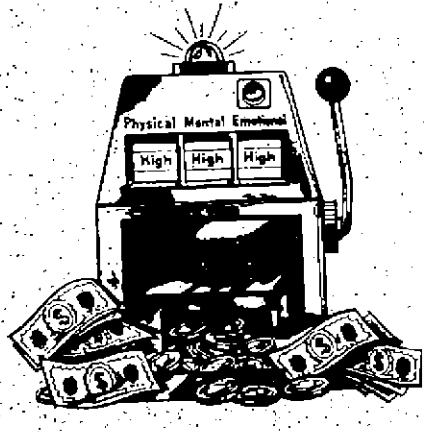
BINGO
3 Biorhythm Cycles
Physical (energy, sexual)
Mental (money, career)
Emotional (love, happiness)
★★★ Triple High Super Jackpot Day

At the moment of your birth, 3 Biorhythm Cycles begin to flow. They alternate between high cycles and recharge cycles throughout your entire life. Multi-high jackpot days occur when at least 2 cycles are on high at the same time. Relax day's occur when all three cycles are on recharge.

WHAT CAN BIORHYTHM DO FOR YOU?

With your personal 15 page, 3,000 word Biorhythm Analysis, all of the following benefits can be yours.

- Your luck can instantly improve. Your Analysis will point out your multi-high jackpot days. These lucky days are the best times for you to enter lotteries, drawings, raffles, play bingo, go to the races, play cards, or try any game of chance.
- Your Biorhythm Analysis can make you lucky at love. You'll be told when your Physical (sexual) and Emotional (romantic) high days will occur, so you can take full advantage of them. When you know ahead of time you'll be at your best, your self-confidence will improve. Members of the opposite sex will sense this and be attracted to you.
- You will reach a new level of self-understanding with Biorhythm. You will follow a more natural lifestyle and be completely comfortable in your new skin.
- Your analysis will help you perform better on the job and accellerate advancements. Profitable times (intellectual highs) to make career and investment decisions will be pinpointed.
- Your analysis will notify you when to be on the lookout for hidden talents which may be surfacing. It will then point out the best times to develop these talents.
- By knowing the best times to do things, and when to relax and recharge, you'll do everything better than you have before. You can use your Biorhythm Analysis to begin an all around program of self-improvement.



When your three Biorhythm Cycles hit high on exactly the same day, you experience a Triple High Super Jackpot Day.

Biorhythm has been thoroughly tested. Over 5,000 companies worldwide use Biorhythm. Many American airlines use Biorhythm. Biorhythm has been covered by most major newspapers, magazines, and has recently been featured on "To Tell The Truth" and "Monday Night Football."

HOW CAN YOU ORDER YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHM ANALYSIS?

If you are interested in immediately cashing in on all of the built-in luck, love, wealth, success and happiness you have coming to you, then simply do this:

Send the name, address, month, date, year and place of birth for each person on a piece of paper along with the $3.65 plus 30¢ postage and handling (cash, check or money order) for each one year Biorhythm Analysis. (365 days for 1¢ a day) If you have Mastercharge, BankAmericard or American Express, you may charge your purchase by sending the following information: A. name of credit card B. credit card number C. card expiration date.

Mail your orders to Biorhythm Research Institute, Dept. G–881, 401 Market Ave. N., Canton, Ohio 44750.

You take absolutely no risk when you order. Your Biorhythm Analysis is covered by a one year – 365 day – full money back guarantee. If your luck does not dramatically improve in all areas of your life, simply return your analysis. You will receive every penny of your money back – no questions asked.

The Institute's research project may not last much longer. But right this minute, you can have your personal one year Biorhythm Analysis individually prepared for just 1¢ a day! If you have any questions, call me, Paul Vanderwist, at (216) 455–1390. I'll be happy to talk with you.

An important message from Art Linkletter

Dear Friend,

This special, parchment-bound booklet is your invitation to apply for:

THE NATIONAL HOME HOSPITAL PLAN. National Home is currently paying over $50,000,000.00 a year (under both individual and group insurance plans) to families like yours.

Now, you too can collect every single day from the very first day of any covered hospitalization. And your benefits never run out. No matter how old you are...YOU AND YOUR FAMILY QUALIFY TO COLLECT CASH BENEFITS.

Our checks are made out direct to you or anyone you choose. In other words, YOU CONTROL this money. It can help pay those bills your basic group plans may not pay: doctor fees, lab tests, x-rays, nursing, outside specialists, prescriptions, etc. And you receive cash benefits regardless of any other plans you may have, including Medicare and Workmen's Compensation, and Blue Cross.

Hospital costs alone have DOUBLED since 1968. The American Hospital Association says so and reminds us that recently over 36 million Americans landed in the hospital for just one year. Nobody knows whose turn will be next.

That's why you need the National Home Hospital Plan. I urge you to apply for it today, at rates that are easy to afford.

Sincerely,

Art Linkletter

Member, Board of Directors with a financial interest in the company

P.S. After you've detached and mailed the brief application form, keep your booklet. It's a handsome, easy-to-read summary of National Home Protection.

Q. Billy Carter, the President's brother—is he going on TV with a Will Rogers-Bob Burns cracker-barrel type of series? I believe it's with CBS-TV, who's paying him $24,000 a week.—Lois Sawyer, Memphis, Tenn.

A. Billy Carter's agent is Tandy Rice of Top Billing, Inc., in Nashville, Tenn. Rice reports that Billy Carter is available at $5000 a day. "That's what he got when he threw out the ball to open the Oakland A's baseball season. That's what he got when he opened the Pima County Fair in Tucson. I've had about 200 offers for Billy's services, but to date I've had no offers which star him in a TV series. I'm sure they'll come."

Q. Richard Nixon reportedly will earn $1 million or more from the David Frost TV interviews. Warner Communications has supposedly given him a $2 million advance on his memoirs. Now there is talk that Warner's will make a full-length motion picture based on his life for which he will receive $5 million more. Is there any President of the U.S. for whom crime has paid more?—N.M., Burbank, Cal.

A. Nixon insists that technically he committed no crime. The House Judiciary Committee voted 38 to 0 that he obstructed justice. Special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski agrees. In terms of money, no U.S. President has made crime pay more generously.

INGEBORG DEDICHEN

MARIA CALLAS

JACKIE KENNEDY

Q. Of all the women in his life, with whom was the late Aristotle Onassis most happy? Surely not Jackie. Didn't he plan to divorce her?—L.F.L., Hempstead, N.Y.

A. Onassis was extremely happy with Ingeborg Dedichen, his Scandinavian mistress, and Maria Callas, the opera star. His marriage to Jacqueline Kennedy, according to some of his friends, was foundering, and he was in the market for a divorce at the time of his death.

Q. Harold Williams, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission—is he a millionaire? And if he is a millionaire, how can a guy who used to teach at UCLA become a millionaire?—Louis Schwartz, Culver City, Cal.

A. Harold Williams of UCLA and the Harvard Law School used to work for the Norton Simon conglomerate—which includes Hunt Foods, Canada Dry, the McCall Corporation and other companies. He exercised options on approximately 149,000 shares of Norton Simon, Inc., for $1.8 million. He then sold the shares on the market for $3.9 million. After making his fortune in the corporate world, Williams accepted a position as chairman of the UCLA Graduate School of Management. A Democratic supporter of Jimmy Carter, he was rewarded for his loyalty with the position of SEC chairman. He has since resigned from the boards of Phillips Petroleum, Norton Simon, the CNA Financial Corp. and Montgomery Street Income Securities.

Q. What was Shirley Temple doing in China a few weeks ago? And who invited her?—Millicent Smith, San Francisco.

A. Shirley Temple Black and her husband were invited for a friendly visit to China by the Chinese People's Institute of Foreign Affairs. In the Ford Administration the former actress was chief of protocol in the U.S. State Department.

Q. Film director Roman Polanski is charged with allegedly raping a 13-year-old girl. In the old days, didn't that happen in Hollywood every week and wasn't it the studio's job to buy off the girl or the girl's mother? Didn't that happen in the case of  and didn't 20th Century-Fox buy off the girl's mother in Long Beach, Cal.?—R. B., Seal Beach, Cal.

A. In the old Hollywood days, the studios would contribute generously to the political campaigns of local district attorneys. As a result, these officials would "take care" of studio stars who got in trouble. In the case you mention, the actor was charged with statutory rape, engaging in sexual relations with a 14-year-old girl. The mother complained to the district attorney, who promptly called the studio publicity chief. He offered to settle the case for $10,000. The mother agreed. Joseph Schenck, one of the founders of 20th Century, suggested that $10,000 be taken out of the salary of the guilty actor. The actor adamantly refused. "It happened on location," he explained, "and I did it on company time." The actor is today a veteran star. Director Polanski is under contract to no studio that can help him.

Q. I am puzzled as to the citizenship status of Elizabeth Taylor; whose latest husband, John Warner, wants to become U.S. Senator from Virginia. Is Liz Taylor an American citizen or is she not?—K.L., Warrenton, Va.

A. Elizabeth Taylor is not an American citizen at this time. She renounced her U.S. citizenship following one of her marriages to British actor Richard Burton. Currently she is living in Virginia on a foreign visitor's visa, has applied for permanent U.S. residency. After five years as a permanent resident she will be able to apply for naturalization and become a citizen of the U.S. again.

CHILDREN BEARING CHILDREN

A new epidemic is rampant in this country. It's known as children bearing children.

The Planned Parenthood Federation of America reports that unwanted teenage pregnancies have reached the epidemic stage.

More than one million teenaged girls become pregnant annually--one in every 10--and at least two-thirds of them wish they were not pregnant.

The current pregnancy rate in this country for girls aged 15 to 19 is higher than that in Japan, Sweden, West Germany, Israel, Norway, France, the Soviet Union and 14 other countries.

Of the pregnancies, 200,000 result in illegitimate births, 300,000 in abortion, 300,000 in births conceived after marriage and 100,000 in births legitimized by hasty marriage. The remainder terminate in miscarriage.

The report is entitled "Eleven Million Teenagers." It points out that the consequences of the high rate of adolescent pregnancies are risks to the health of the mother and child, abbreviated education of the mother, increased risk of welfare dependency, and a host of other social, psychological and economic ills.

TV BIOGRAPHIES

ABC-TV is in the market for biographies -- preferably of the famous dead. The network recently paid $100,000 for Kay Summersby's posthumous work "Past Forgetting," in which she revealed her wartime romance with General Eisenhower. The network plans a two-hour movie on Ike's life.

It also plans to star Peter Strauss of the "Rich Man, Poor Man" series in the life of Joseph Kennedy Jr., who was killed in World War II.

Young Joe was the first-born son of Joseph P. and Rose Kennedy, parents of the late President John F. Kennedy. It was young Joe who was being primed for the U.S. Presidency by his wealthy and powerful father. After Joe's plane exploded over the English Channel, the senior Kennedy transferred and projected all his ambitions onto Jack.

ABC-TV will probably title its movie "Young Joe, The Forgotten Kennedy." The script will be based on "The Lost Prince" by Hank Searles.

Television producers find that TV films based on the lives of such characters as Rudolph Valentino, Houdini, Howard Hughes, and others of that ilk are commercial, timeless, and can be run and re-run endlessly.

READ AND WRITE

High food prices are forcing many Americans back to the garden to grow some of their own vegetables.

If you're among that group, you may well care to invest in an excellent 49-page booklet, "Growing Vegetables in the Home Garden."

Prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, it tells how to condition soil, arrange the garden, and plant and care for 58 kinds of vegetables.

The booklet is available for 95¢ from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 110E, Pueblo, Col. 81009. Allow 4-6 weeks for delivery.

KIDNEY PATIENT WILLIAM SCHARF TOSSES A PAPAYA, THE FRUIT THAT HELPED HIM RECOVER.

AFRICAN FOLK MEDICINE

The papaya, a tropical fruit popular in hot climates, has great curative powers. African natives have long held this to be true. Now it's been proved.

A kidney transplant patient, William Scharf, 31, developed a postoperative infection at a London hospital. After antibiotics appeared to have failed, strips of papaya were laid across the infected wound, and Scharf recovered rapidly.

On March 18, Scharf's mother had donated her kidney for the transplant. There were complications--an infection set in following surgery, and the infection did not respond to the ordinary treatment.

A young doctor suggested that papaya be used. To find the fruit in March, relatives of Scharf scoured London markets, finally got some at Fortnum & Mason in Picadilly. The papayas were taken out to Dulwich Hospital, where strips of the fruit were placed on the wound for 48 hours. The smell generated by the fruit was so bad that the medical staff had to wear masks. But the primitive remedy worked.

The young British doctor, Christopher Rudge, had stumbled across the papaya cure in the South African bush while working at Cape Town's Groote Schuur Hospital, where Dr. Christiaan Barnard pioneered heart transplants.

"In Africa," he says, "I saw natives using it on dirty ulcers and infected wounds, and while I had no great interest in tribal medicine, I noticed that this one worked. Most probably it contains an enzyme which speeds the healing process."

Dr. Rudge says that he uses strips of papaya only in difficult cases which do not respond to antibiotics. But he believes the papaya can be used more frequently on the ulcerated sores of the elderly.

THRILLER

A true story of love, espionage, and murder is enthralling thousands of Norwegian newspaper readers.

Sylvia Raphael, a 39-year-old journalist and former Israeli intelligence agent, arrived in Norway four years ago. Under the cover name of Patricia Roxbourgh, she was assigned to assassinate Ali Hassan Salameh, a man allegedly responsible in part for the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

Sylvia's assassination plot went awry. Through a case of mistaken identity, an innocent Moroccan was killed. Sylvia and her five accomplices were arrested.

One of Norway's outstanding trial lawyers, Anneaus Schjodt, took over the defense, promptly fell in love with Sylvia. She was sentenced to 5½ years in jail, but Anneans Schjodt worked hard, and his client served only 22 months.

Immediately after her release, Sylvia Raphael married her lawyer, but her application for a residence permit was turned down. An appeal was filed, but, after consultation with the members of the Norwegian cabinet, the minister of justice declared Sylvia an "undesirable person." Sylvia and her famous lawyer-husband have left Norway and settled in South Africa.

WITH PEKING'S GREAT HALL OF THE PEOPLE AS BACKGROUND, WORK GOES ON ROUND CLOCK ON MAUSOLEUM WHERE MAO WILL LIE IN STATE, POSSIBLY IN GLASS COFFIN SHOWN BELOW.

MAO'S MAUSOLEUM

In Tien An Men Square, not far from the Great Hall of the People, thousands of Chinese in Peking are laboring day and night to erect a mausoleum in which will lie the body of Mao Tse-tung, who died Sept. 9, 1976.

When Chairman Hua Kuo-feng dug the first spade of dirt at the inaugural ceremony last October, no one announced when the mausoleum would be completed.

American visitors to Peking say they have heard Aug. 1 mentioned and Sept. 9, 1977, the anniversary of Mao's death.

The Chinese refuse to answer questions concerning the location or condition of Mao's body. Mao repudiated the cult of personality as did Chou En-lai, who asked that his body be cremated and scattered to the winds of China, which was done. If Mao made any such request in his will -- no one knows if he even left a will -- the Chinese authorities have disregarded it.

Like Lenin in Moscow, Mao Tse-tung is destined to lie in state in perpetuity, visible proof to future generations that such a man did indeed once live. His mausoleum has changed the skyline of Peking, and henceforth thousands of Chinese will line up and wait for hours to file past the block of crystal that houses his body.

Keeping Up... With Youth

Human Guinea Pigs

New Jersey is blessed with many pharmaceutical companies whose scientists are testing various drugs, ointments and medical compounds.

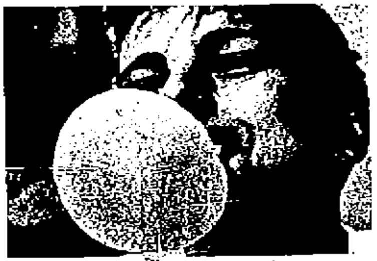
The state is also blessed with many educational institutions, some of whose students engage in what they call "pharmacological prostitution" and define as "selling our bodies for a few bucks to test out various drugs."

Student volunteers generally earn from $500 to $1000 a year. Most of them, particularly those from Princeton University, decline to reveal their names for fear of worrying their parents.

Many of the tests are conducted in the Princeton hospital and are carefully supervised by an institutional review committee that oversees the safety of the volunteers.

Volunteering as a "human guinea pig" has become fairly popular at Princeton, Rider, Rutgers and other institutions, and a pharmaceutical company like E.R. Squibb & Sons of Lawrenceville, N.J., is having no trouble in finding students who are willing to sell their bodies to augment their incomes.

Time was when most human guinea pigs were in penal institutions.



COMING TO RUSSIA NEXT YEAR

Soviet Gum

Chewing gum—one of life's little pleasures—has long been condemned by the Soviet government as a product of Western decadence.

But now this "uncouth" practice has been removed from the list of prohibitions in the Soviet Union. Instead of confiscating gum, the authorities have assigned two small factories to produce it on Soviet soil.

The plants in Estonia and Armenia will produce two tons of gum a year. A third plant will open in Moscow in 1978 and a fourth is planned for Leningrad. By 1980 the gum factories are to produce 7000 tons of the stuff annually—in time for the Olympic Games visitors.

Teenage Jobs

Acquiring a job while a teenager isn't easy because teenagers are restricted by law to certain kinds of employment.

For example, if you're 14 or 15, you can pump gas, bag groceries or clean dishes provided you don't work more than 3 hours on a school day or 18 hours in a school week. If it's a non-school day, you can only work 8 hours, and no more than 40 hours in a non-school week. And you aren't permitted to work before 7 a.m. or after 7 p.m. except from June 1 to Labor Day, when the evening hours are extended to 9 p.m.

There are exceptions to these rules. You can deliver newspapers, act in television, movies, radio and theatrical productions, gather evergreens and make evergreen wreaths, or work for your parents in a non-farm family business at any age.

A 14-year-old can be employed in any nonhazardous farm job outside of school hours.

At 16 you are eligible for any job except those the Secretary of Labor declares hazardous. And a 16-year-old can be employed at any time in any farm job, whether the work is hazardous or not.

At 18 you can be hired for any job at any time for unlimited hours, whether the work is hazardous or not.

Most teenage workers must be paid at least the minimum wage—now $2.30 an hour—and, in most cases, overtime pay. Some full-time students and apprentices may be paid less than the minimum under special certificates issued by the Department of Labor.

Sex Activity

The female teenagers of this nation are losing their virginity at earlier ages. They are engaging in sexual relations with more partners. And they are becoming interested more and more in the most effective contraceptive devices.

These are some of the findings of a major survey recently released by Profs. Melvin Zelnik and John F. Kanter of Johns Hopkins University.

A nationwide survey of 2200 never-married females aged 15 to 19 showed that the number of those sexually experienced had risen sharply since 1971. By age 19, 55 percent have engaged in sexual relations.

According to the researchers, most first sexual affairs occur in the home of the young woman or her partner. Sex activity peaks in the summer months.

". . . Some will see these data as cause to lament the passing of old ways," say Zelnik and Kanter. "Others will see the beginning stages of a happier, better-adjusted society. Some will argue that changes are inevitable and will propose various ways of dealing with them; others will advocate one scheme or another for turning the tide. Exhortations or simplistic tinkerings, however, can be expected to have little, if any, effect."

Miz Lillian Carter and grandson Chip met Indira Gandhi early this year in India, where the President's mom had once done a Peace Corps stint.

Miz Lillian Carter

Lady of Courage And Christianity

by Lloyd Shearer

WASHINGTON, D.C.

On Aug. 15, 1977, Miz Lillian Carter, born under the sign of Leo (proud, arrogant but with a sunny disposition), will reach her 79th birthday.

Miz Lillian is President Jimmy Carter's mother, and a more picturesque, publicized, quotable, and colorful Presidential mother has not appeared on the White House scene in decades.

Born Lilian Gordy in 1898 in Richland, Ga., Miz Lillian was one of eight children fathered by Jim Jack Gordy, postmaster of Richland for 32 years before he moved to Plains.

Jim Jack Gordy was a master politician who originated the idea of RFD (Rural Free Delivery of mail). He was a political operator who became a federal district revenue officer and eventually ended his days as the doorkeeper at the state capitol.

In 1923 his daughter Lillian, having become a registered nurse, went to work for the Wise brothers, two surgeons who ran a small hospital in Plains. It was there that she met and married Earl Carter, a conservative farmer shackled with the prejudices of his day. She, incredibly enough, was not.

Earl and Lillian Carter were married in September 1923 and had four children: Jimmy, Gloria, Ruth, and Billy—all characters in their own right.

When Earl Carter died in 1953, "Miz Lillian just couldn't adjust," explains her daughter Ruth. "Jimmy came home from the Navy with Rosalynn. They took over Daddy's business, and it was a very bad time for Mother. Even though she's a strong person, my father was her true strength. He was the boss, and he gave her the freedom to do what she wanted. But there wasn't very much to do in Plains—fish, go to church, play some bridge—and she had done it all. She had been a very community-minded person. But once Daddy died, her world seemed to come apart."

Miz Lillian thereupon took a job at Auburn University in Auburn, Ala., as a housemother at the Kappa Alpha fraternity. She remained there six years. According to daughter Ruth, "It served as a good opiate. There was constant activity. She was busy, busy, busy. She didn't have to think. But finally she quit.

"She moved down to south Georgia for two years, started a nursing home, hired all the staff, and as soon as she got that running, she became bored and returned home."

In an effort to help her mother, Ruth Carter Stapleton, by then an evangelist, invited Miz Lillian to various spiritual conferences and prayer meetings.

"I don't know how many meetings she attended," Ruth goes on, "but everybody at these meetings begins to know each other. And they were all really beginning to love Mother. At one particular seven-day meeting, a woman got sick—so sick she was completely bedridden. Mother stayed with her the whole time. Nobody tried to relieve Mother, who did all the nursing.

'Anyone not so religious?'

"Well, the seven-day meeting was coming to an end, and this sick woman, Mary, was well enough by then to go home. But Mother couldn't find anyone to help get this woman down to the car and out to the airport. So Mother got mad. She lost her temper, barged into this prayer meeting and said, 'Please excuse me for interrupting your prayers. But is there anyone in this camp who is not so religious that they will help me get this woman to the airport?' "

Miz Lillian is a salty, free-wheeling, free-speaking independent—but she is also a most religious woman, although, unlike her children, she is less forthcoming in discussing her "commitment to Christ."

But she did make one. It took place when she accompanied her daughter Ruth to a Tennessee meeting where Tommy Tyson, a Methodist evangelist, was preaching. During the proceedings, Tyson announced that he would make a special altar call.

"If there is anyone here," he declared, "who would be willing to commit their life completely to Christ—if you're willing to give up home, friends, family, material possessions, comfort, everything for God—I'm going to ask you to come and lay your life at the altar."

There was a moment of stillness. Then Miz Lillian turned to her daughter. "Let's go," she said. Ruth thought her mother was weary and wanted to leave. "You go on out if you want to," Ruth said, "but I want to stay for the rest of this." Whereupon Lillian Carter rose, edged by her daughter, strode down to the altar and, according to Ruth, "at 67 gave her life to Christ."

How sweet it is! Miz Lillian hugs son Jimmy at victory celebration in Plains.

Perplexed and puzzled

Later Miz Lillian wrote and said she was perplexed and puzzled about the commitment she had made. "I don't know how to give up my family or my friends or how to give up everything I own, to give up all my possessions. My great comfort is my bed."

Miz Lillian has always been extremely fond of her bed. But one night while watching TV, she saw a recruiting advertisement for the Peace Corps. She decided she would become a Peace Corps volunteer. That would be her commitment.

Convinced that she would never return to Georgia alive, she went about her house writing the names of her children on every piece of furniture. She was then sent to the University of Chicago for nine months of training, learned the Marathi dialect, and took off for India.

'Sneaked out of town'

Her children were enormously proud of her, but as one explains, "We couldn't even publicize it because Jimmy was then running for governor, and Georgia was generally against the Peace Corps. And Mother didn't want to hurt Jimmy's chances. So she sort of sneaked out of town, and we didn't see her for two years."

When Miz Lillian finished her stint with the Peace Corps, she was 70. She had lost 17 pounds, but she was happy to return to Plains, where her grandchildren had plastered the town with signs which read, "Welcome Home, Grandma."

She had no idea at the time that she would ever see India again, that her son Jimmy would ever be elected President of the United States, that she herself would become a colorful, outspoken, queenly character, and that the best years for her were yet to come.

When her son ran for the Presidency, she gave little counsel but advised him not to overemphasize the religious factor in his speeches. "I am not the dedicated Christian Jimmy is," she confesses. But the way she has lived her life proves Miz Lillian is.

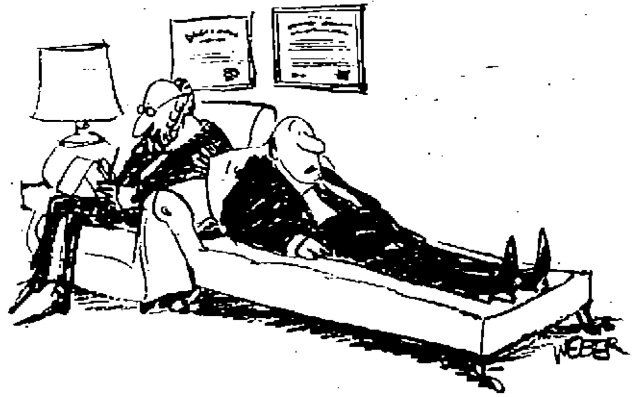
Observations™

Better buying. "Your Money's Worth in Foods," a government publication you can get for the price of a postcard, has a wealth of information on how to cut costs when shopping for meat, dairy products, fruits, vegetables, bread, and cereals Example: what's the better buy—boneless round steak at $1.80 a pound, bone-in pork loin roast at $1.50, or spare ribs at $1.39? Answer: the boneless round steak at $1.80 a pound. (You get more servings per pound from boneless cuts.) The free publication, prepared by the USDA Agricultural Research Service, can be obtained from: Consumer Information Center, General Services Administration, Department 637E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.



"I can't understand why I'm not happier. I have everything—a loving wife, three wonderful children, a beautiful home, a successful business, and a live-in accountant to handle all my government forms."

The people's choice. Early this year, the Roper Organization polled people on what they thought should be done to solve the nation's energy problems. Four out of five favored more offshore exploration for oil and gas, and a government program to develop solar energy. Most people also recommended more strip mining for coal, and increased development of nuclear energy. Those who were willing to make sacrifices for energy conservation were in the minority. Of course, both conservation and increased production are "musts" for the U.S. But with today's emphasis on the former, let's not forget about the latter.

Bottom of the barrel—revisited. On April 3, we said government agencies print enough forms each year to fill four million cubic feet of space. Well, one of our research scientists figured out that burning so much paper would provide the energy equivalent of 12 million gallons of gasoline. So, if all the cars in Washington ran on red tape, we know where a 20-day supply could be found.

Ray Marshall on Texas ranch with wife Pat, daughter Sarah and sons Chris and John. Not pictured are daughters Susie and Jill. At 48, he looks back at a professorship in labor studies and involvement with the labor movement. He faces a tough, complex task but sees his main job as jobs.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall

How He Plans to Meet the Job Challenge

by Alexander Cockburn & James Ridgeway

WASHINGTON, D.C.

When Ray Marshall was nominated as Secretary of Labor last December, he was not sure he wanted the post. He had a well-paid and prestigious professorship at the University of Texas, where he was in charge of a labor studies program. Wife Pat was happy on their little ranch near Austin; daughters Susie and Sarah and sons John and Chris were all going to schools in Austin; eldest daughter Jill was in California at Stanford University; all of them had mixed feelings about the appointment and the expensive move to Washington.

But after some agonizing, Marshall says, he just could not turn down the exciting prospect of serving his country under the man he had advised throughout the campaign. He admired Carter and felt he could work with him: "We have similar backgrounds. We see the world through the same kind of eyes."

Ray Marshall was born in 1928 in the Louisiana delta, fourth child of a cotton farmer. When he was 11 his mother died and his father moved elsewhere. The five children were packed off to the Mississippi Baptist Orphanage at Jackson. Ray stayed there four years, leaving at age 15 to work in a Jackson dental laboratory. Soon, however, he was in a Navy amphibious unit in the Pacific.

After the war he enrolled in Hinds Junior College in Mississippi, where he met Pat Williams. They wed in 1947.

Soon he became involved in politics. Marshall believed that the South had to change and could no longer put off coming to grips with the civil rights question. He hoped to run for office until a wise old teacher set him straight. "He told me," Marshall recalls with a smile, "that life was hard for most people in Mississippi and about the only fun they got was politics. They wanted to be entertained. And he said, 'You are going to worry them and therefore you are never going to get elected to anything.'...So I switched to economics."

'Scalawag and troublemaker'

Marshall may have abandoned the idea of a political career, but all through the 1950's in teaching jobs at Louisiana State University and the University of Mississippi he spoke out strongly for change at meetings across both states and came under fire from the White Citizens' Council as a "scalawag and troublemaker."

Over the years his academic concerns brought him into contact with the labor movement and world of politics. During the last decade he advised the Labor Department on manpower problems and worked for other federal and local agencies. Recently he chaired a task force on Southern Rural Development. Among the group's members were then Presidential aspirant Jimmy Carter and Juanita Kreps, now Secretary of Commerce. The AFL-CIO offered a top research job just before Carter asked Marshall to be Secretary of Labor.

Marshall's top priority is to put people to work—especially young people, who represent half the nation's unemployed—in public service jobs, "doing useful things." For example, the Administration's national young adult conservation program, modeled on the New Deal's Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930's, will hire 16- to 21-year-olds and employ them in national parks and forests performing much-needed conservation tasks. In urban areas young adults will be hired to do such things as insulate run-down buildings. Other teams, says Marshall, could be quickly trained to strip the lethal lead paint that poisons children in old buildings. Marshall sees 70,000 jobs under these programs, paid at the minimum wage for up to a year.

'Get private sector involved'

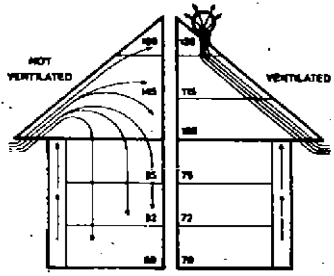
But by far the biggest project, aimed at close to half a million people, is the youth employment training program that will prepare them for jobs in private industry. The Labor Department will work together with the National Alliance of Businessmen and the Business Roundtable in trying to slot these young people into jobs in an expanding economy. "Our objective," Marshall says, "is to get the private sector involved and to get them to hire the people." Moreover, the Labor Department is discussing expansion of the apprenticeship system, training the unemployed to take such jobs as coal mining, expected to increase under the thrust of Carter's energy program, which will also offer new technical jobs all across the energy industry.

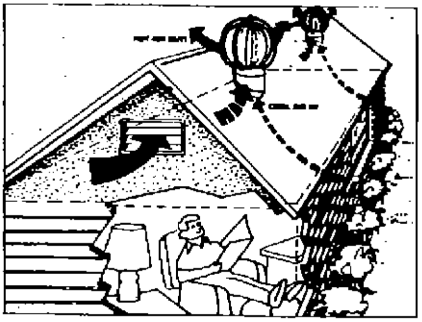
Along with his hopes for what he calls "linkage" between government training programs and private industry, Marshall anticipates the growth of public service jobs. "We could use aides to policemen," he says. "We could do a lot to help improve mail delivery. There are a lot of older people, particularly in rural places, who are stranded and never have a health worker visit them. Well, it would be very easy for us to supply health aides."

To those who say that government is inefficient and should not be in the job-supplying business Marshall concedes that "there has been a lot of waste, duplication and inefficiency in government. That's the reason the President's putting so much emphasis on reorganization and trying to improve the efficiency of the operation of government." But he has little patience with those who say that government efforts to reduce unemployment merely stoke inflation: "The cost of unemployment is very great . . . unemployment is inflationary. If you get money and are not producing, that's a lot more inflationary than getting money for producing."

continued.

Marshall enjoys raising beef cattle—of which he has 14—on the family's 78-acre ranch in Leander, 25 miles from Austin.





Energy-free comfort cooling.

Wisper Cool* turbine ventilators, a pair installed, cost less than $100* and require no power to operate.

*Much less if you install them yourself.

On a hot day the temperature in your attic can reach 160° or more, making your attic virtually a sauna which puts an additional strain on your home's cooling system.

Wisper Cool ventilators, installed on your roof, can reduce attic temperatures 30° to 50° without using any power. The wind does all the work.

Even the slightest breeze keeps Wisper Cool turning, exhausting the heat out through the roof, so it won't radiate down into your living area.

Your home stays cooler. You use your air conditioning less or not at all. You save energy. And you save money on your electric bills.

Wisper Cool is easy to install, or your dealer may install it for you at a small charge. And while you're there, ask him about Triangle Engineering's Whole House Fan, another good way to keep you cool that uses very little power.

Let the wind do your cooling free. And save energy. With Wisper Cool.

MARSHALL CONTINUED

Right from the start much of Marshall's time has been taken up with a problem that could shipwreck all the Administration's schemes, the crisis of what he calls "the undocumented worker." He is talking about the illegal aliens who sneak across the border from Mexico and other parts of Latin America. "We don't know exactly how many people are coming in," he says, "but we do know that we are catching almost a million each year. Our work force is growing by about 2 million a year.

"One thing we have to do is impose some penalty on the employer for hiring people who are here illegally," Marshall says. He supports Carter's idea of amnesty for illegal aliens already settled in the United States. A key problem is to devise some counterfeit-proof ID card that can be held by every worker.

Over the long term Marshall is concerned about the economic pressures tearing the American family apart. Instead of helping the family provide for its own security, he says, the government develops welfare systems that add to its fragmentation by "subsidizing broken families. We say that if the husband is there, we won't support you. If he'll leave, then we will. We have developed a system where, In many cases, if they go to work they make less than if they don't work. That's just a crazy system." He sees merit in "an incentive system which guarantees anybody who works more than anybody who doesn't. Then I'd develop a job system that guaranteed one good job for each member of the family."

President Jimmy Carter congratulates Marshall at the White House after he was sworn in as the Secretary of Labor.

As part of this he believes that opportunities should be made available to women. He is unworried about the explosion of women into the work force, but he is concerned about women who don't want to work but are forced to because their families lack sufficient Income.

There is no doubt of Marshall's commitment to put America back to work after the worst slump since the 1930's. But it is unclear just how far he will be able to go. Within the Cabinet itself and elsewhere in government he must contend with those who say that inflation is still the nation's worst enemy and that big employment spending programs will bring it back with a vengeance. Despite grumbling in the labor movement that the Carter Administration is not living up to its promises, close advisers to the President urge him to pay serious attention to the needs of business.

Ready access to Carter

Still Marshall feels he is getting his point across. He has ready access to the President himself, and those who have watched him in action are impressed. "Marshall has got a hell of a lot of respect up here," says an aide to the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee. "He's a team player, but he makes his own opinions felt."

Inside the Labor Department Marshall has begun to improve morale by letting his employees know he plans to work right alongside them. Already he has accompanied safety inspectors on a factory tour.

In the harsh world of politics Marshall's success will depend on how fast the economy is allowed to expand. What would he himself regard as failure at the end of four years?

"If by 1979 unemployment were 8 percent, like it was when we started; if the rate of inflation were above 6 percent, like it was when we started, well then I think we would have failed. If we had done nothing to improve the image and reality of the government, I think we would have failed. But I have faith that we won't."

How Anne Towey got Slender and stayed Slender.

Anne Towey is a long-legged, statuesque brunette—almost 5'9" tall. Her eyes are remarkably large and violet-colored. She's soft-spoken but she laughs more often now. Ever since she lost 93 pounds with the help of Slender* diet food. It took almost a year for Anne to go from 243 to 150 pounds but she had Slender and that quiet Aries determination.

"I'd been heavy since grade school," Anne says. "Just look at that picture I sent you. I always wore a sweater even in the summer, even over a short-sleeved dress!

"Before I started on Slender I ate constantly. I would eat my three meals a day but that wasn't what put the weight on. It was the constant in-between-meal snacks and I do mean constant...the 10 o'clock coffee break wasn't a coffee break; it was a buttered roll or bagel or a piece of cake. The two o'clock break was a package of cookies or a candy bar and a soda. The before-bedtime snack was ice cream with chocolate sauce or maybe a pizza.

"Well, one day I went shopping and I saw Slender and I thought, gee, if I take one for lunch maybe that will help. So I started with just lunch and in about 2 weeks I had lost 8 pounds! So I thought, my goodness, what if I had Slender for dinner what would it do? Before I knew it I was on three cans a day and sometimes I took the fourth can at night if I was hungry. When I went back to solid foods I ate mainly meat, vegetables, salads, that sort of thing. But what amazed me was when I was on Slender—and even though I'm a fanatic for sweets, for chocolate, ice cream, everything—as long as I stuck with the Slender I was all right. I didn't have that craving. It was gone and I no longer have it."

Anne, who went from a size 22½ to a size 14, has maintained her new weight for 2 years. She admits she backslides.

"If I gain 4 or 5 pounds," she says, "I go right back to Slender twice a day—breakfast and lunch and then I eat dinner."

Slender, it seems, changed more than Anne's figure. "I feel more confident now," she says, "and I think that reflects in a person's job performance. I'm a little more secure. Before, I would never cross anybody about anything—or question anybody about why they were doing something because I didn't have the self-confidence and I didn't want to draw attention to myself. Now I'm kind of my own person and I do what I feel is right.

"Look," she continues, "I tried them all. I tried Weight Watchers. I tried Metrecal. I tried grapefruit and Stillman's but Slender worked for me."

Anne Towey is yet another Slender success story. And it all started when she reached out for Slender at her market—and stayed with it. You can do the same. Just get Slender and get started. And know what? We'd sure like to hear from you.

Ask your doctor before starting any program of weight reduction.

MY FAVORITE jokes

by SUZY SUTTON

EDITOR'S NOTE: Suzy Sutton, who bills herself as "The Funny Feminist," was born in Philadelphia, "the City of Brotherly — and Sisterly — Love," she says. She went into show business at 16, then left to join the Air Force, where she worked as a cryptographer and starred in armed forces shows in the States and Labrador.

About those years she says, "Women are just as patriotic as men. I was a year underage and changed my birth certificate so I could join. And any woman who would add a year to her age has got to be patriotic! The only other time I wanted to be a year older was when I was pregnant."

Suzy has entertained at the Chez Paree in Chicago, Lake Club in Springfield, Ill., Latin Casino in Cherry Hill, N.J., Celebrity Room and Palumbo's in Philadelphia. She's often a keynote speaker at conventions and has her own commentary and news program on WIOQ-FM in Philadelphia.

Here are some of her jokes:

Who says women are not very mechanical? I just got the cat's tail out of the vacuum cleaner!

If I hear a cylinder knocking, I answer it. And if a manifold comes apart, I fold it up again. If an engine throws a rod, I throw it right back.

The smoker's guide to low-tar cigarettes.

With all the controversy about smoking going on, lots of smokers are deciding to switch to low-tar cigarettes.

But which low-tar cigarette should a switcher switch to?

Well, here's an easy guide to follow.

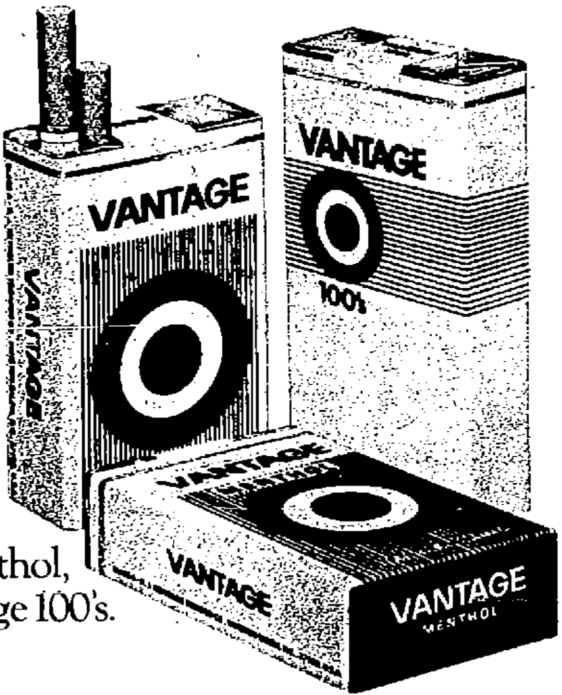
First, there are those so-called new cigarettes claiming scientific breakthrough and hyped-up flavor. Unfortunately there's nothing very revolutionary about the way they taste.

Next there are those brands that promise nothing but low-tar numbers. They're fine if low numbers are all you want. Because their scientific filters work so well, they filter out most of the taste.

Fortunately there is an alternative. Vantage: The low-tar cigarette that's different from all the others.

From the very beginning Vantage was designed to deliver flavor like a full-flavor cigarette with less tar than 95% of all cigarettes. So forget all those empty promises and go with the real flavor of Vantage.

It will probably turn out to be the only low-tar cigarette you'll enjoy.



Regular, Menthol, and new Vantage 100's.

In commemoration of the 200th Anniversary of the adoption of the first official flag of the United States, The Honor America Committee presents

THE GREAT FLAGS of America in gold on silver

An important message from Bob Hope

"A really wonderful collection for American families to own, to symbolize their faith in our freedom and independence . . . I'm proud to commend this collection of The Great Flags of America to you."

Bob Hope

A comprehensive collection of 24kt gold on .500 fine silver ingots depicting all 42 of the sovereign flags that have flown over our land.

A STRICTLY LIMITED EDITION. MINTED BY THE FRANKLIN MINT.
SUBSCRIPTION DEADLINE: FLAG DAY—JUNE 14, 1977.

TWO HUNDRED YEARS AGO, an event of lasting historic impact took place in Philadelphia. For there—on June 14, 1777—the Continental Congress of the new United States of America formally adopted our country's first official flag.

Now, on the occasion of this historic anniversary, the Honor America Committee is proud to present a definitive collection of commemorative ingots honoring The Great Flags of America in pure 24 karat gold electroplate on .500 fine silver.

These superb ingots will depict all 42 of the official and sovereign flags that have flown over our soil, from the first known exploration to the present day. And the collection is available to you now—but only until Flag Day of this year: June 14, 1977.

A comprehensive and authoritative collection

Minted in gleaming precious metal, this collection brings together the flags of those sovereign powers that were instrumental in opening up the American continent . . . the Continental Colors of the United Colonies . . . the flags of such republics as Texas and California, which later became part of the United States . . . the national flags of the Confederacy . . . and every official United States flag, from the original Stars and Stripes through today's fifty-star banner.

Included, for example, are the seventeenth-century flag of the Netherlands, which flew over Nieuw-Amsterdam before it became New York; Ponce de Leon's banner of old Spain, and fascinating historic sovereign flags of France, England, Sweden, Mexico and even Imperial Russia.

Here, too, are ingots portraying the proud flags of sovereignty of West Florida, Texas, California and Hawaii—each of which was an independent nation before it became part of the United States.

The original thirteen-star United States flag, proud banner of our nation's successful struggle for independence . . . the flag Francis Scott Key watched throughout the night when he wrote The Star Spangled Banner . . . the several flags of the Confederacy, matched by the contemporary Union flags which steadfastly continued to include stars for all eleven seceded states . . . and all the other official flags of the United States of America, which have marked our country's growth and development throughout its 200-year history.

Faithful to our flags in every detail

These magnificent ingots will be minted for the Honor America Committee by the craftsmen of The Franklin Mint, America's largest and foremost private mint. And the flags portrayed have all been authenticated by Dr. Whitney Smith—Director of the Flag Heritage Foundation and the nation's leading authority on flag history—who has also prepared the authoritative reference work that will accompany the collection.

As a result of this unique collaboration, these commemorative ingots are faithful to the flags they depict in every detail.

For example, the relative sizes and proportions of the stars in the U.S. flags—which have varied considerably during the past 200 years—are shown with fidelity. Even the sizes of the ingots themselves

What You Don't Know About Your Medicine Can Hurt You

by Nancy Chasen

One afternoon Ruth Desmond's husband mowed the lawn and then went to bed early, complaining of severe muscle pains. Aware that he was taking a diuretic (a fluid reducer) for his high blood pressure, Mrs. Desmond checked a volume on her desk, then poured a glass of tomato juice spiked with lemon and insisted that her husband drink it. That simple act may have saved his life.

Mrs. Desmond, 69, is president of the consumer-oriented Federation of Homemakers in Arlington, Va., and frequently attends Congressional hearings on drug safety. After her husband became ill, she recalled testimony several years earlier describing how diuretics drastically reduce potassium in the body; unless these minerals are replenished, the potassium loss can lead to muscle cramps, then loss of consciousness and, in rare cases, heart failure.

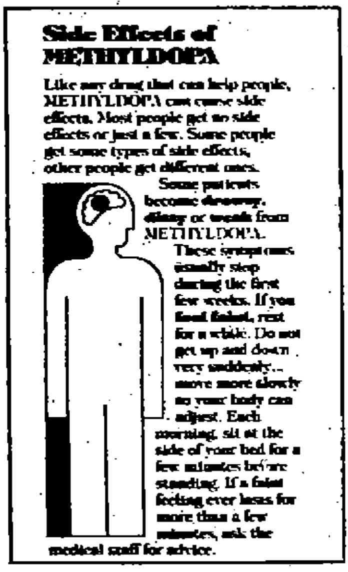
The next day Mrs. Desmond telephoned her husband's doctor, demanding to know why he hadn't warned her husband about these dangers. The doctor apologized and said that he had been so busy he had forgotten to tell his patient how to take his medication.

Unfortunately, this was not an isolated case—and a growing number of consumers, health professionals and government officials believe that something should be done about it.

Life-saving labels

Last year several consumer and women's organizations petitioned the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to regulate drug labeling to require that prescription drugs be accompanied by clearly written information about the nature of the drugs, their side effects and risks, what to do if these side effects occur and any essential warnings. This "patient labeling" information could be provided in separate package inserts available from the doctor or pharmacist or in the form of additional labeling on the drug container.

Says Joseph Onek, adviser to President Carter on health matters: "Increasingly, health care is being provided in clinics, emergency rooms and by private physicians too busy to explain in detail everything a patient should know about the drugs being prescribed."



Side Effects of METHYLDOPA

Like any drug that can help people, METHYLDOPA can cause side effects. Most people get no side effects or just a few. Some people get some types of side effects, other people get different ones.

Some patients become drowsy, dizzy or weak from METHYLDOPA. These symptoms usually stop during the first few weeks. If you feel faint, rest for a while. Do not get up and down very suddenly... move more slowly so your body can adjust. Each morning, sit at the side of your bed for a few minutes before standing. If a faint feeling ever lasts for more than a few minutes, ask the medical staff for advice.

Consumer groups are seeking to include such warnings with prescription drugs.

Former FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt agrees: "The problem is a lack of effective communication between busy physician and patient."

Dr. Donald Kennedy, new head of FDA, says, "Doctors I have talked with think well-informed patients are easier to deal with than those who don't ask any questions. On balance, improved information will improve the relationship between doctors and their patients.

"I do favor very strongly package labeling that allows patients to make as many of their own decisions as possible," he adds, "and I'm going to work very hard for that."

Consumers, physicians, pharmacists, drug manufacturers and FDA officials hope that if patient package labeling is adopted it will not only prevent tragedy but also improve health care. Dr. William R. Barclay, a vice president of the American Medical Association (AMA), says: "There have been therapeutic failures because a patient did not take the drug the way he should."

Patients taking antibiotics for infection, for example, often feel better after only a few days. Many erroneously decide that they don't need to continue taking the pills after the symptoms are gone. In fact, it is important to complete the full course of the prescription.

There is also agreement that package inserts would alert patients to serious side effects, which should be reported immediately to the doctor, and warn them of potentially hazardous interactions with other drugs, food or alcohol.

More controversial, however, is the view that the labeling should give patients information about long-term dangers associated with prescribed drugs so that they can decide, after talking with their doctors, whether they want to accept these risks.

Right to know

"The patient," says Dr. Schmidt, "has an obligation to know what he is taking, why he is taking it, what it will do to him if he takes it and what it will do if he doesn't, and to share in that decision with his doctor."

The AMA disagrees. In official comments to FDA, it said: "A patient who reads of the potentially adverse effects or contraindications or the stated purposes of the drug may not believe that he should take the prescribed drug for his condition. The physician, however, having the sole responsibility for treatment of his patient, must be free of restraining influences when he exercises his professional judgment in the best interest of his patient."

With 2400 generic-name prescription drugs on the market, FDA must set priorities for any labeling program.

Drugs which may be harmful to pregnant or nursing women and their offspring are likely to receive early attention, particularly where drug therapy is not essential.

In fact, FDA recently ordered manufacturers of Miltown, Equanil, Valium and Librium to warn physicians that women in their first three months of pregnancy should almost never take these drugs.

Also likely to receive priority are those widely prescribed drugs that may have serious side effects—diuretics and anticoagulants (blood thinners), for example.

Pill-takers warned

FDA has already required patient labeling of oral contraceptives and insulin. More recently FDA proposed that patient package labeling accompany estrogen drugs frequently prescribed for menopausal women.

Until full, easily understandable patient labeling of prescription drugs becomes a reality, patients may ask their doctors or pharmacists for more technically worded "physician package inserts." These inserts, prepared by drug manufacturers and approved by FDA, explain the purposes, contraindications, side effects and risks of all prescription drugs. If need be, you can find the inserts compiled in the Physicians' Desk Reference at public libraries.

Food From Space For the Elderly

by Pam Proctor

HOUSTON, TEX.

The nation's space scientists will come down to earth this week when they present to a Washington, D.C., conference on food an unusual plan to aid hungry older Americans.

"Meal System for the Elderly," as the plan is called, was developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) at the request of the Texas Governor's Committee on Aging. It consists of 21 well-balanced, individually packaged meals that need no refrigeration and can be mailed.

A successful four-month field test of the meal system was conducted last year in Texas among 168 senior citizens. And at this week's conference experts from government, social services and the food industry will explore ways of making the meals available to the general public.

The meals "aren't weird food," says Gary Primeaux, a NASA engineer who spearheaded the project at the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston. "We're not going to slough off something on the elderly that's unusual. After all, we didn't feed our astronauts strange food." About 30 percent of the food—including chili with meat, peaches, and cream-style corn—is identical to that eaten on the 1974 Skylab mission.

A typical menu includes chicken stew, tomato soup, rice, instant lemon pudding, and instant strawberry drink. The meal meets a minimum of one-third the daily recommended dietary allowance for a man 51 or older, says Ron Ritz, a staffer with the Martin Marietta Corp. who worked with NASA.

Flashy package

Each meal comes in a flashy red and yellow box imprinted with a picture of a space vehicle and a menu of the contents. Inside are shiny silver packages with freeze-dried foods such as "beef almondine" or cottage cheese which take no more cooking than adding a cup of hot or cold water. Standard canned foods like franks and beans come in single-serving containers and just need heating.

Although not for gourmets, the food was selected after extensive taste tests and preference surveys among the elderly and on the whole is actually quite good. The cottage cheese, for example, smells and tastes fresh. The pineapple is delicious. Beef almondine is a tasty copy of homemade stew. Chicken with rice, however, is mushy and unpleasantly spiced.

"You can't compare this to charcoal-broiled steak and baked potatoes," cautions Gary Primeaux, "but we can reach people with this who wouldn't have anything else."

The people who can be reached include some of the 6 million malnourished elderly Americans. Less than 300,000 take part in group hot lunch programs or home-delivered "meals-on-wheels," which typically do not operate on weekends and are not equipped to serve isolated areas.

Pearl Cusack, 65, of Houston, enjoys a well-balanced meal created by space scientists. The food is shelf-stable for two years, takes minutes to fix.

As a result, say experts like Peggy Sheeler, president of the National Association of Meal Programs, a variety of food alternatives are needed. "It isn't realistic to think that one approach is going to meet all the needs of the elderly," she says. "If we are to lessen the institutionalization of older people and make it possible for them to stay in their own homes longer, we have to be able to meet their total food needs—that means three meals a day, seven days a week.

"We're going to have to be farsighted enough to try a system like the NASA meals in order to be able to serve more people," she adds.

Monday hunger

The gaps in existing meal programs are starkly apparent to nutritionist Margaret Sharp, who handles group lunches five days a week for the Harris County Senior Citizens Project in Houston. "By golly, are they hungry on Mondays!" she says. "We try to have our heaviest meals then."

The reason, says Mrs. Sharp, is that, in addition to physical and financial limitations that make shopping and cooking a burden, many older persons who live alone have poor eating habits. "They will snack or open a can of something rather than go to the trouble of making a hot meal."

A good example is 78-year-old Oldrich Kuropata, whose wife died four years ago. Five days a week, Mr. Kuropata comes to the Larkin Street Community Center in Houston, where he gets a hot lunch for a small donation. But on weekends, when there is no hot meal program, he says, "usually I eat a piece of bread or maybe a piece of lunch meat. Cooking is the worst part for me. Women can get by better than a man if they live by themselves."

But Mr. Kuropata says his eating habits took a turn for the better when he participated in the test of the NASA meals. He was part of a group that took home two meals on weekends to supplement the hot lunch programs. Test participants in rural areas received weekly packages of seven meals through the mails or from volunteers.

During test in Texas, boxes containing seven meals were delivered to the elderly by volunteers or through mails.

More than three-quarters of the oldsters in the study liked the food "very much" and wanted to keep getting it, says Jurgen Schmandt, a professor of public affairs at the University of Texas who directed the project evaluation. "The poorer the person was economically and physically, the more favorably he responded to the NASA meals," says Schmandt. "Those that were a little better off said they would use the meals as an occasional standby."

For Christine Carruthers, a 69-year-old grandmother, the free meals were "a godsend." She cares for her ailing 90-year-old husband in a tiny white frame house and makes ends meet on his monthly $229 Social Security check. "During the energy crisis, I tried to save on gas, and these meals saved me time and money," she says. "I wouldn't mind getting them every weekend."

Helps sick friend

Mattie Broadnax, 70, shared a few packages with a sick friend because they were easy for her friend to fix. The meals were also a boon to Mrs. Broadnax, who gets by on $184 a month and has to pay someone to take her food shopping now that the NASA experiment is over.

As for the future of the meal system, it's up to industry and government to see that the food reaches the elderly, says Schmandt. Earlier this year, Sen. George McGovern introduced a bill which earmarks $800,000 for an additional three-state test of the program. Further government tests are opposed, however, by officials like Cleonice Tavani, executive director of the Federal Council on Aging.

"There's a need to market the meals now," she says. "That's where industry comes in."

At present the high cost of packaging presents a problem. NASA spent $3.90 per meal—primarily because the unusual single-serving cans in some meals had to be specially produced.

Marketing meals

But at least one company, Oregon Freeze Dry Foods, Inc., which supplied food to NASA, is planning to market shortly a NASA-like product called Easy Meal for under $2. They plan to sell directly to group meal programs at first but may eventually distribute to retail outlets. Potential uses for the meals go beyond the elderly to disaster relief, hospitals, and prisons.

Once the meals are on the market, government dollars will be needed to enable meals-on-wheels groups and group lunch programs to buy the product for larger numbers of elderly who may need them. Two bills now in Congress would boost federal funding for meal programs for the home-bound.

The outlook for getting healthy food in the stomachs of older persons is summed up by Cleo Tavani: "The ultimate nutrition assistance is money."

Slavery series to air 3 nights

By Bob Martin
TV-Radio Editor

A highly acclaimed miniseries on slavery, which aired on British television before "Roots" did in America, will be telecast on KTLA (Channel 5) on three consecutive evenings, beginning tonight.

"The Fight Against Slavery," a six-hour drama based on historical records, will air in two-hour segments starting at 6 p.m. today, 8 p.m. Monday and 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Authenticity is emphasized, and the British series was filmed entirely on location in Africa, England and the West Indies. All of the more than 60 characters are based on real people.

The drama traces the 84-year-long struggle in Great Britain to end slave trade and slavery.

It was written by Evan Jones, an Oxford-educated Jamaican who is a descendant of both slaves and slaveowners.

More than 100 TV stations in America will air the BBC-Time-Life production.

Marriage on rocks

Janssen, Angie Dickinson team in Monday night film

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

Michael and Marjorie Delaney were an attractive, successful and happy couple with two children, the kind of family you see in a home magazine.

At a surprise anniversary party, Michael recites a poem from their college days and gets a little loaded. Later, playing tennis, he keeps a pitcher of martinis handy.

Among the happy home life, the camaraderie of his chums, the first seeds of disaster are innocently planted. His drinking. Suggestions that his job as a scientist may be in jeopardy because of cutbacks in the aerospace industry.

Husband loses job, turns to bottle

By accident, Marjorie learns that her husband was fired two weeks earlier. The charade of going to the office over, he sleeps late, refuses to take the kids on a promised trip to the zoo and smashes the TV set when a commentator talks about the American dream.

"A Sensitive, Passionate Man" is the story of the disintegration of the lives of the Delaneys. The two-hour movie will be aired on NBC at 9 p.m. Monday.

David Janssen is Michael Delaney, a loving husband and father who sinks into alcoholism when his world collapses. "I won't take a lower job," he shouts. "I worked for the Ph.D. after my name."

Marjorie reminds him he's not the first man to lose a job, and he cries, "It's not a job! It's my [illegible]"

ANGIE DICKINSON and David Janssen star in the new television movie "A Sensitive, Passionate Man," on Ch. 4 at 9 p.m. Monday. The drama deals with the deterioration of a marriage after the husband loses his job and turns to alcoholism.

Janssen delivers a powerful performance, giving an air of unsettling reality to his torment and self destruction.

Angie Dickinson is Marjorie, struggling to hold their life together, frustrated by her inability to help her husband, humiliated by the alienation of their friends, demeaned by a sleazy divorce lawyer and a motel manager on [illegible] Dickinson as you've never seen her before and she is brilliant.

Angie 'brilliant' in role of wife

Todd Lookinland as their eldest son, whose humiliation turns to resentment, and Mariclare Costello as Marjorie's best friend, alienated by her [illegible] in excellent performances.

It is a powerhouse production, written by Rita Lakin from the novel by Barbara Mahoney and directed by John Newland. Miss Lakin has written a literate script that allows the characters to emerge as flesh-and-blood human beings, and Newland has a fine hand on the direction as he builds tension between the facade of the happy home and lurking [illegible]

Bad guy of movies returns to tube

Lee Van Cleef a hero in film tonight

By Jay Sharbutt
AP Television Writer

After a 12-year absence, Lee Van Cleef, the lean, hard-eyed Old West gunman of "High Noon" and later Clint Eastwood's "For a Few Dollars More," is returning to television.

Irony attends his return. He just finished playing a modern hit man in a movie filmed in Spain. Now, he'll play a modern U.S. marshal guarding an ex-hit man who is testifying against a syndicate boss.

Van Cleef's show, airing tonight at 9:30 on NBC, is a series pilot called "Nowhere to Hide." He plays Ike Scanlon, protector of an informant to whom the mob wishes to render a .357 magnum salute.

LEE VAN CLEEF (right) is a U.S. marshal assigned to protect a witness testifying against a syndicate boss, and Charlie Robinson is his deputy, in the TV movie "Nowhere to Hide" at 9:30 tonight, Ch. 4.

IT'S A STRANGE role for the man who, because of some 60 movies and 150 TV shows, is well-known as one of acting's most sinister villains. It's even stranger to find the villain a funny, easy-going character.

Interviewed at his tree-lined home in suburban Tarzana, he popped open a can of beer for his visitor, lit a cigarette and then denied that Sunday's show is the first time he's represented the forces of decency.

"Naw, not really," chortled the 51-year-old native of Sommerville, N.J., who started acting in the early 1950s in the road company of "Mister Roberts," which led to his big film break in "High Noon."

"Back in the Fifties I did a couple of good guys," he insisted. After thinking hard, he cited a "Medic" episode where he played a doctor.

But Van Cleef, who at home does such unvillainous things as paint, play guitar and sing — surprisingly well — in the Johnny Cash manner, admits his Bad Guy image does cause him woe at times.

WHEN ASKED if, while taking the waters in a bar . . .

"Do guys come up and say, 'Are you as tough as you play in the movies?' " he said, posing the question in a low, tough-guy voice. He sighed and looked at his knuckles.

"I'm counting a couple busted hands out of that." Then the actor, who at 6 feet 2 and 200 pounds appears fit enough to hunt bears with a toothpick, started laughing.

"The last one I had was in a bar down on Sunset Boulevard and a Texan about 6 feet 5 was pullin' that jazz. I knew what was happening, so I accidentally knocked my change off the bar.

"Then I went down to pick it up, came up and 'Boom!' Almost tore his head off. So they carried him out the back and I walked out the front, adios."

But Van Cleef, a mild-mannered man with a hipster's sense of humor, emphasized he tries to avoid such situations, even though they're part of the hazards of playing the baddie so often in films.

HE ALSO SAID he specifically took the part of Scanlon, the lawman, in Sunday's show "as a change from being the bad guy." And now he even wants to give situation comedy a shot.

Karen Ann Quinlan drama filmed

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

He's not concerned with how it began. He's unsure how it will end. But the middle: the fight, the heartbreak, the frustration. That was the stuff of drama.

"I saw it as a story of frustration and limitations. Restrictions that society has no right to place on us. It was a story of a fight — the kind of fight that comes out of a great love."

Writer-producer Hal Sitowitz was talking about "In the Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan," based on the year-long court fight her parents waged for her right to die after she lapsed into a coma on April 15, 1975, reportedly after taking tranquilizers and alcohol at a party. He recently completed production for showing this fall on NBC.

HE SAT in the office he had just moved into at CBS Studio Center. It still had a bare look about it, but cast pictures from his past productions hung on the walls: "The Rookies," "Thirty-Six Hours in the Life of God," "Little Ladies of the Night," as well as pictures of Brian Keith and Piper Laurie, who play Joseph and Julia Quinlan.

The Quinlans sought to remove their daughter from a respirator that was believed keeping her in a "persistent vegetative state." The New Jersey Supreme Court ruled in March 1976 that Miss Quinlan had a right to die, based on her constitutional right to privacy.

She gradually was weaned from the respirator but did not die. Miss Quinlan, now 23, is comatose at a nursing home in Morris Plains, N.J., where officials say they will not take "aggressive action" if her condition deteriorates. That is, she will be allowed to die.

"THE FILM is not about Karen," said Sitowitz. "It's a story of Joe and Julie and the tremendous pressures brought upon them by the legal world, the medical world and the news world to some extent.

"My feeling was not to be tearful."

Sitowitz flew to New Jersey and met for four days with the Quinlans and their attorney, Paul Armstrong. "I tied in very quickly with these people. I was able to read more than they were telling me. I got into their heads very quickly. I left New Jersey feeling I owed these people the kind of story they deserved."

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

MORMON DOCTRINE vs. MORMON DOCTRINE

NEW TESTAMENT TEXT IS COMPLETE ACCORDING TO MORMONS

Last week we noted that the New Testament contains all things that pertain to life and godliness (2 Pet.1:3, and many other passages that we cited). However the Book of Mormon itself insists that ". . . many parts which are plain and most precious; and also many covenants of the Lord . . ." have been taken away from the Bible (See 1 Nephi 13:26-28 and 2 Nephi 29:3,6,10—Salt Lake City edition). But, the New Testament claims for itself, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever" (1 Pet.1:23). God said, through the apostle Peter, that His word is incorruptible and that it will abide for ever, the Book of Mormon notwithstanding. Corroborative testimony can be produced from a textural scholar, who is a Mormon himself, to the effect that the New Testament is correct.

Dr. Richard Lloyd Anderson, professor of History and Scripture at Brigham Young University said: "In tracing the history of manuscript investigation, the student finds that two great facts emerge. First, no new manuscript discovery has produced serious differences in the essential story. This survey has disclosed the leading textual controversies, and together they would be well within one percent of the text. Stated differently, all manuscripts agree on the essential correctness of 99% of the verses in the New Testament. The events and great truths contained there are agreed upon by all major manuscripts of the New Testament.

"The second great fact that such a survey demonstrates is the progress that has placed the world in possession of manuscripts very near the time of their writing . . ."

(At this point, Dr. Anderson quoted from Sir Frederic Kenyon, a firm believer in the accuracy of the present New Testament text. — JTS) Dr. Anderson then continued:

"We are now much closer to the time of the writing of some of the New Testament books than when Kenyon made the forgoing confident appraisal, and we possess other confirming manuscripts. There is more reason today, then, to agree with him that we possess the New Testament 'in substantial integrity' and to underline that the 'variations of text are so entirely questions of detail, not of essential substance." From Papers of the Fourteenth Annual Symposium on the Archaeology of the Scriptures, Presented April 13, 1963, pages 57 and 58.
